19TH YEAR. NO. 99. EAST LIVERPOOL, O., SATURDAY, APRIL 26, 1902—SIXTEEN PAGES. TWO CENTS.

BIG COMBINATION IS BEING FORMED

Flint, Spar and Clay Manufacturers Trust Said to Have Been Effected.

TO CONTROL THE MARKET

For Materials Necessary in the Pottery Business—One of the Interested Parties Says It Is Not a Combine, But a New Company.

A mammoth combination of flint and spar and clay manufacturers promoted by William S. Hancock, Barker Gummere, Jr., and Hugh H. Hamill, of Trenton, will hereafter control the market of the country for these materials under the corporation name of Golding & Son's Co.

The Eureka Flint & Spar company will undoubtedly become a part of the big trust. The mines of this company are solely controlled by the John E. Thropp Sons company and are located in Maine, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The new company proposes to absolutely conduct the market for flint, spar and clays, all necessary in the pottery business, and is gradually gobbling up the substantial plants now in operation, according to Trenton advices.

The Golding Sons' company is capitalized at $1,000,000 and is backed largely by capitalists who are said to be directly interested in the Interstate Telephone company and the South Jersey Gas Electric & Traction company, of Trenton.

The deal to take in the Thropps has not yet culminated, though overtures are being made.

Former State Comptroller William S. Hancock, of Trenton, denies the report sof a combination.

INCIDENT CLOSED

Matter of the Junior Mechanics' Treasurer's Alleged Delinquency Settled.

It now transpires that the settlement between the trustees of the Jr. Mechanics and its treasurer was made several days ago. There was no meeting of the trustees on Thursday night. The interview with one of the trustees which was published in last night's issue was misleading.

Officers of the lodge are at a loss to know how the information concerning the transaction reached the public ear, and have been busy for several days trying to locate the leak. They say, however, that a settlement has been effected, and so far as the relations between the organization and its treasurer are concerned, the incident is closed and the affair has been arranged to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

NO STRIKE ON

A Small Dispute at the Brunt Pottery Over Gilders' Pay.

There is a dispute at the Brunt pottery in the decorating department, and it is announced that a committee representing local No. 19 has been appointed to investigate the matter. The officials of the local claim that the gilders had been receiving nine cents a dozen for tracing, and that the company only wanted to pay eight cents a dozen. Mr. Henderson, of the Brunt company, this morning stated that there was no strike on, and that three girls quit work because the firm refused to pay an increase for certain work, and that no reduction had been made on the part of the firm. All other departments in this shop are at work.

IMPORTANT MEETING

TO BE HELD BY STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYES.

Many Matters of Interest to Come Up at the Gathering Tonight.

What gives promise of being one of the most important meetings that has been held by division No. 52, Amalgamated Association Street Railway Employes of America in this city, will be held in their new hall in the Larkins & Ferguson building in the East End this evening, and it is also expected that every member of the division will be present. This will be the last regular meeting before the first of the month, the date set at the last meeting for the East Liverpool Street Railway company to sign the new scale which was adopted by the employes.

Within the past few days officials of the division have written National President W. D. Mahon, of Detroit, Mich., advising him of the action of the local division in presenting a new scale to the company, and an invitation was extended to that gentleman to come to this city and attend the meeting to be held this evening. While he has not been heard from it is expected that such arrangements can be made at headquarters as will permit him to come here. If, however, it is found that Mr. Mahon cannot come, it is likely that R. L. Reeves, general secretary of the executive board of the national association, will be at the meeting, although this is one matter that has not been finally decided upon.

So far it is said the members of this division have an inclination to remain by the scale which calls for 22 cents an hour. However, there is a possibility that another conference will be held with the officials of the company and the executive board of the street railway division between now and next Wednesday, when some definite understanding may be reached.

During the past week, it is alleged, that the management of the street railway company has interviewed a number of the older employes of the raod with a view of ascertaining if possible the feeling of the men on the 22 cent proposition.

Although the result of these interviews have not been made public, it is generally understood that the employes are a unit in standing firm for their demands.

UNDER A PEACE BOND

Richard Burrows, Jr., Is Placed, on Complaint of His Father.

Richard Burrows, Jr., after eluding Constable Powell for over a week, walked into Justice McCarron's office this morning and answered to a complaint made by his father, Richard Burrows, Sr. The latter complained that his boy had threatened to maliciously assault him and for that reason he wanted him locked up. The squire released Richard, Jr., on a $300 peace bond.

Sewer Pipe Company Election.

At a meeting in Pittsburg of the Ohio River Sewer Pipe company the following officers were chosen: President, J. C. Bigger; vice president and secretary, Charles M. Stratton; treasurer, Harper Stratton; general manager, W. B. Stratton; superintendents, J. S. Casey and Harper Stratton. The factory of the company is located at Empire, and is being operated very successfully, being independent of the combine.

NEED OF HUSTLE TO GET THROUGH

Legislators Must Work Hard If They Adjourn on May 5.

LONGEST SESSION IN YEARS

Would Be Held Should the Legislature Keep at Work Beyond That Date. Matters of Interest Under Consideration at the Capital.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, April 26.—Representative Buell, of Columbiana, doubts very much that the legislature will adjourn on May 5, as provided for in the house resolution. The senate and the house are at odds on a number of important propositions, and the former body may take a notion not to concur in the time fixed by the house for final adjournment. The house refused to accept the senate amendments to the Archer game bill and the senate refused to agree to the house amendment to the Patterson redistricting bill, committees from both bodies having conferred on both propositions.

The general appropriation bills will come up for action in the senate next week and just what will be done to them is a matter of conjecture. There is a lurking suspicion that one or two senators, who are ill-humored over the refusal of the house to make laws of their pet measures will attempt to use the pruning knife on a number of appropriations.

If an adjournment is to be taken on the time fixed by the house the legislators will have to crowd more work into the coming week than has been accomplished in any preceding week of the session. The prolongation of the session till May 12 would make the longest held in years.

The house yesterday passed bills making it unlawful for concerns to use the union label on goods unless union labor is employed; to prevent the distribution and delivery of immoral literature; holding free from fraud the purchaser of property from an insolvent, who sells to defraud creditors; making appropriations for normal school departments at Miami and Ohio universities.

Representative Buell has been endeavoring to learn from the Mansfield reformatory whether there was truth in the rumor that Homer Knowles, of Salem, had been paroled, but he has been unable to do so. The published list of paroles granted did not contain Knowles' name, and it has been authoritatively stated at the governor's office that he has not been pardoned. About a year ago the state board of pardons rejected an application for a pardon for Knowles.

Upon recommendation of Senator Connell, John Mundy, of Summitville, has been appointed special agent for teh humane society of Ohio, which has headquarters at Cincinnati.

Miss Mary E. Smith and Miss Noble, of Wellsvlle, were members of the Ohio delegation which left Columbus in a special train Friday for Los Angeles, Cal., to attend the convention of the National Federation of Women's clubs, meeting there May 2 to 9.

A traveling library has been sent from the state library to Paul Kugler, librarian of the guild of the Grace Lutheran church at Columbiana. The library consists of 33 volumes.

Columbiana county was represented at the Royal Arcanum convention in this city this week by Messrs. C. H. Blazier, of East Liverpool, and Joseph Chain, of Salem.

A BOOM AT SALINEVILLE

Work on the New Pottery Attracts Many New Residents to the Town.

Work on the new plant of the Dresden China company at Salineville is progressing rapidly at the present time. The stone and foundation work has nearly been completed and the construction work will begin at once. Many families have arrived in Salineville since the new plant was assured and houses have now become very scarce.

From all appearances the little coal town is on the boom and the indications are that it will become quite an important town in the future.

NEW DIFFICULTIES ARE IN THE WAY

Rumored Pottery Combinations Still Far From Becoming a Reality.

AMERICAN POTTERY PLAN

As Well as the Akron And Chicago Men's Deals Are Still Hanging Fire. President Moreland, of the Union, Talks of the Projected Combine.

President A. M. Moreland and Vice President Frank W. Fowler, of the Union Potteries company, of Pittsburg, accompanied by Thomas Price, of Toronto, general manager of the Chelsea and Union plants, were in this city practically all day yesterday. This was the first visit of President Moreland to this city since January, which was soon after the Union Potteries company secured control of the local plant. Both gentlemen were on a general tour of inspection, and after the inspection of the Union had been completed a visit to the Chelsea at New Cumberland was made.

It was generally thought that the visit of Mr. Moreland to this city was in a measure in connection with the American Potteries company, but this was quite incorrect. There is very little doing now as far as the American Potteries company is concerned, and matters with that end of the business seem just at present very quiet. How long they will remain in such a state is up to eastern parties, who have so far been the prime movers in the advancement of the scheme to formulate a combination.

It has been learned from an authority that is absolutely reliable that so far as the Union Potteries company or Mr. Moreland personally was concerned there was never a time when this propostion was advanced either by the Union company or Mr. Moreland.

The first steps in taking up the cahrter of the old American Potteries company originated in the province of T. W. Tapscott, who is known in this city. So far as John R. Dos Passos was concerned, it is said that he had nothing whatever to do with the deal. When officials of the Union Potteries company were advised of the action of Mr. Tapscott the whole plan was laid bare to Mr. Moreland, and it required about 20 minutes to sign papers, and further than this the officials of the Union Potteries company have had nothing to do with the scheme.

Why the deal had not been closed is more than some of the parties interested in the new move would like to know. It has been said that it was the proposition that all potteries enter the combination free from debt. This was possible with the Union company, of this city, but whether it was the same with the eastern companies cannot be told. In fact, announcement has been made that all the plants should be free from indebtedness when they entered the American Potteries company, and the general impression is that some of the eastern concerns were not in a position where this could be done. There is ample eastern capital waiting to finance the scheme, although to form a combination of the pottery industry will be one of the hardest trials ever undertaken by man. The "trust" in the potteries has been given a black eye, and although this was several years ago, the mark is still visible. This was on account of the first promoters constantly increasing the capital stock, until it was practically nothing but water.

Business with the American Potteries Co. is at a standstill. The proposition of the Chicago gentlemen is also quiet, at least for the present. The idea to form a combination of the Akron potteries has been quiet during the past few days, but the general impression is that a combination of the pottery industry is bound to come sooner or later. The outcome of the present state of affairs will be watched with interest.

"There is only one reason why a combination has not been formed before this," said a prominent manufacturer to a News Review reporter today. "Whenever this subject has been brought up, each manufacturer wants as much for his plant as another. No matter how old his plant may be a like amount to that to be given to a new pottery is expected by the older manufacturer. I am sure this company will never enter a combination on such a basis," said the gentleman, who is connected with one of the newer plants. "There is reason in all thngs, and the most conservative thought is to be given this matter by the manufacturer who thinks his plant is worth as much as another. He may also make the claim that while his pottery is an old one, it is making as much money as the newer ones, and for that he reason he should be treated accordingly."

The Akron Journal in speaking of the proposition of Messrs. Irwin and Trainer, of Chicago, to form a combination, remarks: "The officials of the local companies claim that they have not heard of the deal, but allow that such a thing as a big pottery combination is shortly to become an actuality. The project has been much mooted, but hitherto no proposition acceptable to a majority of the manufacturers has been placed before them."

Official announcement is made that the first ware in the new addition to the Laughlin plant in the East End, will be made early in May. In fact, the company will stretch a point and have the plant started in about two weeks. At the start there will be four jiggers put on and probably five or six pressers. Others would be started, it is said, but there is not a sufficient number of moulds ready to put on a larger force.

A large number of applications have been received by the management of the Laughlin company for positions at its No. 3 plant. Of course more applications have been filed than there are positions, and it is said to be the intention of the management to pick the cream of the applicants. No information can be obtained as to who will become the heads of the several edpartments of the new shop.

Ted Merriman, a warehouseman at the Chetwynd plant, who has been unable to work for several weeks on account of illness, is now suffering with dropsy. It is said that he is very feeble.

A special meeting of the finishers has been called for this evening, and it is expected the scale of the jigger-

FOR COMMANDER

GARFIELD CAMP, S. OF V., NAMES J. J. ROSE.

Local Members Are Entitled to Recognition, and Expect to Land the Prize.

At the last meeting of the local camp Sons of Veterans a movement was started, which, from the enthusiasm manifested by the membership, can but result in the state headquarters of the order being brought to this city in 1903.

The Ohio division has never possessed a camp that has been more faithful, nor one which has given more loyal support to her officers and staff. In all the years of its existence Garfield camp No. 3 has had but one representative in the office of commander of the state organization. F. W. Myers, now of Moundsville, but who retains his membership in the East Liverpool camp, was the first colonel of the division, his election occurring early in the 80's. The camp has been prominently identified with every important move made by the state body, and has been represented at every annual encampment for the past 20 years.

The members now think it is time they should once more have the honor of a position as commander, and the boom will be started at the Lancaster encampment to be held next month. The name of John J. Rose, one of the oldest and most faithful workers in the ranks of No. 3, has been taken up and he will land the office in 1903.

Capt. C. H. A. Palmer of Cleveland, has been slated for the position this year, and while there may be some opposition, it will not be of a formidable character.

Many Matters of Interest to Come Up at the Gathering Tonight.

It has been said that it was the proposition that all potteries enter the combination free from debt. This was possible with the Union company, of this city, but whether it was the same with the eastern companies cannot be told. In fact, announcement has been made that all the plants should be free from indebtedness when they entered the American Potteries company, and the general impression is that some of the eastern concerns were not in a position where this could be done. There is ample eastern capital waiting to finance the scheme, although to form a combination of the pottery industry will be one of the hardest trials ever undertaken by man. The "trust" in the potteries has been given a black eye, and although this was several years ago, the mark is still visible. This was on account of the first promoters constantly increasing the capital stock, until it was practically nothing but water.

Business with the American Potteries Co. is at a standstill. The proposition of the Chicago gentlemen is also quiet, at least for the present. The idea to form a combination of the Akron potteries has been quiet during the past few days, but the general impression is that a combination of the pottery industry is bound to come sooner or later. The outcome of the present state of affairs will be watched with interest.

"There is only one reason why a combination has not been formed before this," said a prominent manufacturer to a News Review reporter today. "Whenever this subject has been brought up, each manufacturer wants as much for his plant as another. No matter how old his plant may be a like amount to that to be given to a new pottery is expected by the older manufacturer. I am sure this company will never enter a combination on such a basis," said the gentleman, who is connected with one of the newer plants. "There is reason in all thngs, and the most conservative thought is to be given this matter by the manufacturer who thinks his plant is worth as much as another. He may also make the claim that while his pottery is an old one, it is making as much money as the newer ones, and for that he reason he should be treated accordingly."

The Akron Journal in speaking of the proposition of Messrs. Irwin and Trainer, of Chicago, to form a combination, remarks: "The officials of the local companies claim that they have not heard of the deal, but allow that such a thing as a big pottery combination is shortly to become an actuality. The project has been much mooted, but hitherto no proposition acceptable to a majority of the manufacturers has been placed before them."

Official announcement is made that the first ware in the new addition to the Laughlin plant in the East End, will be made early in May. In fact, the company will stretch a point and have the plant started in about two weeks. At the start there will be four jiggers put on and probably five or six pressers. Others would be started, it is said, but there is not a sufficient number of moulds ready to put on a larger force.

A large number of applications have been received by the management of the Laughlin company for positions at its No. 3 plant. Of course more applications have been filed than there are positions, and it is said to be the intention of the management to pick the cream of the applicants. No information can be obtained as to who will become the heads of the several edpartments of the new shop.

Ted Merriman, a warehouseman at the Chetwynd plant, who has been unable to work for several weeks on account of illness, is now suffering with dropsy. It is said that he is very feeble.

A special meeting of the finishers has been called for this evening, and it is expected the scale of the jigger-

FOR COMMANDER

GARFIELD CAMP, S. OF V., NAMES J. J. ROSE.

Local Members Are Entitled to Recognition, and Expect to Land the Prize.

At the last meeting of the local camp Sons of Veterans a movement was started, which, from the enthusiasm manifested by the membership, can but result in the state headquarters of the order being brought to this city in 1903.

The Ohio division has never possessed a camp that has been more faithful, nor one which has given more loyal support to her officers and staff. In all the years of its existence Garfield camp No. 3 has had but one representative in the office of commander of the state organization. F. W. Myers, now of Moundsville, but who retains his membership in the East Liverpool camp, was the first colonel of the division, his election occurring early in the 80's. The camp has been prominently identified with every important move made by the state body, and has been represented at every annual encampment for the past 20 years.

The members now think it is time they should once more have the honor of a position as commander, and the boom will be started at the Lancaster encampment to be held next month. The name of John J. Rose, one of the oldest and most faithful workers in the ranks of No. 3, has been taken up and he will land the office in 1903.

Capt. C. H. A. Palmer of Cleveland, has been slated for the position this year, and while there may be some opposition, it will not be of a formidable character.

A GREAT GROWTH IN PAST TEN YEARS

Census Figures Which Give Ohio First Rank in Pottery Industry.

EAST LIVERPOOL'S TOTAL

Is 49 Per Cent of All the White And Semi-Vitreous Porcelain Produced in the County—Other Clay Industries in Ohio.

A recent election bulletin, from which the News Review published extracts on Thursday, says regarding Ohio manufactures:

There were 248 establishments engaged in the manufacture of pottery, terra cotta, and fire clay products in 1900, with 11,870 wage earners, the products valued at $11,851,225. In 1890 there were 125 establishments, 4,606 wage earners, and products valued at $5,047,501. The increase in the value of products during the decade was $6,803,724, or 134.8 per cent. The pottery products were valued at $6,994,805, and the terra cotta, fire and other clay products at $4,843,615. Ohio rose from second to first rank in this industry from 1890 to 1900. In the latter year the total value of its pottery, terra cotta, and fire clay products constituted 26.8 per cent of the total for the United States. The rank of Ohio in this industry is due very largely to the development of its extensive deposits of suitable clays. The value of special technical training in this line is appreciated, and a department of ceramics was established in the State University at Columbus in 1894.

The manufacture of white ware, the mast important of the several branches of the industry, is carried on chiefly in the city of East Liverpool, on the Ohio river, in the eastern part of the state. This city is unique in the United States in its industrial activity is confined almost entirely to the manufacture of pottery. Of the 4,473 wage earners employed in all industries in this city in 1900, 3,908, or 87.4 per cent were employed in the pottery manufacture. The manufacture of yellow ware has been carried on at this point since 1839, but the manufacture of white ware, begun in 1872, has become the more important branch of the industry. In 1900 the white granite and semi-vitreous porcelain manufactured in East Liverpool were valued at $2,808,445, or 49.1 per cent of the total for the United States. The manufacture of white ware does not have the advantages of suitable clays near at hand, the kaolin and other fire clays used for the manufacture of china and porcelain being brought from a considerable distance. The remarkable development of the manufacture in East Liverpool, between 1872 and 1892, was due chiefly to the supply of specially skilled labor which has been attracted to that point from English pottery centers, in order to engage in the manufacture of coarser wares.

Zanesville, Roseville and Akron have always been important centers for the manufacture of yellow and earthen ware, the industry in the early years of the century being carried on chiefly by farmers, who made use of the clays found in abundance on their lands. Products were sent down the Muskingum to markets on the Ohio river, and even to New Orleans. In recent years, however, the farmer potter has been driven from the field by the concentration which has followed the introduction of improved machinery. Art tiling is manufactured extensively at Zanesville, and since 1880 Cincinnati has been an important center for the manufacture of art pottery. Ohio manufactures more than one-third of the sewer pipe made in the United States. There are large factories at or near Akron, and for many miles along the Ohio river. The manufacture was begun in the state in 1848, and considerable quantities of pipe are exported.

Allied to the manufacture of pottery is the manufacture of brick and tile. The products of the year 1900 were valued at $4,629,587. This industry is carried on in Ohio, not chiefly for the supply of the local building needs, as in most other states, but for the general market. Vitrified paving brick is made in large quantities at Zanesville and Canton and sent into many other states. Pressed brick is also an important product in Zanesville. The first pressed brick manufactured west of the Ohio river was made in that city in 1861.

CONTESTED ELECTION

George Figley Alleges That He Was Elected Trustee of Hanover Township.

Lisbon, April 26.—(Special)—An action has been commenced in the circuit court of this county, entitled, "The State of Ohio on the Relation of George Figley vs. Geo. W. Conser." Mr. Figley has obtained leave of the circuit to file his petition. He alleges that at the April election he received 184 votes for township trustee and Conser 180, but that the judges of election refused to count five votes legally cast for him and gave Conser the certificate.

The case will be heard at the November term of the circuit court.

A RIVER OF LAND.

Astonishing Amount of Earth That Flows Down the Mississippi.

"The capacity of the Mississippi for filling up canals and old channels is something awful," says John Swain in Ainslee's. "Government engineers have found that the amount of solid matter annually carried past Vicksburg in suspension is enough to make a block of earth 300 feet high and a mile square. Fifty feet off the top of this is spread around on the valley between here and the sea, and the rest goes out into the gulf of Mexico to build up more continent.

"Think what that means. Instead of a river of water this is a river of land. It would make a solid stream of earth five feet deep and nine feet wide, flowing night and day as fast as a man can walk, four miles an hour, all sliding down off the northern half of the country toward the sea. Year in, year out, that endless line of earth goes on. It would take a force of more than 50,000 men working in eight hour shifts to throw the dirt into the stream, supposing the river bed were rigid and an inexhaustible supply of dirt on the bank. It would make 25,000,000 wagon loads every year.

"But here—what are the use of such figures? Below Vicksburg—and above it, too, to an extent—we have the earth itself to speak for it. Except for the occasional fragments of the line of bluffs along the eastern edge below here which bob up at Fort Adams, at Natchez, at Grand Gulf, at Baton Rouge, at Port Hudson, there is nothing about the level of the high water river except the artificial levees. These are in places miles back, great earthen banks, sometimes thirty feet high or more, sodded and free from trees, which protect the wonderfully fertile region behind them.

"And all this level country which the river overflows and fertilizes is constantly increased by this river of dirt which the Mississippi brings down from the inner region, gathered all the way from the Rockies to the Alleghanies. Sometimes the river starts to eat away this land that it has made. In a single summer, if it will, it eats away half a mile of it out of some bend. It cuts it out sometimes an acre at a bite and takes with it forests, houses, levees and all else.

"The river is not a uniformly moving stream. One side or the middle moves swiftly; the other parts are still or sluggish. Sometimes even these run up stream. The swift part is the channel current and runs in the deepest sections. It makes crossings whenever driven off shore by a promontory. These crossings are dumping places for the surplus earth the river has picked up in the bend it is eating."

Christians and Jews.

When Charles Lamb was berating an enemy, some one said to him, "Why, you don't know him." Lamb replied, "I don't want to know him for fear I should like him."

Christians and Jews make ignorance of each other a claim for judgment and seem to be afraid to become acquainted for fear that they might like each other.—Peters' "The Jew as a Patriot."

Spectacles and Moisture.

Wearers of spectacles are frequently annoyed by the glasses becoming dim from a deposit of moisture upon them. An easy way to prevent this is to wash the glasses every morning with soft potash soap. The glasses should then be polished, but an invisible film will remain which will prevent moisture being deposited on them.

His Scheme.

Filbert—Aren't you afraid to be so knowing about poker when your wife is around?

Kilty—Quite the contrary. It is the man who laughs the loudest over a poker joke who knows the least about the game. My wife knows that, and it is my cue to be the man who does the loud laughter.—Boston Transcript.

EAST END

BIG FREIGHT BUSINESS

An Unusually Lively Scene About the Railway Siding in the East End.

A busy time was witnessed in the East End this morning at the south end of Virginia avenue, about the freight yards. All the sidings were filled with cars, and no less than six wagons were backed up to the cars on one side unloading freight. Never before was there so much freight business being done in this part of the city as at present.

The siding along the stock yards of the sewer pipe factory was filled and about six cars of pipe were being loaded today. At the several potteries in this part of the city, numerous cars were waiting to be loaded. The East End is fast becoming a business center.

Advised to Kiss And Make Up.

For some days there has been friction between two families in the Klondike, but now matters are serene. This was not brought about until Justice L. W. Carman had been told the troubles of the interested parties. It seems that the families have been neighbors for some months, and during this time relations were not at all agreeable. After Justice Carman heard the stories of both sides he advised the women to go to their homes, kiss and make up, and it now seems that his advice was heeded.

Church Benevolences.

The benevolences of the Srie street M. E. church for the year are as follows: For missions, $110; church extension, $15; freedmen's aid and southern education, $15; education $30; Sunday school union, $2; tract society, $3; American Bible society, $3; conference claimants, $20; Episcopal fund, $10. Subscriptions amounting to about $60 are paid in and about 125 members have not yet subscribed anything.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

The usual services will be held at the Second U. P. church tomorrow.

A special meeting of the board of trustees of the Erie street M. E. church will be held next Tuesday evening.

Miss Tillie Deever, of St. George street, has returned to the East End after spending several days at Negley visiting friends.

A meeting of the directors of the Federal Building & Loan association was held in the office on St. George street last evening.

The first money received for the new parsonage fund of the Erie street M. E. church was a $10 gold piece and was donated by one not a member of the church.

A DOWN EAST RILEY.

In Joe Lincoln Cape Cod Produces a Real Poet.

Cape Cod, that long, lean arm by which the old Bay State tries to fold the whole Atlantic to its breast, has done many things for the general good. It has dragged countless tons of fish from the ocean and each fall has handed us a generous dole of cranberries wherewith to sauce our Thanksgiving turkeys. Now it has given us a poet.

Joe Lincoln is the name by which he is most familiar to the reading public, although the title page of his new book, "Cape Cod Ballads and Other Verse," reveals that his more formal name is Joseph Crosby Lincoln. A genuine product of Cape Cod is Mr. Lincoln. He was born and reared there. His father and grandfather before him were natives of Cape Cod; also they were ship captains, as were many uncles, great-uncles and other relatives. Masters of cod schooners, whalers and East India merchantmen they were, wise in deep sea ways and with never even a rhymester among them. Joe Lincoln is the first of his line to stay ashore, but through much of his more serious poetry there breathes the spirit of the sea.

"Cape Cod Ballads" includes many humorous poems which have become widely familiar through the medium of the exchange editor's shears and the voice of the public reader. Among these are "The Reg'lar Army Man," "When the Minister Comes to Tea," "The Cuckoo Clock," "The Best Spare Room" and "The Village Oracle." Some of the ballads treat of more dignified topics, such as "The Codfisher," "The Song of the Sea" and "The Ballad of the Dream Ship." Among these is "The Life Saver," in which the poet has sung in swinging meter the praises of the surf heroes after this manner:

When the Lord breathes his wrath above
the bosom of the waters,
When the rollers are a-poundin' on the shore,
When the mariner's a-thinkin' of his wife
and sons and daughters
And the little home he'll, maybe, see no
more;
When the bars are white and yeasty and the shoals are all a-frothin',
When the wild no'theaster's cuttin' like
a knife,
Through the seethin' roar and screech
he's patrollin' on the beach—
The gov'ment's hired man fer savin' life.

In his dialect poems Mr. Lincoln serves up for us such samples of delicious rural humor that he seems to merit the title of "a down east Riley," which has been applied to him. Of course such types as "The Village Oracle," "Aunt Mandy," "Matilda's Beau" and the like may be found in many places outside the sandy boundaries of Cape Cod because they are intensely human. Few small towns are without an "old Daniel Hanks," who is thus portrayed:

Some fellers reckon, more or less,
Before they speak their mind,
And sometimes calkerlate or guess,
But them ain't Daniel's kind.
The Lord knows all things, great or small;
With doubt he's never vexed;
He, in his wisdom, knows it all,
But Dan'l Hanks comes next.

"Cape Cod Ballads" is a handsome volume, being substantially bound, well printed and profusely illustrated with drawings by Kemble. It is the first collection made of Mr. Lincoln's verse and will probably be warmly welcomed

It would make 25,000,000 wagon loads every year.

"But here—what are the use of such figures? Below Vicksburg—and above it, too, to an extent—we have the earth itself to speak for it. Except for the occasional fragments of the line of bluffs along the eastern edge below here which bob up at Fort Adams, at Natchez, at Grand Gulf, at Baton Rouge, at Port Hudson, there is nothing about the level of the high water river except the artificial levees. These are in places miles back, great earthen banks, sometimes thirty feet high or more, sodded and free from trees, which protect the wonderfully fertile region behind them.

"And all this level country which the river overflows and fertilizes is constantly increased by this river of dirt which the Mississippi brings down from the inner region, gathered all the way from the Rockies to the Alleghanies. Sometimes the river starts to eat away this land that it has made. In a single summer, if it will, it eats away half a mile of it out of some bend. It cuts it out sometimes an acre at a bite and takes with it forests, houses, levees and all else.

"The river is not a uniformly moving stream. One side or the middle moves swiftly; the other parts are still or sluggish. Sometimes even these run up stream. The swift part is the channel current and runs in the deepest sections. It makes crossings whenever driven off shore by a promontory. These crossings are dumping places for the surplus earth the river has picked up in the bend it is eating."

Christians and Jews.

When Charles Lamb was berating an enemy, some one said to him, "Why, you don't know him." Lamb replied, "I don't want to know him for fear I should like him."

Christians and Jews make ignorance of each other a claim for judgment and seem to be afraid to become acquainted for fear that they might like each other.—Peters' "The Jew as a Patriot."

Spectacles and Moisture.

Wearers of spectacles are frequently annoyed by the glasses becoming dim from a deposit of moisture upon them. An easy way to prevent this is to wash the glasses every morning with soft potash soap. The glasses should then be polished, but an invisible film will remain which will prevent moisture being deposited on them.

His Scheme.

Filbert—Aren't you afraid to be so knowing about poker when your wife is around?

Kilty—Quite the contrary. It is the man who laughs the loudest over a poker joke who knows the least about the game. My wife knows that, and it is my cue to be the man who does the loud laughter.—Boston Transcript.

EAST END

An Unusually Lively Scene About the Railway Siding in the East End.

A busy time was witnessed in the East End this morning at the south end of Virginia avenue, about the freight yards. All the sidings were filled with cars, and no less than six wagons were backed up to the cars on one side unloading freight. Never before was there so much freight business being done in this part of the city as at present.

The siding along the stock yards of the sewer pipe factory was filled and about six cars of pipe were being loaded today. At the several potteries in this part of the city, numerous cars were waiting to be loaded. The East End is fast becoming a business center.

Advised to Kiss And Make Up.

For some days there has been friction between two families in the Klondike, but now matters are serene. This was not brought about until Justice L. W. Carman had been told the troubles of the interested parties. It seems that the families have been neighbors for some months, and during this time relations were not at all agreeable. After Justice Carman heard the stories of both sides he advised the women to go to their homes, kiss and make up, and it now seems that his advice was heeded.

Church Benevolences.

The benevolences of the Srie street M. E. church for the year are as follows: For missions, $110; church extension, $15; freedmen's aid and southern education, $15; education, $30; Sunday school union, $2; tract society, $3; American Bible society, $3; conference claimants, $20; Episcopal fund, $10. Subscriptions amounting to about $60 are paid in and about 125 members have not yet subscribed anything.

EAST END AFFAIRS.

The usual services will be held at the Second U. P. church tomorrow.

A special meeting of the board of trustees of the Erie street M. E. church will be held next Tuesday evening.

Miss Tillie Deever, of St. George street, has returned to the East End after spending several days at Negley visiting friends.

A meeting of the directors of the Federal Building & Loan association was held in the office on St. George street last evening.

The first money received for the new parsonage fund of the Erie street M. E. church was a $10 gold piece and was donated by one not a member of the church.

A DOWN EAST RILEY.

In Joe Lincoln Cape Cod Produces a Real Poet.

Cape Cod, that long, lean arm by which the old Bay State tries to fold the whole Atlantic to its breast, has done many things for the general good. It has dragged countless tons of fish from the ocean and each fall has handed us a generous dole of cranberries wherewith to sauce our Thanksgiving turkeys. Now it has given us a poet.

Joe Lincoln is the name by which he is most familiar to the reading public, although the title page of his new book, "Cape Cod Ballads and Other Verse," reveals that his more formal name is Joseph Crosby Lincoln. A genuine product of Cape Cod is Mr. Lincoln. He was born and reared there. His father and grandfather before him were natives of Cape Cod; also they were ship captains, as were many uncles, great-uncles and other relatives. Masters of cod schooners, whalers and East India merchantmen they were, wise in deep sea ways and with never even a rhymester among them. Joe Lincoln is the first of his line to stay ashore, but through much of his more serious poetry there breathes the spirit of the sea.

"Cape Cod Ballads" includes many humorous poems which have become widely familiar through the medium of the exchange editor's shears and the voice of the public reader. Among these are "The Reg'lar Army Man," "When the Minister Comes to Tea," "The Cuckoo Clock," "The Best Spare Room" and "The Village Oracle." Some of the ballads treat of more dignified topics, such as "The Codfisher," "The Song of the Sea" and "The Ballad of the Dream Ship." Among these is "The Life Saver," in which the poet has sung in swinging meter the praises of the surf heroes after this manner:

the bosom of the waters,
When the rollers are a-poundin' on the shore,
When the mariner's a-thinkin' of his wife
and sons and daughters
more;
When the bars are white and yeasty and
the shoals are all a-frothin',
When the wild no'theaster's cuttin' like
a knife,
Through the seethin' roar and screech
he's patrollin' on the beach—
The gov'ment's hired man for savin'
life.

In his dialect poems Mr. Lincoln serves up for us such samples of delicious rural humor that he seems to merit the title of "a down east Riley," which has been applied to him. Of course such types as "The Village Oracle," "Aunt Mandy," "Matilda's Beau" and the like may be found in many places outside the sandy boundaries of Cape Cod because they are intensely human. Few small towns are without an "old Daniel Hanks," who is thus portrayed:

Some fellers reckon, more or less,
Before they speak their mind,
And sometimes calkerlate or guess,
But them ain't Daniel's kind.
The Lord knows all things, great or small;
With doubt he's never vexed;
He, in his wisdom, knows it all,
But Dan'l Hanks comes next.

"Cape Cod Ballads" is a handsome volume, being substantially bound, well printed and profusely illustrated with drawings by Kemble. It is the first collection made of Mr. Lincoln's verse and will probably be warmly welcomed

ECHO OF THE CONTEST

For the Speakership at the Opening of Present Legislative Session.

AGAINST BUYING FARMS

Items in Appropriation Bills For the Furchase of Land For State Institutions Opposed by the Democrats. Legislative Review.

Columbus, O., April 26.—[Special.]—That stage of the legislature has been reached which is disagreeable alike to both members and the presiding officers. It is the hurry and rush of the closing days, when bills are passed almost without consideration, and as rapidly as the clerks can read them and call the roll. Night sessions are being sandwiched in when local measures alone are considered and passed oftentimes without even a bare majority of the members present A question has arisen as to whether bills acted upon in this way, and lacking in reality the necessary votes to pass, are legal, and weather, if their validity were to be questioned, they would stand a test in court. Bu so long as no one objects and the point is not raised the bills go on the statute books and become laws. The custom is not a new one, and has been followed by the legislature since the first session was held in 1802. Indeed, it is the only way in which the business can be transacted and disposed of before adjournment, and with all the haste and push and hurry many will be left unacted upon, and many go away disappointed. Fred Blankner, the veteran sergeant of the house, who has grown gray in the capital building, says that the present general assembly is acting in a decidedly more conservative way than many which he has attended, and is really entitled to credit, instead of censure. In any event, it is working hard and doing the best that lies within it.

THIS MAN IS ABOUT TO BUY A PAPER. CAN YOU FIND THE NEWSBOY?

But even this strenuous effort to get through may not be sufficient to bring adjournment by May 5, according to the resolution already passed in the house. The senate has refused thus far to concur in this, and may insist to postpone the final breaking up until a week later, or the 12th. The finance committee of the senate is disposed to act slowly in the matter of endorsing the appropriation bills, and will request the managers of the different state institutions and departments to personally appear and rehearse their wants. This will cause some delay, and it may be enough to keep the members here until two weeks from next Monday.

Perhaps the youngest member in the legislature is W. E. Guerin of Sandusky, Erie county. Guerin is but little more than a boy in years, but in ability he stands equal to those of twice his age. The chief thing to bring him into attention this session has been his chairmanship of the revision committee. After the speakership fight, in which he vigorously opposed McKinnon, the latter, while wishing to give him some chairmanship, did not feel disposed to put him on one of the more important committees, so he selected the revision. No one had heard of that for 20 years, and it had not held a meeting for a quarter of a century. But Mr. Guerin began looking up the law. He found the committee could be made an important one, and that its real purpose was to revise and pass upon the constitutionality of all bills introduced. So he announced that all measures presented to the house must first go into his hands. The speaker and the members were dumbfounded, so they looked up the law and found Guerin was right. That is how a committee that was supposed to be obsolete has become one of the most important in the legislature.

A decision of the supreme court handed down on Tuesday played sad havoc with the bill passed earlier in the session through the influence of Representative Pollock of Stark, prescribing the duties and creating a state board of examiners for stationery engineers, before which all applicants for work of that character must appear and pass an examination. The court held the bill to be unconstitutional and of no effect. An apprehension was immediately created that the decision would apply with equal force to all boards in the state created under a special act of the legislature. This alarm has, however, been taken away by Attorney General Sheets, who gives the opinion that only the board of stationary engineers is affected. Immeately upon receipt of the news of the action of the supreme court Mr. Pollock secured the aid of a number of prominent constitutional attorneys and drafted a new bill, eliminating those things to which the court had objected. This will be immediately passed, and go into effect May 1, so there will be no real delay in the operation of the board.

There has been no such contest in the legislature during the present session as marked the passage of the first appropriation bill in the house. While the struggle was primarily between the Democrats and the Republicans as to the justice of certain items contained in the measure, it took on the aspect of a personal matter between Speaker McKinnon and Representative Price of Athens before the close, and led to a bitter review of the speakership fight of last year. Price objected to the appropriation of $10,500 for the purchase of a farm owned by former Supreme Court Clerk Josiah Allen, to be used for the benefit of the state hospital at Athens. His opposition was based upon the ground that the farm was one which ought to go to the city, and should not in any event be purchased for the hospital, since that institution now has more land than it can well handle. But the real reason was a personal and political enmity which he bears to Mr. Allen, growing out of continued political contests in Athens county. He insists that both Mr. Allen and Congressman Grosvenor pledged him their support in the speakership fight, and later withdrew and openly worked for the election of Mr. McKinnon. Price remembered this, and openly flaunted it in the face of the speaker. He, moreover, maintained that the purchase of the farm was the fulfillment of a political deal made last winter between Dr. Rorick, superintendent of the hospital, and Mr. Allen, together with Congressman Grosvenor, whereby they supported Rorick for reappointment in return for his promise to push through the legislature the adoption of bills sanctioning the purchase of land which they own. Excitement ran high in the house, but through it all the speaker refused to lose his head, and made no reply except to say: "I thought the speakership matter was settled last winter, Price," to which the latter replied, "Oh, it's nothing against you personally, Mac, but I want to stand between the state and the carrying out of a political deal."

The bill was finally adopted, a portion of it by a majority vote, Democrats refusing to concur with Republicans, and the remainder by the solid vote of the entire house. Price stood steadfastly by his pledge, and voted with the Democrats upon that portion of the bill containing the appropriation for the Athens farm.

The second appropriation bill for the last three quarters of 1903 and the first quarter of 1904 has been submitted to the house by Chairman Crafts of the finance committee. It carries with it a total of $4,916,234, as compared with $4,982,000 in the similar bill introduced two years ago. Included among the appropriations is an item of $17,000 for the purchase of a farm at the Massillon State hospital, and $40,000 for the work of repairing the retaining wall along the canal bank at Cincinnati. It is the purpose of the Democrats to object ti both of these, on the ground that they are unnecessary and create a useless expenditure what warm debate, and it is doubtful if the Democrats will support the measure when it comes up for final passage. The second appropriation bill will be followed by the general deficiency measure, the last of the appropriation bills to be introduced. That will probably go through without an objection.

All the administration tax measures, both those raising money for state purposes and those reducing the state tax levy, have passed either one branch or the other, and a majority of them have passed both. The tax scheme of the governor is, therefore, to all purposes complete. The last of the bills to get through was that by Mr. Cole of Hancock, converting the money raised by the 2½ per cent tax placed upon the gross receipts in Ohio of fire and life insurance companies into the state treasury. This money has heretofore been going into the different city and county treasuries, where the companies did business. It is estimated that from this source alone the state will annually receive about $400,000, of which it has not heretofore had the use.

Painter's canal bill, which was introduced after the defeat of the bill presented by him earlier in the session providing for the abandonment of the canal system in Ohio, is booked for delay until at least the next session. The measure appoints the governor, secretary of state and attorney general a commission authorized to lease the berme banks of any canal in Ohio for railroad purposes for 99 years, and such portions of the towpath as lie along any abandoned portion of the canal for similar purposes. The real object to be attained was to make the canals self-sustaining.

Much anxiety is felt among his colleagues in the legislature over the illness of Senator Harding of Marion, who is confined to his rooms in the Great Southern hotel. A seemingly slight attack of neuralgia has developed into more serious complications, necessitating an operation. It is hoped this will bring relief and the senator be able to resume his duties during the week, although it is doubtful if he can be in his seat again during the session.

General Grant's Namesake.

A number of years ago a son was born to a colored woman in the south, and as he was her first she looked upon him with pride and was much at a loss to find a name for him. Relatives and friends, including her mistress, were appealed to; but, although many names were suggested, all were discarded.

After many days of deliberation she said one morning to her mistress: "Miss Mary, I'ze found a name for my boy. I'm going to name him Delicious."

"Why," said the lady, "where did you get that name?"

"Oh," she cried, "I'm going to call him that 'cause I want to name him for Mr. Grant."

When it was explained to her that the great hero was named Ulysses and not Delicious, she was somewhat disturbed in mind, but Ulysses did not please her, so the boy had to begin life burdened with the name Egbert Eugene.—Detroit Free Press.

Effect of the Sun on Monuments.

The perpendicularity of a monument is visibly affected by the rays of the sun. On every sunny day a tall monument has a regular swing leading away from the sun. This phenomenon is due to the greater expansion of the side on which the rays of the sun fall. A pendulum placed inside, say, Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square, would be found to describe on every clear day an ellipse of nearly half an inch in diameter.—English Mechanic.

General Grant's Namesake.

A number of years ago a son was born to a colored woman in the south, and as he was her first she looked upon him with pride and was much at a loss to find a name for him. Relatives and friends, including her mistress, were appealed to; but, although many names were suggested, all were discarded.

After many days of deliberation she said one morning to her mistress: "Miss Mary, I'ze found a name for my boy. I'm going to name him Delicious."

"Why," said the lady, "where did you get that name?"

"Oh," she cried, "I'm going to call him that 'cause I want to name him for Mr. Grant."

When it was explained to her that the great hero was named Ulysses and not Delicious, she was somewhat disturbed in mind, but Ulysses did not please her, so the boy had to begin life burdened with the name Egbert Eugene.—Detroit Free Press.

Effect of the Sun on Monuments.

The perpendicularity of a monument is visibly affected by the rays of the sun. On every sunny day a tall monument has a regular swing leading away from the sun. This phenomenon is due to the greater expansion of the side on which the rays of the sun fall. A pendulum placed inside, say, Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square, would be found to describe on every clear day an ellipse of nearly half an inch in diameter.—English Mechanic.

As a result of a thorough investigation of the matter, Attorney General Knox has become convinced that there is a practical combination among the great meat-packing firms of the country. Hence he has directed that suit be brought in the United States district court at Chicago, under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law. Six great firms practically monopolize the meat trade of the country. President Roosevelt believes in the strongest enforcement of the anti-trust law, and the suit will be pressed with vigor. It will come up in the form of an application for an injunction, as the agreement between the parties is held to be in restraint of interstate commerce. The Sherman law declares every contract or combination in restraint of trade among the states to be illegal; and on conviction each party to the combination may be fined not to exceed $5,000, or be imprisoned not more than one year, or both. Further, any person injured in his business or property by the combination may recover in court three times the damage sustained, and the cost of the suit, including attorneys fees. In the case of the Addyston Pipe company, a number of manufacturers of cast-iron pipe combined in a similar way. The government got after them, and destroyed the combination. Probably the same result will follow in the case of the meat packers.

The orders which many railroad companies are issuing, forbidding employes to drink whether on or off duty, are affording a lesson in practical temperance, being the sort of prohibition which prohibits. In Cheyenne, Wyo., 25 saloons are said to have gone out of business in one month on account of the Union Pacific railroad having forbidden its men to frequent saloons.

Mayor Davidson's orders to the police to enforce the ordinance against the throwing of waste paper or other rubbish in the streets have been needed for a long time and if rigidly enforced will meet with general public approval. East Liverpool needs to be taught a lesson in regard to tidiness.

Columbus is evidently getting weary or indifferent as regards politics. The Republican state convention goes to Cleveland and the Democrats propose meeting somewhere else than at the state capital, simply because nobody there seems to care.

Ohio has produced many wonders, but the latest is a Democrat who refuses an office. The phenomenal gentleman was elected mayor of Uhrichsville and is reported to have left home to escape being inaugurated.

A Michigan man has resigned from office on the ground that he is not competent. Many a man makes the same discovery, and stays until the end of his term.

William J. Bryan at last announces that he willl not be a candidate for the presidency. A simple case of sour grapes; he can't be, with the consent of his party.

From the amount of discussion English papers are giving J. P. Morgan's latest purchases, it looks as if they feared he might try to buy up their island next.

Who says the Indians are not becoming civilized? Two tribes in Nebraska have formed a trust, to raise the price of souvenirs.

The Miles-Alger war on embalmed beef was only a skirmish compared with the conflict people would like to wage now.

Beef trust prices are not worrying the farmer who is fortunate enough to have fat cattle to sell.

The fish are biting and cases of truancy in rural schools are becoming extraordinarily frequent.

HIS WINNING HAND.

How a Consumptive Gentleman Captured a Big Jack Pot.

A couple of young men prominent in several of the best clubs of this city have been quite diligent in consulting the authorities and diagnosticians of poker since last September, when they encountered a new hand. Having suddenly decided to go hunting in the Adirondacks, they went there the last but one of the close season. As the sleepers were all full, they had to spend a night in a coach or stay over in Utica. The New Yorkers saw little choice between a Utica hotel and a Mohawk and Malone coach, so they decided to make the best of the night's ride, seeing they would begin shooting so much the sooner. On the train they found an acquaintance bound for the sanitarium for consumptives at Saranac. He introduced them to a friend, and the four sleepless weary wights began "a little game."

As the party was to break up at Saranac they started what they decided should be the last pot just as the rays of the red sun were breaking through the heavy mists of the lower lake. There were no chips, and the piles of coin and paper assumed quite inviting proportions. That last jack pot was a big one. The game was called just as the train stopped. At the showdown there were three "full houses."

"Well, gentlemen," said the consumptive as he calmly pocketed the money, "I guess it's mine. I have a hectic flush."—New York Times.

THE GREAT POETS.

Do Not Study Them For Knowledge: Read Them For Culture.

Young men and young women actually go to college to take a course in Shakespeare or Chaucer or Dante or the Arthurian legends. The course becomes a mere knowledge course. My own acquaintance with Milton was through an exercise in grammar. We parsed "Paradise Lost." Much of the current college study of Shakespeare is little better than parsing him. The class falls upon the text like hens upon a bone in winter. No meaning of phrase escapes them; every line is literally picked to pieces. But of the poet himself, of that which makes him what he is, how much do they get? Very little, I fear. They have had intellectual exercise and not an emotional experience. They have added to their knowledge, but have not taken a step in culture.

To dig into the roots and origins of the great poets is like digging into the roots of an oak or maple the better to increase your appreciation of the beauty of the tree. There stands the tree in all its summer glory. Will you really know it any better after you have laid bare every root and rootlet? There stand Homer, Dante, Chaucer and Shakespeare. Read them, give yourself to them, and master them if you are man enough.

The poets are not to be analyzed; they are to be enjoyed; they are not to be studied, but to be loved; they are not for knowledge, but for culture—to enhance our appreciation of life and our mastery over its elements. All the mere facts about a poet's work are as chaff as compared with the appreciation of one fine line or fine sentence. Why study a great poet at all after the manner of the dissecting room? Why not rather seek to make the acquaintance of his living soul and to feel its power?—John Burroughs in Century.

WEBSTER AS A DRINKER.

The Great Orator's Deep Potations Before Two Famous Speeches.

Daniel Webster was invited to Richmond in the fifties. He accepted the invitation, came to Richmond and went to the Exchange hotel. He was invited by the state legislature to address them and the people of Richmond, and a committee consisting of James Lyons of Richmond and Robert E. Scott of Fauquier, two of the most eminent lawyers in the state, were sent down to the hotel to escort him to the capitol building. They found Mr. Webster in a state of intoxication in such degree that Mr. Lyons said to Mr. Scott: "This man can't make a speech. You must take his place." Mr. Scott replied, "No man can take the place of Daniel Webster."

After delay, during which Mr. Webster improved a little, he was asked if he would go to the capitol. He replied, "Yes." With great difficulty Messrs Scott and Lyons supported and helped him to the capitol. When they reached the rotunda near the Washington statue, Mr. Lyons said, "Mr. Webster, do you think you can speak?" "If you will give me a drink of brandy, yes."

A messenger was sent to a neighboring hotel and a bottle of brandy brought. Mr. Webster poured out successively two goblets full and drank them off, straightened himself up, shook himself as a lion might have done, walked steadily and directly to the position from which he spoke, on the south porch of the capitol, and in the presence of an audience of 5,000 people, which consisted of the intellectuality and beauty of Richmond, male and female, made his celebrated October speech, one of the greatest even of his life.

Edward Everett related that on the day Webster replied to Hayne of South Carolina he walked with him to the capitol; that he seemed so badly prepared that he doubted him and feared that he was not equal to the occasion; that just before he rose to speak he drank a goblet of brandy and then made his great speech in reply to Hayne, which is an English classic. Such was the effect of the beverage on Webster.—Beverages.

THE GREAT POETS.

Do Not Study Them For Knowledge: Read Them For Culture.

Young men and young women actually go to college to take a course in Shakespeare or Chaucer or Dante or the Arthurian legends. The course becomes a mere knowledge course. My own acquaintance with Milton was through an exercise in grammar. We parsed "Paradise Lost." Much of the current college study of Shakespeare is little better than parsing him. The class falls upon the text like hens upon a bone in winter. No meaning of phrase escapes them; every line is literally picked to pieces. But of the poet himself, of that which makes him what he is, how much do they get? Very little, I fear. They have had intellectual exercise and not an emotional experience. They have added to their knowledge, but have not taken a step in culture.

To dig into the roots and origins of the great poets is like digging into the roots of an oak or maple the better to increase your appreciation of the beauty of the tree. There stands the tree in all its summer glory. Will you really know it any better after you have laid bare every root and rootlet? There stand Homer, Dante, Chaucer and Shakespeare. Read them, give yourself to them, and master them if you are man enough.

The poets are not to be analyzed; they are to be enjoyed; they are not to be studied, but to be loved; they are not for knowledge, but for culture—to enhance our appreciation of life and our mastery over its elements. All the mere facts about a poet's work are as chaff as compared with the appreciation of one fine line or fine sentence. Why study a great poet at all after the manner of the dissecting room? Why not rather seek to make the acquaintance of his living soul and to feel its power?—John Burroughs in Century.

WEBSTER AS A DRINKER.

The Great Orator's Deep Potations Before Two Famous Speeches.

Daniel Webster was invited to Richmond in the fifties. He accepted the invitation, came to Richmond and went to the Exchange hotel. He was invited by the state legislature to address them and the people of Richmond, and a committee consisting of James Lyons of Richmond and Robert E. Scott of Fauquier, two of the most eminent lawyers in the state, were sent down to the hotel to escort him to the capitol building. They found Mr. Webster in a state of intoxication in such degree that Mr. Lyons said to Mr. Scott: "This man can't make a speech. You must take his place." Mr. Scott replied, "No man can take the place of Daniel Webster."

After delay, during which Mr. Webster improved a little, he was asked if he would go to the capitol. He replied, "Yes." With great difficulty Messrs Scott and Lyons supported and helped him to the capitol. When they reached the rotunda near the Washington statue, Mr. Lyons said, "Mr. Webster, do you think you can speak?" "If you will give me a drink of brandy, yes."

A messenger was sent to a neighboring hotel and a bottle of brandy brought. Mr. Webster poured out successively two goblets full and drank them off, straightened himself up, shook himself as a lion might have done, walked steadily and directly to the position from which he spoke, on the south porch of the capitol, and in the presence of an audience of 5,000 people, which consisted of the intellectuality and beauty of Richmond, male and female, made his celebrated October speech, one of the greatest even of his life.

Edward Everett related that on the day Webster replied to Hayne of South Carolina he walked with him to the capitol; that he seemed so badly prepared that he doubted him and feared that he was not equal to the occasion; that just before he rose to speak he drank a goblet of brandy and then made his great speech in reply to Hayne, which is an English classic. Such was the effect of the beverage on Webster.—Beverages.

One of Field's Crazy Jokes.

In his biography of Eugene Field Slason Thompson says that shortly after the humorist's arrival in Chicago it occurred to him one bleak day in December that it was time the people knew there was a stranger in town.

So he arrayed himself in a long linen duster, buttoned up from knees to collar, put an old straw hat on his head and, taking a shabby book under one arm and a palf leaf fan in his hand, he marched all the way down Clark street, past the city hall, to the office. Everywhere along the route he was greeted with jeers or pitying words, as his appearance excited the mirth or commiseration of the passersby.

When he reached the entrance to The Daily News office, he was followed by a motley crowd of noisy urchins, whom he dismissed with a grimace and the cabalistic gesture with which Nicholas Kooran perplexed and repulsed Antony van Corlear from the battlement of the fortress on Rensselaerstein. Then, closing the door in their astonished faces, he mounted the two flights of stairs to the editorial rooms, where he recounted, with the glee of the boy he was in such things, the success of his joke.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS

Reveals That "Pe-ru-na is Calculated to Tone up the System, Restore the Functions and Procure Health."

SO SAYS PROF. L. J. MILLER, CHEMIST.

Prof. L. J. Miller, late Professor of Chemistry and Botany of the High School of Ypsilanti, Mich., writes from 3327 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"As several of my friends have spoken to me of the favorable results obtained through the use of Peruna, especially in cases of catarrh, I examined it most thoroughly to learn its contents.

"I found it composed of extracts of herbs and barks of most valuable medicinal qualities combined with other ingredients, delicately balanced, calculated to tone up the system, restore the functions and procure health.

"I consider Peruna one of the most skillfully and scientifically prepared medicines, which the public can use with safety and success."—PROF. L. J. MILLER.

"Builds up the System."

Hon. Joseph H. Ridgeway, Secretary of the American Anti-Treat Society, writes the following letter from the Grand Central Hotel, St. Paul, Minn.:

"It is with great pleasure that I endorse Peruna as an honest medicine, competent to do all it claims. I have used it several times and know of nothing that cures so completely, and at the same time builds up the system.

Joseph Ridgeway.

"I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactory the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

"Feel Better Than for Five Years."

Mr. James B. Taylor, Roberts, Ind., writes:

"I am at the present time entirely well. I can eat anything I ever could. I took five bottles of Peruna, and feel better now than I have for five years. I have doctored with other doctors off and on for fifteen years, so I can recommend your medicine very highly for stomach troubles. I take great pleasure in thanking you for your free advice and Peruna."—James B. Taylor.

"I Enjoy my Meals as I Used to."

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes:

"I am pleased to say that I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peruna. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Before I would get half through my meal my stomach would fill with gas causing me much distress and unpleasant feelings for an hour or two after each meal. But, thanks to your Peruna, I am now completely cured, and can eat anything I want to without any of the distressing symptoms. I can now enjoy my meals as I used to do, and it is all due to Dr. Hartman and his wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"It has been one year since I was cured, and I am all O. K. yet, so I know I am cured."—J. W. Pritchard.

Dyspepsia is a very common phase of summer catarrh. A remedy that will cure catarrh of one location will cure it anywhere. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. That it is a prompt and permanent cure for catarrh of the stomach the above letters testify.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

How Oriental People Wash.

"European tourists in the east," said a traveler, "have before now remarked on the various degrees of dirtiness manifested by the oriental races. But their dirtiness is not only to be differentiated in degree, but also in kind. Your only partially civilized man is clean in spots. Civilization might be measured by the size and number of the spots until, in the perfect civilization, I suppose, it will be all clean spot. But different races put the spots in different places; so, observing this, there has grown up a saying among the Europeans in the east that the Chinese wash their clothes, but not themselves; the Japanese wash themselves, but not their clothes, and the Koreans wash neither. Were there nothing else to judge by, it might be a pretty question whether the Chinese or the Japanese are the more civilized."

The Earth to Be Like the Moon.

The water of the earth is all destined to disappear from the surface of the globe by being absorbed by subterranean rocks, with which it will form chemical combinations. The heavenly spheres exhibit sufficiently striking examples of such an evolution. The planet Mars shows what will become of the earth in some thousands of centuries. Its seas are only shallow Mediterraneans of less surface than the continents, and these do not appear to be very high, and in the appearance of the moon, all cracked and dried up, we have a view of the final state of the earth, for the absorption of the water by the solid nucleus will be followed by that of the atmosphere.

Praise of Work Well Done.

Perhaps there is nothing else so productive of cheerful, helpful service as the expression of approval or praise of work well done, and yet there is nothing so grudgingly, so meagerly given by employers. Many of them seem to think that commendation is demoralizing and that the voicing of appreciation will lead to listlessness and the withdrawal of energy and interest. This evinces but a poor knowledge of human nature, which is always hungering for approbation. But how mistaken such views are is shown by the loyal and unstinted service given to those large minded men who treat their employees as members of a family committed to their care.—Success.

Her Consolation.

At a confirmation at Strassburg the bishop asked of a pretty soubrette the usual question of the Heidelberg catechism:

"What is your only consolation in life and death?"

The neophyte blushed and hesitated. The first question was repeated, and then she stammered out:

"The young shoemaker in the next street."—London Tit-Bits.

The condition of William Whitney, of Tenth and Coal streets, who drank ammonia on Thursday evening, is pronounced somewhat improved.

Rev. C. E. Clark preached a very eloquent sermon at the Fourteenth street mission last evening before a very large and appreciative congregation.

W. P. McDonald, a prominent business man of this city, left last evening for Chicago, where he will spend a few days and then will leave for California, where he will remain for a few weeks on a pleasant trip.

One of Field's Crazy Jokes.

In his biography of Eugene Field Slason Thompson says that shortly after the humorist's arrival in Chicago it occurred to him one bleak day in December that it was time the people knew there was a stranger in town.

So he arrayed himself in a long linen duster, buttoned up from knees to collar, put an old straw hat on his head and, taking a shabby book under one arm and a palf leaf fan in his hand, he marched all the way down Clark street, past the city hall, to the office. Everywhere along the route he was greeted with jeers or pitying words, as his appearance excited the mirth or commiseration of the passersby.

When he reached the entrance to The Daily News office, he was followed by a motley crowd of noisy urchins, whom he dismissed with a grimace and the cabalistic gesture with which Nicholas Kooran perplexed and repulsed Antony van Corlear from the battlement of the fortress on Rensselaerstein. Then, closing the door in their astonished faces, he mounted the two flights of stairs to the editorial rooms, where he recounted, with the glee of the boy he was in such things, the success of his joke.

Courtship Too Expensive.

Tess—You don't mean to say they have broken off their engagement?

Jess—Yes.

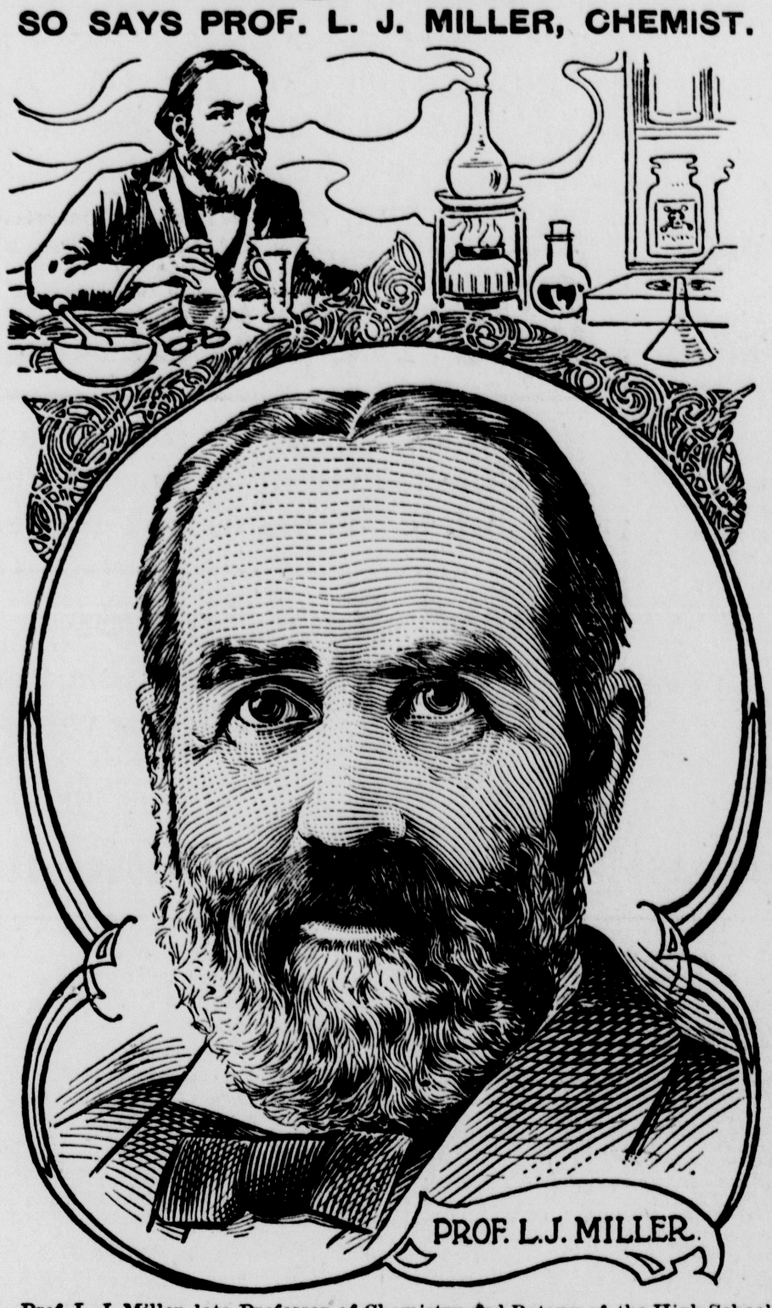

Tess—Why, I thought they were perfectly devoted to each other.

Jess—So they are. You see, they have broken off the engagement, so that he may save enough money to enable them to get married.—Philadelphia Press.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS

Reveals That "Pe-ru-na is Calculated to Tone up the System, Restore the Functions and Procure Health."

SO SAYS PROF. L. J. MILLER, CHEMIST.

Prof. L. J. Miller, late Professor of Chemistry and Botany of the High School of Ypsilanti, Mich., writes from 3327 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"As several of my friends have spoken to me of the favorable results obtained through the use of Peruna, especially in cases of catarrh, I examined it most thoroughly to learn its contents.

"I found it composed of extracts of herbs and barks of most valuable medicinal qualities combined with other ingredients, delicately balanced, calculated to tone up the system, restore the functions and procure health.

"I consider Peruna one of the most skillfully and scientifically prepared medicines, which the public can use with safety and success."—PROF. L. J. MILLER.

"Builds up the System."

Hon. Joseph H. Ridgeway, Secretary of the American Anti-Treat Society, writes the following letter from the Grand Central Hotel, St. Paul, Minn.:

"It is with great pleasure that I endorse Peruna as an honest medicine, competent to do all it claims. I have used it several times and know of nothing that cures so completely, and at the same time builds up the system.

Joseph Ridgeway.

"I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactory the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

"Feel Better Than for Five Years."

Mr. James B. Taylor, Roberts, Ind., writes:

"I am at the present time entirely well. I can eat anything I ever could. I took five bottles of Peruna, and feel better now than I have for five years. I have doctored with other doctors off and on for fifteen years, so I can recommend your medicine very highly for stomach troubles. I take great pleasure in thanking you for your free advice and Peruna."—James B. Taylor.

"I Enjoy my Meals as I Used to."

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes:

"I am pleased to say that I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peruna. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Before I would get half through my meal my stomach would fill with gas causing me much distress and unpleasant feelings for an hour or two after each meal. But, thanks to your Peruna, I am now completely cured, and can eat anything I want to without any of the distressing symptoms. I can now enjoy my meals as I used to do, and it is all due to Dr. Hartman and his wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"It has been one year since I was cured, and I am all O. K. yet, so I know I am cured."—J. W. Pritchard.

Dyspepsia is a very common phase of summer catarrh. A remedy that will cure catarrh of one location will cure it anywhere. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. That it is a prompt and permanent cure for catarrh of the stomach the above letters testify.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

How Oriental People Wash.

"European tourists in the east," said a traveler, "have before now remarked on the various degrees of dirtiness manifested by the oriental races. But their dirtiness is not only to be differentiated in degree, but also in kind. Your only partially civilized man is clean in spots. Civilization might be measured by the size and number of the spots until, in the perfect civilization, I suppose, it will be all clean spot. But different races put the spots in different places; so, observing this, there has grown up a saying among the Europeans in the east that the Chinese wash their clothes, but not themselves; the Japanese wash themselves, but not their clothes, and the Koreans wash neither. Were there nothing else to judge by, it might be a pretty question whether the Chinese or the Japanese are the more civilized."

The Earth to Be Like the Moon.

The water of the earth is all destined to disappear from the surface of the globe by being absorbed by subterranean rocks, with which it will form chemical combinations. The heavenly spheres exhibit sufficiently striking examples of such an evolution. The planet Mars shows what will become of the earth in some thousands of centuries. Its seas are only shallow Mediterraneans of less surface than the continents, and these do not appear to be very high, and in the appearance of the moon, all cracked and dried up, we have a view of the final state of the earth, for the absorption of the water by the solid nucleus will be followed by that of the atmosphere.

Praise of Work Well Done.

Perhaps there is nothing else so productive of cheerful, helpful service as the expression of approval or praise of work well done, and yet there is nothing so grudgingly, so meagerly given by employers. Many of them seem to think that commendation is demoralizing and that the voicing of appreciation will lead to listlessness and the withdrawal of energy and interest. This evinces but a poor knowledge of human nature, which is always hungering for approbation. But how mistaken such views are is shown by the loyal and unstinted service given to those large minded men who treat their employees as members of a family committed to their care.—Success.

Her Consolation.

At a confirmation at Strassburg the bishop asked of a pretty soubrette the usual question of the Heidelberg catechism:

"What is your only consolation in life and death?"

The neophyte blushed and hesitated. The first question was repeated, and then she stammered out:

"The young shoemaker in the next street."—London Tit-Bits.

A Good Hearted Man,

or in other words, men with good sound hearts, are not very numerous. The increasing number of sudden deaths from heart disease daily chronicled by the press, is proof of the alarming prevalence of this dangerous complaint, and as no one can foretell just when a fatal collapse will occur, the danger of neglecting treatment is certainly a very risky matter. If you are short of breath, have pain in left side, smothering spells, palpitation, unable to lie on side, especially the left, you should begin taking

J. A. Kreamer.

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

J. A. Kreamer of Arkansas City, Kans., says: "My heart was so bad it was impossible for me to lie down, and I could neither sleep nor rest. My decline was rapid, and I realized I must get help soon. I was advised to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, which I did, and candidly believe it saved my life."

COOKING HINTS.

Don't add lard, molasses or sugar to bread if you wish to keep well and be wholesome.

Potatoes baked thoroughly, but not allowed to turn dark, are the best to be used for creamed potatoes.

If salad dressing curdles when being mixed, add a little cold water, stir quickly, and it will become quite smooth.

If tea be ground like coffee or crushed immediately before boiling water is poured upon it, it will yield nearly double the amount of its exhilarating qualities.

If a sliced onion and carrot are cooked with veal, it will be found that the flavor of the rather tasteless meat is much improved. Veal cutlets rely for their flavor on the tomato sauce that is usually served with them.

A delightful flavor is sometimes given to steak by placing it overnight in a bath of oil and vinegar. In the morning it is wiped before the broiling, but enough of the mixture has been absorbed to give it a decided flavor.

If in making split pea soup a teacupful of whipped cream is put in the tureen just as the soup is poured over, the improvement in flavor of the soup will be noticeable. This puree has sometimes a flat, even watery taste that is not at all agreeable, which the whipped cream entirely removes.

Privileges Limited.

The Cook—Ah done fah'd dat man outen de kitchen, ma'am, fo' stealin' yo' sugah.

The Mistress—You did perfectly right, Mary.

DANCING NOT INHERENTLY EVIL

By Right Rev. GEORGE F. SEYMOUR, S. T. D., LL. D., Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Springfield, Ills

LARGE numbers of excellent, religious people condemn dancing in the severest terms of reprobation and forbid their converts to dance with the same breath with which they forbid them to kill or commit adultery or steal.

THE EFFECT OF SUCH TEACHING IS MOST PERNICIOUS. IT IS IN ITSELF FALSE; IT PRONOUNCES EVIL WHAT GOD HAS NOT CURSED—NAY, WHAT HE HAS RECOGNIZED AS AN OFFERING ACCEPTABLE TO HIMSELF AND WHICH HE HAS EVEN COMMANDED MEN TO MAKE TO HIS GLORY AND PRAISE.

Dancing is the poetry of motion. It is the expression to the eye of what music conveys to the ear. It is oftentimes spontaneous and involuntary. The hand, the head, the body, will without our thought or consent keep time with the tune which floats in upon us from the voice of the sweet singer or the notes of the instrument. TO TEACH, THEREFORE, THAT DANCING IS IN ITSELF EVIL AND IS TO BE AVOIDED AS SIN IS AS GRAVE AN ERROR AS CAN WELL BE COMMITTED.

It is an impeachment of the truth of God, it is an indictment against the handiwork of our Maker in the highest and best instincts of our nature; it is calculated to bewilder the moral sense, especially of the young, as to good and evil.

DANCING IS NOT INHERENTLY EVIL ANY MORE THAN MONEY IS OR THE DRAMA IS OR MUSIC IS.

It may be and often is abused. There are lascivious dances and there are bad people who dance, and there are occasions when one ought not to dance. So precisely are the lewd songs and improper plays and vile purposes to which money is put, but these are no arguments against the legitimate use of music or the drama or money. One can no more consistently condemn dancing than he can condemn money or music or the drama.

An Unusual Contribution.

A number of years ago Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford were traveling through the middle west incognito. They happened to be in Bloomington, Ind., one Sunday and, pursuant to their usual custom, went to church. They attended the Christian church of Bloomington, then largely in the hands of Amzi Atwater. When the plate was passed for the collection, Mrs. Stanford dropped in a ten dollar goldpiece. Mr. Atwater was the deacon in charge of the collection taking. It was noticed that the ushers held a hurried conference with him when the money was taken forward.

At its conclusion Mr. Atwater said: "Ladies and gentlemen, there has evidently been a mistake. Some one has dropped a ten dollar goldpiece into the collection. If he will pass up after the services, we will be glad to allow him to exchange it for the amount he intended to give."

It is, of course, needless to say that Mrs. Stanford did not take advantage of the opportunity.

William Wirt's Reformation.

William Wirt, the great lawyer, attorney general of the United States and prosecutor of Aaron Burr when he was tried for treason, was stupefied and made sensuous by liquor. At times he lost all self control and self respect. On one occasion while drunk he fell in the streets of Richmond. While lying there asleep Miss G., the most beautiful woman in the city, to whom he was betrothed, came along, saw him and placed her handkerchief, on which was her name, over his face. He wakened, saw the name, learned the incident, and it reformed him.—Beverages.

A Good Hearted Man,

or in other words, men with good sound hearts, are not very numerous. The increasing number of sudden deaths from heart disease daily chronicled by the press, is proof of the alarming prevalence of this dangerous complaint, and as no one can foretell just when a fatal collapse will occur, the danger of neglecting treatment is certainly a very risky matter. If you are short of breath, have pain in left side, smothering spells, palpitation, unable to lie on side, especially the left, you should begin taking

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

J. A. Kreamer of Arkansas City, Kans., says: "My heart was so bad it was impossible for me to lie down, and I could neither sleep nor rest. My decline was rapid, and I realized I must get help soon. I was advised to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, which I did, and candidly believe it saved my life."

COOKING HINTS.

Don't add lard, molasses or sugar to bread if you wish to keep well and be wholesome.

Potatoes baked thoroughly, but not allowed to turn dark, are the best to be used for creamed potatoes.

If salad dressing curdles when being mixed, add a little cold water, stir quickly, and it will become quite smooth.

If tea be ground like coffee or crushed immediately before boiling water is poured upon it, it will yield nearly double the amount of its exhilarating qualities.

If a sliced onion and carrot are cooked with veal, it will be found that the flavor of the rather tasteless meat is much improved. Veal cutlets rely for their flavor on the tomato sauce that is usually served with them.

A delightful flavor is sometimes given to steak by placing it overnight in a bath of oil and vinegar. In the morning it is wiped before the broiling, but enough of the mixture has been absorbed to give it a decided flavor.

If in making split pea soup a teacupful of whipped cream is put in the tureen just as the soup is poured over, the improvement in flavor of the soup will be noticeable. This puree has sometimes a flat, even watery taste that is not at all agreeable, which the whipped cream entirely removes.

DANCING NOT INHERENTLY EVIL

By Right Rev. GEORGE F. SEYMOUR, S. T. D., LL. D., Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Springfield, Ills

LARGE numbers of excellent, religious people condemn dancing in the severest terms of reprobation and forbid their converts to dance with the same breath with which they forbid them to kill or commit adultery or steal.

THE EFFECT OF SUCH TEACHING IS MOST PERNICIOUS. IT IS IN ITSELF FALSE; IT PRONOUNCES EVIL WHAT GOD HAS NOT CURSED—NAY, WHAT HE HAS RECOGNIZED AS AN OFFERING ACCEPTABLE TO HIMSELF AND WHICH HE HAS EVEN COMMANDED MEN TO MAKE TO HIS GLORY AND PRAISE.

Dancing is the poetry of motion. It is the expression to the eye of what music conveys to the ear. It is oftentimes spontaneous and involuntary. The hand, the head, the body, will without our thought or consent keep time with the tune which floats in upon us from the voice of the sweet singer or the notes of the instrument. TO TEACH, THEREFORE, THAT DANCING IS ITSELF EVIL AND IS TO BE AVOIDED AS SIN IS AS GRAVE AN ERROR AS CAN WELL BE COMMITTED.

It is an impeachment of the truth of God, it is an indictment against the handiwork of our Maker in the highest and best instincts of our nature; it is calculated to bewilder the moral sense, especially of the young, as to good and evil.

DANCING IS NOT INHERENTLY EVIL ANY MORE THAN MONEY IS OR THE DRAMA IS OR MUSIC IS.

It may be and often is abused. There are lascivious dances and there are bad people who dance, and there are occasions when one ought not to dance. So precisely are the lewd songs and improper plays and vile purposes to which money is put, but these are no arguments against the legitimate use of music or the drama or money. One can no more consistently condemn dancing than he can condemn money or music or the drama.

An Unusual Contribution.

A number of years ago Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford were traveling through the middle west incognito. They happened to be in Bloomington, Ind., one Sunday and, pursuant to their usual custom, went to church. They attended the Christian church of Bloomington, then largely in the hands of Amzi Atwater. When the plate was passed for the collection, Mrs. Stanford dropped in a ten dollar goldpiece. Mr. Atwater was the deacon in charge of the collection taking. It was noticed that the ushers held a hurried conference with him when the money was taken forward.

At its conclusion Mr. Atwater said: "Ladies and gentlemen, there has evidently been a mistake. Some one has dropped a ten dollar goldpiece into the collection. If he will pass up after the services, we will be glad to allow him to exchange it for the amount he intended to give."

It is, of course, needless to say that Mrs. Stanford did not take advantage of the opportunity.

William Wirt's Reformation.

William Wirt, the great lawyer, attorney general of the United States and prosecutor of Aaron Burr when he was tried for treason, was stupefied and made sensuous by liquor. At times he lost all self control and self respect. On one occasion while drunk he fell in the streets of Richmond. While lying there asleep Miss G., the most beautiful woman in the city, to whom he was betrothed, came along, saw him and placed her handkerchief, on which was her name, over his face. He wakened, saw the name, learned the incident, and it reformed him.—Beverages.

Two Killed Outright, Six Fatally Injured and $300,000 Damage to Property.

SCORES OF HOUSES WERE REDUCED TO KINDLINGS.

Terrific Western Storms Cause Havoc to Lives and Property—Children Blown For Blocks and Only Slightly Injured.

Joplin, Mo., April 25.—Joplin was visited yesterday by the most destructive storm in its history, during which at least two persons were killed outright, six fatally injured, a score or more seriously hurt and $300,000 worth of property was destroyed.

The Dead.

Esther Hunter, killed by falling timbers.

Martha Cape, colored, died from fright.

Fatally Injured.

No Warning From Storm.

The fury of the storm broke loose at 4:35 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was no premonition of its terrible violence. The wind was a straight gale, but it was of terrible velocity, whipping down scores of houses in the south part of the city and reducing to kindling wood $100,000 worth of the finest mining plants in this district.

The worst havoc in Joplin city was in a territory 10 blocks wide, commencing at the west limits of the city at Seventeenth street and ending at Seventh street on the east. The home of Mrs. Nellie Sullivan was destroyed and the entire family was injured by falling timber. Mrs. Sullivan was badly hurt about the head and face, and her 2-year-old baby was blown 50 yards into a pond and saved from drowning by the heroic efforts of her 7-year-old brother, who had also received injuries from the storm.

Child Blown Three Blocks.

One room of the residence of S. D. Brower, on Ivy street, was blown away and his young son was carried three blocks, receiving only slight injuries.

Three people were killed at Moonshine hill. News of the terrible destruction there did not reach the city until late last night. The hill is now a tangled mass of debris, and not a house is left standing. It is populated mainly by miners who live in little shacks.

Of the little home of Bidwell Hunter not a timber is left standing, and the three inmates of the house are dying, all having had their skulls fractured.

Big Anthracite Deal.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 26.—A big deal in the anthracite coal trade was consummated yesterday. The Algonquin Coal company sold its Pine Ridge and Laurel Run collieries to the Delaware and Hudson company. The two mines have an output of 350,000 tons annually, and employ about 1,000 men.

WILL CONTINUE FIGHT.

National League Determined to Follow Up Victory In Lajoie Case.

New York, April 26.—The National league executive committee completed its first regular session at the Fifth Avenue hotel last night. The members declined to make public their plans for conducting the fight against the American league. James A. Hart of Chicago, admitted that the National league would follow up the victory gained in the Pennsylvania supreme court in the Lajoie case.

The umpire question was taken up, and the committee selected Charles B. Powers of Pittsburg, as the fifth on the staff. Mr. Powers is a newspaper man, has successfully managed several minor leagues, and was once a league umpire.

Two Bodies Recovered.

Cairo, Ills., April 26.—Two bodies were taken from the wreck of the steamer City of Pittsburg yesterday. One was that of a white woman, and was so badly burned that positive identification was impossible. It is supposed to be that of Mrs. Clay Breeze, of Uniontown, Ky. Another body recovered was that of a colored man.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

Berry Howard, on trial at Frankfort, Ky., as the alleged principal in the Goebel assassination, was found not guilty.

An agreement has been entered into among the 2,000 employes of the Chicago and Alton shops at Blomington, Ills., which provides that none of their number will eat meat for 30 days.

The steamer Sunrise burned to the water's edge at her New Orleans wharf. She had as passengers Mr and Mrs. Jerry Davidson, of Ironton, O. All the passengers and crew were saved.

Major Waller and Lieutenant Day, of the marine corps, who were tried by court martial at Manila, on the charge of executing natives of the island of Samar without trial, have been acquitted.

The Cleveland and Sandusky Brewing company secured control of the Schlather Brewing company at a consideration, it is said, of $1,500,000. This purchase gives a clear field to the Cleveland and Sandusky Brewing company in Cleveland and vicinity for the brewing and sale of beer.

The large modern stone barn on the "Soapstone" stock farm of Clement A. Griscom, at Merion, a Philadelphia suburb, was totally destroyed by fire, with seven head of prize cattle, two thoroughbred calves and two thoroughbred horses. The loss is estimated at $50,000; partly insured.

Washington, April 26.—Francis B Gessner, well known as a newspaper correspondent, and who recently served as United States consul in Germany, yesterday was committed to the government hospital for the insane for treatment. He is from Ohio.

OLD TIMES IN TENNESSEE.

When Pelts Were as Plentiful as Pennies In the State.

Probably few people know that the original name of the state of Tennessee was Franklin or that in 1788 the salaries of the officers of this commonwealth were paid in pelts, but the following is a correct copy of the law:

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Franklin, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that from and after the 1st day of January, 1788, the salaries of this commonwealth be as follows—to wit:

"His excellency the governor, per annum, 100 deerskins.

"His honor the chief justice, 500 deerskins.

"The secretary to his excellency the governor, 500 raccoon skins.

"County clerk, 300 beaver skins.

"Clerk of the house of commons, 200 raccoon skins.

"Justice's fee for serving a warrant, one minkskin."

At that time the state of Franklin extended to the east bank of the Mississippi river, and on the west bank was that great unknown forest region of Louisiana. It was then a "terra incognita," save a few canoe landings and Indian trading posts on the river banks. It was known as the district of Louisiana and in 1805 was made the territory of Louisiana.

The state of Franklin, which became Tennessee in 1796, was almost as little known. The now great city of Memphis was a mere trading post and was not laid out as a village until 1820.

Pelts were as plentiful in those days as pennies and much better distributed for purposes of currency and barter. The pioneers were perhaps as happy and as well contented as is the average citizen now.—Arkansas Gazette.

Anniversary Thoughts.

"Hubby, dear, do you know that we will have been married ten years next Tuesday?"

"Yes; I realize that we are getting along and should begin to economize for the needs of the future."

"It is not the future that I am thinking about, but the present."—New York Herald.

TIMELY DOINGS IN SPORTING CIRCLES.

What Champion Jones Says About Jumpers' Training—Interesting Equine Talk—Nasturtium.

S. S. Jones, the intercollegiate champion, speaks as follows on the art of high jumping:

"Almost any healthy young man can, if he so desires, excel in some branch of athletics. What he wants to do is to find out just what comes the easiest to him. I say this because I know that many men could practice for years and never make a success of high jumping, while they might become champions in some other branches of sport in a very short space of time.

"I began 'gym' work when fifteen years old, and it wasn't long before I discovered that the high jump was my forte. I was perhaps greatly aided by my exceptional height, even at that age. I discovered I had a fairly good spring and in a short time I was clearing the bar at 5 feet 2 inches. It came rather natural to me, and I improved steadily. At seventeen I won the interscolastic championship with a jump of 5 feet 10 inches. That shows how fast I had improved. From that time on I gradually improved my record.

"Under six feet I do not take a very hard spring. Above that height I use all the strength I possess in my jumping leg.

"When jumping about six feet, the landing becomes important. Carelessness in this respect may cause an ankle to be turned or a ligament torn. There is only one way to land, and that is in a crouching position, facing the bar.

"A month or so before the contest I try myself out and do this weekly until the event I am training for comes off. It is very necessary to jump to your limit once in awhile in order to become accustomed to a good height."

W. C. Whitney has been having this year a great deal of what sportsmen are in the habit of terming "hard luck." His stable of thoroughbreds was ravaged by influenza, and many of his prospective stake winners received serious setbacks; then his candidate for the English Derby, Nasturtium, was attacked by pneumonia, and last reports indicate that there is but little chance of his recovering old time strength in time to start in the classic of the British turf.

Mr. Whitney paid $50,000 for Nasturtium, and the expense of sending him abroad cost several thousand more. If the horse is not in form for the race, it will be a great disappointment to Mr. Whitney, but he is a thorough sportsman and in that event will probably try to capture next year's Derby. Nasturtium was sold to Mr. Whitney by A. L. Aste, a New York Italian, who started life as a bootblack and still derives his income from a large number of stands.

Richard Croker's recent purchase of Clommell's two yearling colts for 5,000 guineas again directs the attention of the English turfmen to the American's ambition. Mr. Croker is fortifying his stable constantly and is reported as desirous of purchasing several of Mr. Whitney's cracks.

The Croker horses are entered in the chief classic events of the coronation year. He is buying up thoroughbred yearlings because he is ambitious and hopeful of winning a future Derby. The horses at Wantage are in superb condition. Mr. Croker himself overlooks their training.

"Justice's fee for serving a warrant, one minkskin."

At that time the state of Franklin extended to the east bank of the Mississippi river, and on the west bank was that great unknown forest region of Louisiana. It was then a "terra incognita," save a few canoe landings and Indian trading posts on the river banks. It was known as the district of Louisiana and in 1805 was made the territory of Louisiana.

The state of Franklin, which became Tennessee in 1796, was almost as little known. The now great city of Memphis was a mere trading post and was not laid out as a village until 1820.

Pelts were as plentiful in those days as pennies and much better distributed for purposes of currency and barter. The pioneers were perhaps as happy and as well contented as is the average citizen now.—Arkansas Gazette.

Anniversary Thoughts.

"Hubby, dear, do you know that we will have been married ten years next Tuesday?"

"Yes; I realize that we are getting along and should begin to economize for the needs of the future."

TIMELY DOINGS IN SPORTING CIRCLES.

What Champion Jones Says About Jumpers' Training—Interesting Equine Talk—Nasturtium.

S. S. Jones, the intercollegiate champion, speaks as follows on the art of high jumping:

"Almost any healthy young man can, if he so desires, excel in some branch of athletics. What he wants to do is to find out just what comes the easiest to him. I say this because I know that many men could practice for years and never make a success of high jumping, while they might become champions in some other branches of sport in a very short space of time.

"I began 'gym' work when fifteen years old, and it wasn't long before I discovered that the high jump was my forte. I was perhaps greatly aided by my exceptional height, even at that age. I discovered I had a fairly good spring and in a short time I was clearing the bar at 5 feet 2 inches. It came rather natural to me, and I improved steadily. At seventeen I won the interscolastic championship with a jump of 5 feet 10 inches. That shows how fast I had improved. From that time on I gradually improved my record.

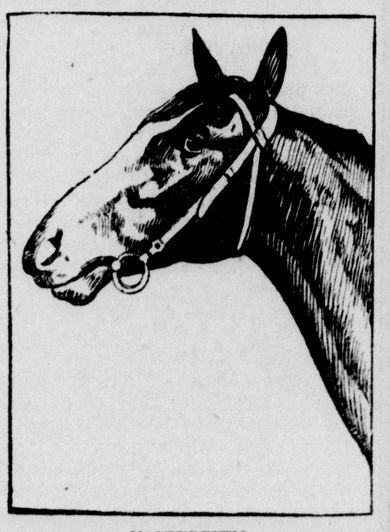

"Under six feet I do not take a very hard spring. Above that height I use all the strength I possess in my jumping leg.

"When jumping about six feet, the landing becomes important. Carelessness in this respect may cause an ankle to be turned or a ligament torn. There is only one way to land, and that is in a crouching position, facing the bar.

"A month or so before the contest I try myself out and do this weekly until the event I am training for comes off. It is very necessary to jump to your limit once in awhile in order to become accustomed to a good height."

W. C. Whitney has been having this year a great deal of what sportsmen are in the habit of terming "hard luck." His stable of thoroughbreds was ravaged by influenza, and many of his prospective stake winners received serious setbacks; then his candidate for the English Derby, Nasturtium, was attacked by pneumonia, and last reports indicate that there is but little chance of his recovering old time strength in time to start in the classic of the British turf.

Mr. Whitney paid $50,000 for Nasturtium, and the expense of sending him abroad cost several thousand more. If the horse is not in form for the race, it will be a great disappointment to Mr. Whitney, but he is a thorough sportsman and in that event will probably try to capture next year's Derby. Nasturtium was sold to Mr. Whitney by A. L. Aste, a New York Italian, who started life as a bootblack and still derives his income from a large number of stands.

Richard Croker's recent purchase of Clommell's two yearling colts for 5,000 guineas again directs the attention of the English turfmen to the American's ambition. Mr. Croker is fortifying his stable constantly and is reported as desirous of purchasing several of Mr. Whitney's cracks.

The Croker horses are entered in the chief classic events of the coronation year. He is buying up thoroughbred yearlings because he is ambitious and hopeful of winning a future Derby. The horses at Wantage are in superb condition. Mr. Croker himself overlooks their training.

EAST LIVERPOOL LOST THE SECOND

Winter A. C. Easily Defeated the Home Team, Score 11 to 5.

VISITORS STARTED WELL

And Maintained Their Lead Until the Finish—The Contest Devoid of Exciting Features—A Number of Clever Plays Made.

The local base ball team played in hard luck yesterday afternoon at West End park, confronted for the second time by the Winter Athletic club, of Pittsburg. At no stage during the game did the locals entertain a hope of victory. They were beaten from the first inning, and at the finish they walked off the field, giving evidence of mortification.

At the beginning of the third inning, when the score stood 2 to 0 in favor of the visitors, East Liverpool made a little spurt by pounding out four hits and scoring as many runs, but they amounted to nothing when the Pittsburgers finished the inning with an addition of four runs to their score. The visitors at this juncture concluded that Diebold would soon be knocked out of the box and to save him the humiliation, Captain Kress let him exchange positions with the right fielder, Jones. It had the desired effect, for in the next three innings neither side scored. The visitors, however, started again in the seventh by scoring a run and following it up with four rune in the eighth.

In the ninth the locals ran their score to five and then quit. The visitors, having 11 runs to their credit, left the park jubilant in victory.

The game was practically featureless, but one play being worthy of praise. That was made in the second inning when Osborne ran nearly to the fence and closed in on Chadwick's high fly.

Pattie Patterson, of Wellsville, did good work in the box for the locals, and also at the bat.

J. Boyle tried in vain to do the grand stand act.

Diebold in the box was rank, but in the field a hard one to beat.

The decisions of Umpire Tyson were conscientiously made and he met the approval of both teams.

Reese, Patterson, Ferguson and Fred Heckathorn carry the batting banners.

CHICAGO CAPITALIST

Investigating the Gas Apparatus Construction Company's Process.

Mr. J. F. Drea, a Chicago iron master and capitalist, was in East Liverpool a few days this week, investigating the Gas Apparatus Construction company's process, in the interests of a Chicago syndicate which is contemplates purchasing the right to use the process in connection with their mills. Mr. Dea, after examining the process and plant, says that it is admirably adapted for use in iron and steel production, particularly on account of it being free of sulphur and other hydrocarbon properties.

He was quite enthusiastic over the process and arranged for a block of stock in the local company for himself and associates.

A LOCAL SYNDICATE

Buys Foreign Gas Rights at a Big Figure.

An unusually large deal was consummated yesterday, when a local syndicate, headed by Robert Burford, president of the Burford Bros. Pottery company, purchased the foreign patent rights in the Judge William Howell Williams process for manufacturing and isolating carbon monoxide gas for commercial purposes.

The consideration is private, but it is known that it runs up into five figures.

This is the process which is being demonstrated by the Gas Apparatus Construction company, in which so many of our local citizens are interested. Mr. Burford feels that he has got a hold on a good thing. Mr. Burford and Mr. Hammerton will go to England in the fall for the purpose of interesting foreign capital.

Age of the Brass Band.

"As antiquities go nowadays," says Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's, "the brass band is a very ancient institution. That is to say, its inventor died in 1894 at the age of eighty. There were horns before Adolphe Sax, to be sure, but not such horns as we have now, for they could not play every tune in every key. They could not even play a scale in any key. The very first band entirely of brass was organized in 1835, and I doubt if any of the instruments then used could be played upon by modern musicians without special practice. It is only back to 1783 when a full regimental band of the British army consisted of two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. It must have sounded even funnier than Tennyson's famous combination of 'flute, violin and bassoon.'

"How long a way we have come since 1783 may be learned from the ensemble of a first class modern band. The modern band of forty-two pieces has half as many oboes and bassoons as the ancient band of eight pieces, seven times as many clarinets and nine times as many horns, to say nothing of the saxaphones, which are part clarinet and part horn."

Odd Drinking Cups.

When every man got drunk and was proud of it in olden days, much ingenuity was expended in the construction of queer and elaborate drinking vessels, and many such are yet to be found in museums, especially in Germany.

One preserved in a Berlin museum represents Diana mounted on a stag and surrounded by hounds and huntsmen. The cup consists of the hollow body of the silver stag, the head of which is removable. The piece stands fourteen inches high. It was made at Augsburg in 1610. It is also an automobile propelled by clockwork concealed in the base.

Trick cups which drenched the uninitiated were very popular. Another variety contained wine and water in separate compartments. The drinker who did not know how to manage them filled his mouth with water, though the cup was apparently full of wine.

The glass with the fighting hares, in the same museum, belonged to Friedrich Wilhelm I. The hares represent two of his ministers and boon companions.—New York Herald.

EAST LIVERPOOL LOST THE SECOND

Winter A. C. Easily Defeated the Home Team, Score 11 to 5.

And Maintained Their Lead Until the Finish—The Contest Devoid of Exciting Features—A Number of Clever Plays Made.

The local base ball team played in hard luck yesterday afternoon at West End park, confronted for the second time by the Winter Athletic club, of Pittsburg. At no stage during the game did the locals entertain a hope of victory. They were beaten from the first inning, and at the finish they walked off the field, giving evidence of mortification.

At the beginning of the third inning, when the score stood 2 to 0 in favor of the visitors, East Liverpool made a little spurt by pounding out four hits and scoring as many runs, but they amounted to nothing when the Pittsburgers finished the inning with an addition of four runs to their score. The visitors at this juncture concluded that Diebold would soon be knocked out of the box and to save him the humiliation, Captain Kress let him exchange positions with the right fielder, Jones. It had the desired effect, for in the next three innings neither side scored. The visitors, however, started again in the seventh by scoring a run and following it up with four rune in the eighth.

In the ninth the locals ran their score to five and then quit. The visitors, having 11 runs to their credit, left the park jubilant in victory.

The game was practically featureless, but one play being worthy of praise. That was made in the second inning when Osborne ran nearly to the fence and closed in on Chadwick's high fly.

Pattie Patterson, of Wellsville, did good work in the box for the locals, and also at the bat.

J. Boyle tried in vain to do the grand stand act.

Diebold in the box was rank, but in the field a hard one to beat.

The decisions of Umpire Tyson were conscientiously made and he met the approval of both teams.

Reese, Patterson, Ferguson and Fred Heckathorn carry the batting banners.

CHICAGO CAPITALIST

Investigating the Gas Apparatus Construction Company's Process.

Mr. J. F. Drea, a Chicago iron master and capitalist, was in East Liverpool a few days this week, investigating the Gas Apparatus Construction company's process, in the interests of a Chicago syndicate which is contemplates purchasing the right to use the process in connection with their mills. Mr. Dea, after examining the process and plant, says that it is admirably adapted for use in iron and steel production, particularly on account of it being free of sulphur and other hydrocarbon properties.

He was quite enthusiastic over the process and arranged for a block of stock in the local company for himself and associates.

A LOCAL SYNDICATE

Buys Foreign Gas Rights at a Big Figure.

An unusually large deal was consummated yesterday, when a local syndicate, headed by Robert Burford, president of the Burford Bros. Pottery company, purchased the foreign patent rights in the Judge William Howell Williams process for manufacturing and isolating carbon monoxide gas for commercial purposes.

The consideration is private, but it is known that it runs up into five figures.

This is the process which is being demonstrated by the Gas Apparatus Construction company, in which so many of our local citizens are interested. Mr. Burford feels that he has got a hold on a good thing. Mr. Burford and Mr. Hammerton will go to England in the fall for the purpose of interesting foreign capital.

Age of the Brass Band.

"As antiquities go nowadays," says Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's, "the brass band is a very ancient institution. That is to say, its inventor died in 1894 at the age of eighty. There were horns before Adolphe Sax, to be sure, but not such horns as we have now, for they could not play every tune in every key. They could not even play a scale in any key. The very first band entirely of brass was organized in 1835, and I doubt if any of the instruments then used could be played upon by modern musicians without special practice. It is only back to 1783 when a full regimental band of the British army consisted of two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. It must have sounded even funnier than Tennyson's famous combination of 'flute, violin and bassoon.'

"How long a way we have come since 1783 may be learned from the ensemble of a first class modern band. The modern band of forty-two pieces has half as many oboes and bassoons as the ancient band of eight pieces, seven times as many clarinets and nine times as many horns, to say nothing of the saxaphones, which are part clarinet and part horn."

Odd Drinking Cups.

When every man got drunk and was proud of it in olden days, much ingenuity was expended in the construction of queer and elaborate drinking vessels, and many such are yet to be found in museums, especially in Germany.

One preserved in a Berlin museum represents Diana mounted on a stag and surrounded by hounds and huntsmen. The cup consists of the hollow body of the silver stag, the head of which is removable. The piece stands fourteen inches high. It was made at Augsburg in 1610. It is also an automobile propelled by clockwork concealed in the base.

Trick cups which drenched the uninitiated were very popular. Another variety contained wine and water in separate compartments. The drinker who did not know how to manage them filled his mouth with water, though the cup was apparently full of wine.

The glass with the fighting hares, in the same museum, belonged to Friedrich Wilhelm I. The hares represent two of his ministers and boon companions.—New York Herald.

Injuries From Carbolic Acid.

Warnings are given in a medical journal against the injury to skin and even bone which may result from the long continued use of weak—say, 3, 2½ or even 2 per cent—carbolized applications, especially upon peripheral portions of the body, such as the fingers. This effect, it is asserted, is due in a small measure to the action of carbolic acid upon the vasomotor system, but in the main to its destructive effect upon the red and white blood corpuscles.

This induces, partly in a mechanical and partly in a chemical way, stasis, first in the capillaries and, if the action of the drug be continued, then in the larger veins and arteries, with the result that the nutrition of the part is interfered with and the removal of the harmful substances hindered; the maceration of the epidermis caused by the acid favors evaporation, that the gangrene is a dry one, a mummification, as it were.

Self Help In Case of Fire.

As a house is never attacked by fire at the top and bottom at once, if there is a safe and ready exit at both top and bottom very little danger to life is to be feared. It is important that all exits should be so known as to be easily found by day or night by every inmate of the house. If the clothes you have on catch fire, a blanket, rug or some such woolen article should be quickly and tightly wrapped around you. Air is thus excluded, and the fire goes out.

A small fire in a room can often be put out in the same way in preference to pouring water on it. In case of fire keep all doors shut as far as possible. If a room is full of smoke, keep low or crawl, because smoke and hot air both rise, leaving the floor comparatively clear.

With a Purpose.

"Wasn't there an ungrammatical sentence in one of your speeches?"

"There was," answered Representative Husker. "I put it there on purpose. You see, we're plain folks up to Punkin Corners, and I don't want my constituents to think I'm getting proud just because I've come to congress."—Washington Star.

Music and Passion.

"I wonder," observed Mrs. B., who resides next door, "if it's as strong as the passion your daughter's music develops in my husband?"

RETALIATED ON MONEY.

Mississippi Senator Must Answer a Charge of Assault.

Washington, April 26.—Senator Hernando D. Money, of Mississippi, yesterday was placed in custody on information sworn out by Orpha D. Shaner, the street car conductor who ejected the senator from his car Thursday. The information charges the senator with assault.

Senator Money, Conductor Shaner and James E. Hooper, the truck foreman of the fire department who assisted the conductor, were arraigned in police court later and their trial set for next Thursday morning. All the parties were given a preliminary examination before District Attorney Mullowny. A witness named Martin said he heard an exchange of words between Money and Shaner regarding a transfer. The senator refused to pay either transfer or fare. The conductor then took hold of and ejected him. While the conductor was returning to the car, with his back to the senator, the latter approached the former and struck him with a knife. Witness Martin swore to this statement and the information then was made out against the senator. Senator Money said he wanted "the whole thing over with as soon as possible."

CABINET DISCUSSED CANAL.

Terms of Propositions in the Panama and Nicaragua Routes.

Washington, April 26.—The cabinet discused the relative propositions of the Colombian and Nicaragua governments in connection with the proposed canal. Both propositions will be submitted to congress at once.

If the Panama route is chosen Colombia gets $7,000,000. If the choice falls on the Nicaragua route, Nicaragua will receive $6,000,000 and Costa Rica $1,000,000. No provision is made in the Colombian protocol for the payment of annual rent. That matter will be left to future adjustment. The agreements as to the Nicaragua canal, however, specifically state of the rent to be paid—which is $30,000 per annum—Nicaragua will get about $25,000 and Costa Rica $5,000. While this rent is merely nominal, it serves a useful purpose in the estimate of the isthmus republics, namely, to continually assert the nominal sovereignty of Nicaragua and Costa Rica over the territory through which the canal is cut.

PORTO RICO'S TRIBUTE.

Nearly 40,000 Island Subscribers to McKinley Memorial Fund.

Cleveland, O., April 26.—Myron T. Herrick, treasurer of the McKinley National Memorial association, has received a remittance of nearly $1,700 from Governor Hunt, of Porto Rico, who has gathered the contributions of the inhabitants of that newly acquired territory.

Nearly forty thousand inhabitants of the island are contributors. Their offerings were in very small amounts, being limited by Governor Hunt to 10 cents each. It is pointed out that a similar unanimity of sentiment here at home would insure the completion of the fund within a very few months.

No Cars Running In Lima.

Lima, O., April 26.—The street railway company made an ineffectual effort yesterday to run cars and break the strike. Motormen who were persuaded to take out cars were immediately driven off by strikers. W. D. Green, a former conductor, was knocked from his car and kicked and beaten. He swore out warrants for the arrest of several strikers. No cars are running, and there is no likelihood of any starting today.

An Ohio Village Doomed.

Findlay, April 26.—Custar, an oil town of about 500 inhabitants, 20 miles northwest of here, is being licked up by flames. The town has asked for aid from surrounding towns and meager messages state that the entire village is doomed. The origin of the fire cannot be learned, but as the buildings are mostly of pine there is little hope of rescue. At this time all communication is shut off.

He only confers favors generously who appears, when they are once conferred, to remember them no more.—Johnson.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 26.—If the opponents of Theodore Shaffer are not balked, a bombshell will be sprung Monday on the floor of the national convention of the Amalgamated association. Yesterday T. H. Flynn, one of the national organizers of the American Federation of Labor, arrived in the city, and stated that the purpose of his visit was to secure a hearing from the convention and refute the assertions President Shaffer has made, both in this convention and before it was assembled, reflecting upon President Samuel Gompers and the attitude of the federation during the steel strike of the summer of 1901.

Interest Centers on Flynn.

Nothing else than Flynn's mission is talked of among the delegates, and they are rapidly dividing into two factions, one desirous of according Flynn a hearing and the other—made up of the more enthusiastic supporters of Shaffer—determined that no outsider shall be accorded a hearing for his admitted purpose of berating the head of the Amalgamated association. Mr. Flynn said in an interview that every assertion reflecting upon Gompers and the federation, published as emanating from Shaffer, was without the shadow of foundation, and this he could readily demonstrate if the convention in a spirit of fairness would accord him the opportunity.

Officers' Policy Approved.

The wage committee practically completed its report yesterday and now all the committees are ready to report to the convention Monday morning. No session was held today on account of the big rally.

The wage committee's report will be submitted Monday. On account of the failure of the committee to get through sooner the delegates have given up all hope of being able to go home Monday night. It now is certain the convention cannot finish until Wednesday. The wage report contains a lengthy argument in favor of the policy followed by the executive officers in signing up before the convention. The minority report is devoted principally to the constitutional argument against the new scales. It is known that the scales themselves are satisfactory to the entire convention. Two days will be required to dispose of the committee reports.

Want Assessments Increased.

Another matter that will require much discussion is the raising of the assessments. The stoutest advocate of increased funds is Walter Larkins, the second district vice president. The plan proposed is to put the assessments on a percentage basis, in accordance with the wages of the members. The present dues are 60 cents a month. The same thing has been tried at several conventions, but always failed. There is more chance of success this year, because the association was handicapped during the last strike by lack of funds, and the delegates realize the necessity of increasing the treasury.

Another city has entered the race for the 1903 convention—Terre Haute, Ind.—but either Columbus or St. Louis will win out. It now looks as though Pittsburg will retain the headquarters, the supporters of Wheeling, Youngstown and Columbus having failed to get together to unite on one when the fight on the floor of the convention is made.

Ticket Speculator Bowled Out.

New York, April 26.—The appellate division of the supreme court decided yesterday that a theater owner might refuse to accept any ticket not sold by himself. The decision was made in a suit brought by W. H. Collister, a ticket speculator, to restrain a theater owner from interfering with the plaintiff's business of selling tickets in front of the theater.

Judge Wm. P. Jenks Dead.

Dubois, Pa., April 26.—Judge William P. Jenks died yesterday at his home in Brookville, aged 80 years. He was a brother of George A. Jenks solicitor general under President Cleveland. Mr. Jenks was formerly president judge of the Jefferson-Clarion district, and had practiced law many years in Western Pennsylvania.

STOCKS SEE-SAWED WITH GRAIN

Large Buying of U. S. Steel—Ten Million Allowance to Underwriters Not Made Clear.

New York, April 26.—There was a persistent tendency Friday among the stocks of grain carrying railroads to move in a see-saw fashion with the price of grain. The heavy liquidation and a heavy break in prices in the early grain market sent prices of the grangers up with a rush, Union Pacific leading with an extreme advance of 2¼. The movement spent its force when it was seen that good buying had developed in the grain market at the decline. The whole market felt the lack of the early aggresive leadership of Union Pacific. There was a late advance in the southern group marked by very large buying of Southern Railway at an extreme advance of 1⅜. Louisville was lifted at the same time 2¾ and Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville rose 3⅛ over Thursday night after erratic fluctuations.

There was large buying of the United States Steel stocks during the morning by brokers usually employed by the syndicate. This buying seemed to be in connection with the issues of the bond circular. The stocks reacted and became dull with the rest of the market. The circular disclosed that $35,000,000 of the proceeds of the bond issue is designed to capitalize expenditures already made for improvements and for properties purchased. The executive committee also estimates that the expenditures of about $25,000,000 for proposed improvements will add from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 to the yearly profits. The $50,000,000 proceeds of the sales of bonds for cash are thus accounted for. The provision for the $10,000,000 allowed the underwriting syndicate and its managers, J. P. Morgan & Co., at the rate of 4 per cent of the $250,000,000 bond issue, is not made clear.

There was a great variety of movements among the specialties. Amalgamated Copper advanced on the conjecture that the consolidation of the Heinze interests was preliminary to their absorption. The stock lost its gain. Sugar was weak on the proposed investigation of the company's Cuban holdings by a senate committee.

The preliminary figures of the week's cash movement indicate receipts on balance from the interior by banks of upwards of $2,000,000, to which is to be added the gain of $937,000 on sub-treasury operations. It is expected also that the early liquidation in the stock market may have contracted bank loans, although speculative borrowing has been renewed and large syndicate transactions may have been in progress.

The activity of the stock market diverted interest from the bond market, but prices there were firmly held. Total sales, par value, $5,305,000. United States bonds were all unchanged on the last call.

EFFECT OF ERRATIC WEATHER.

Season's Vagaries Reflected During Week In Stocks and Grain.

New York, April 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade today will say in part:

Versatile weather has produced erratic fluctuations in prices and affected business very differently, according to locality. The extremes were blizzards and oppressive heat, with every intermediate variety. As the future prosperity of the railways is more or less dependent upon the crops, the vagaries of the weather were quickly reflected in the markets for securities, as well as in option sales of grain and cotton. Retail distribution of merchandise has maintained a good average, losses at some points being offset by gains elsewhere. Manufacturing plants are well employed, except where wage disputes interrupt. Coffee and silver touched low record prices, but the average of commodities advanced. Transporting interests maintain their wonderful record, railway earnings thus far reported for April exceeding last year's by 5.2 per cent and those of 1900 by 15.3 per cent.

Most large consumers of pig iron have provided for their needs well up to the end of the year, and consequently there is little change to report in the situation except as to small orders that appear from time to time.

Quotations received by cable indicate that pressure in the United States has produced a decided advance abroad, and imports, after paying duty and freight, are extremely expensive. Movement of partly manufactured and finished steel products continue on a large scale. A severe setback in London tin speculation caused a decline here, but other minor metals are without special feature. Increased output and quicker deliveries of coke facilitate work at iron furnaces and reduce the price, while the lower list for anthracite coal has stimulated orders. Lumber and building materials are having the usual spring activity.

Failures for the week numbered 212 in the United States, against 215 last year, and 18 in Canada, against 26 a year ago.

Injuries From Carbolic Acid.

Warnings are given in a medical journal against the injury to skin and even bone which may result from the long continued use of weak—say, 3, 2½ or even 2 per cent—carbolized applications, especially upon peripheral portions of the body, such as the fingers. This effect, it is asserted, is due in a small measure to the action of carbolic acid upon the vasomotor system, but in the main to its destructive effect upon the red and white blood corpuscles.

This induces, partly in a mechanical and partly in a chemical way, stasis, first in the capillaries and, if the action of the drug be continued, then in the larger veins and arteries, with the result that the nutrition of the part is interfered with and the removal of the harmful substances hindered; the maceration of the epidermis caused by the acid favors evaporation, that the gangrene is a dry one, a mummification, as it were.

Self Help In Case of Fire.

As a house is never attacked by fire at the top and bottom at once, if there is a safe and ready exit at both top and bottom very little danger to life is to be feared. It is important that all exits should be so known as to be easily found by day or night by every inmate of the house. If the clothes you have on catch fire, a blanket, rug or some such woolen article should be quickly and tightly wrapped around you. Air is thus excluded, and the fire goes out.

A small fire in a room can often be put out in the same way in preference to pouring water on it. In case of fire keep all doors shut as far as possible. If a room is full of smoke, keep low or crawl, because smoke and hot air both rise, leaving the floor comparatively clear.

With a Purpose.

"Wasn't there an ungrammatical sentence in one of your speeches?"

"There was," answered Representative Husker. "I put it there on purpose. You see, we're plain folks up to Punkin Corners, and I don't want my constituents to think I'm getting proud just because I've come to congress."—Washington Star.

"I wonder," observed Mrs. B., who resides next door, "if it's as strong as the passion your daughter's music develops in my husband?"

RETALIATED ON MONEY.

Mississippi Senator Must Answer a Charge of Assault.

Washington, April 26.—Senator Hernando D. Money, of Mississippi, yesterday was placed in custody on information sworn out by Orpha D. Shaner, the street car conductor who ejected the senator from his car Thursday. The information charges the senator with assault.

Senator Money, Conductor Shaner and James E. Hooper, the truck foreman of the fire department who assisted the conductor, were arraigned in police court later and their trial set for next Thursday morning. All the parties were given a preliminary examination before District Attorney Mullowny. A witness named Martin said he heard an exchange of words between Money and Shaner regarding a transfer. The senator refused to pay either transfer or fare. The conductor then took hold of and ejected him. While the conductor was returning to the car, with his back to the senator, the latter approached the former and struck him with a knife. Witness Martin swore to this statement and the information then was made out against the senator. Senator Money said he wanted "the whole thing over with as soon as possible."

CABINET DISCUSSED CANAL.

Terms of Propositions in the Panama and Nicaragua Routes.

Washington, April 26.—The cabinet discused the relative propositions of the Colombian and Nicaragua governments in connection with the proposed canal. Both propositions will be submitted to congress at once.

If the Panama route is chosen Colombia gets $7,000,000. If the choice falls on the Nicaragua route, Nicaragua will receive $6,000,000 and Costa Rica $1,000,000. No provision is made in the Colombian protocol for the payment of annual rent. That matter will be left to future adjustment. The agreements as to the Nicaragua canal, however, specifically state of the rent to be paid—which is $30,000 per annum—Nicaragua will get about $25,000 and Costa Rica $5,000. While this rent is merely nominal, it serves a useful purpose in the estimate of the isthmus republics, namely, to continually assert the nominal sovereignty of Nicaragua and Costa Rica over the territory through which the canal is cut.

PORTO RICO'S TRIBUTE.

Nearly 40,000 Island Subscribers to McKinley Memorial Fund.

Cleveland, O., April 26.—Myron T. Herrick, treasurer of the McKinley National Memorial association, has received a remittance of nearly $1,700 from Governor Hunt, of Porto Rico, who has gathered the contributions of the inhabitants of that newly acquired territory.

Nearly forty thousand inhabitants of the island are contributors. Their offerings were in very small amounts, being limited by Governor Hunt to 10 cents each. It is pointed out that a similar unanimity of sentiment here at home would insure the completion of the fund within a very few months.

No Cars Running In Lima.

Lima, O., April 26.—The street railway company made an ineffectual effort yesterday to run cars and break the strike. Motormen who were persuaded to take out cars were immediately driven off by strikers. W. D. Green, a former conductor, was knocked from his car and kicked and beaten. He swore out warrants for the arrest of several strikers. No cars are running, and there is no likelihood of any starting today.

An Ohio Village Doomed.

Findlay, April 26.—Custar, an oil town of about 500 inhabitants, 20 miles northwest of here, is being licked up by flames. The town has asked for aid from surrounding towns and meager messages state that the entire village is doomed. The origin of the fire cannot be learned, but as the buildings are mostly of pine there is little hope of rescue. At this time all communication is shut off.

He only confers favors generously who appears, when they are once conferred, to remember them no more.—Johnson.

HOME STUDY COURSE

EDITED BY E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS LL.D.

The National Period of American Literature

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D.,

Professor of American Literature in Brown University.

VII.—Motley and Parkman.

JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY, like Sparks and Bancroft and Prescott, was a New England boy, born in Dorchester, Mass., in 1814 and graduated from Harvard in 1831. After two years' study in Germany he read law, as several men of letters had before him, while making up his mind with regard to the branch of literature he would choose for a profession. A semibiographical novel entitled "Morton's Hope" did not encourage him or his friends to believe that fiction was his forte. Neither did the later "Merry Mount, a Romance of the Massachusetts Colony," reverse the first judgment, although the descriptive passages gave promise of something better in after years. Between the two stories he had published a fifty page article in The North American Review on Peter the Great, which was prophetic of his true vocation as a writer of history and biography, whereupon his friends, who had withheld their commendation of his romances, urged him to undertake something large in the historical line.

Meantime his choice of a great historical theme had fallen upon the "Rise of the Dutch Republic." It was an inspiring study, from the remote ages when the barbarian tribes inhabiting the low morasses sent the Batavian legion to be the bodyguard of Roman emperors down to the times of Charles Martel and Charlemagne and of the dukes of Burgundy, when the Netherlands became the richest and most populous part of Europe. And afterward, when the daughter of Charles the Bold took the title to the Austrian Maximilian, her husband, and when their grandson resigned it to Philip II. of Spain, in 1555, the same opulence and splendor went with the transmitted inheritance. So also did a growing Protestantism, an element not agreeable to the last inheritor, who straightway undertook to uproot the new reformation doctrines and to restore the Roman Catholic supremacy by the tyranny of Alva, which eventually united the provinces in a republic whose naval power became the foremost in the world, ultimately compelling Spain to acknowledge its independence and laying the foundation of a colonial system which is still a factor in European politics.

What a fabric he wove out of these musty leaves after ten years of delving was seen in 1856, when the three solid octavos of the "Dutch Republic" were issued simultaneously in London and New York. Readers were enthusiastic in their admiration, and great critics sent in their approval. Edward Everett, Irving, Bancroft, Hillard and Sumner joined in the general acclamation. Prescott's testimony was as valuable as it was graceful since the circle of Motley's investigations had cut into his own, as his previously had intersected the field which Irving had pre-empted.

Motley.

No brief extracts from Motley's voluminous writings can give an adequate idea of their fitness to the general subject or their adaptation to particular sections and episodes. Readers who cannot cover the length and breadth of his historical scheme, embracing as it did the "History of the United Netherlands" and the "Life and Death of John of Barneveld," besides the "Dutch Republic," will judge of the entire work by topics which have a romantic interest both in themselves and in the manner of their treatment by the historian. His portraiture of great personages and his description of stirring events are more faithful and vivid than any painting, because they reproduce changing records and continuous action as pictorial art cannot.

It was not permitted this historian to finish the story of the "Eighty Years' Tragedy" by writing the last act in the "Thirty Years' War." In "John of Barneveld" he had set forth what one of his literary predecessors might have called the "flounderings of a double Dutchman in a sea of theological mud" over the "five points of the Armenians and the seven points of the Gomarites"—foreknowledge, free will, election, irresistible grace, and so on. It was interesting to him as an antitype of a similar wrangle in New England over the same points after the pilgrims came out of Holland. But the brave little state itself found a historian worthy of the valiant people who first rescued its territory from the sea and defended it from the invasion of tyrants. Motley himself, ill treated by the diplomacy which he honored in Vienna and London, has met with a recognition higher than a chief magistrate could bestow or take away in his acknowledged position as all in all our greatest historian.

What Motley did for the discoveries and conquests of Spain in the south of America Parkman accomplished for the aggressions of France in the north. His theme was another instance of the felicity of genius shown in the choice of a subject as well as in its treatment. In his case the field was practically unoccupied when he entered it, and he so cultivated it that there was no need of a second hand. All who shall follow him for some time will find little which he did not mark or reject. They will have to content themselves with the superfluities which he cast away and with what was withheld from him.

Parkman followed the example of a majority of the writers in the New England renaissance in being the son of a minister in revolt against ecclesiastical traditions. Of course he would go to Harvard, where the atmosphere was no longer theologically too high and dry. Then, like his immediate predecessors, he had to try his hand at historical fiction in "Vassall Morton" before settling down to history writing. One other experiment he also made in going to live with the Sioux Indians in the Black Hills in order to study the Indian as he is, or rather was, before he donned an old silk hat for the principal part of his costume. In 1846 the genuine Dacotah was wrapped in a blanket, decorated with feathers and paint and armed with arrows and lance. He was like his forefathers, whose alliance with the French was to be a large feature of the struggle which Parkman was going to recount. Then there was the half breed trapper, another element in the story, combining the characteristics of both races. The Frenchman was an easier study from the present life and historical documents. Unfortunately Parkman came out of this instructive but unnatural episode of savage living with eyesight so impaired by glaring sunlight and wigwam smoke that his subsequent researches were to be attended with the same difficulties that beset Prescott. But the same courageous persistence was his, and also the same triumphant achievement.

Parkman.

It began with a series of magazine sketches, which were published in a volume in 1847, entitled "The Oregon Trail—Sketches of Prairie and Rocky Mountain Life," a transcript of the adventure above mentioned and a preliminary study to the series he was about to write, as "The Conspiracy of Pontiac," his next book, was a sequel to that series in describing a sort of final shot from a retreating foe after the battle was over. Then came the real opening of the dramatic story in "The Pioneers of France In the New World," 1865, followed at intervals of two or three years by "The Jesuits In North America In the Seventeenth Century," "La Salle; or The Discovery of the Great West," "The Old Regime In Canada," "Count Frontenac and New France Under Louis XIV." and "Montcalm and Wolfe." Together these books are chapters in the history of the contest between France and England for the possession of this continent, the attempt of the one to surround the other by a line of hostile forces along the great waterway of river and lake from the gulf of St. Lawrence to the gulf of Mexico and to crowd English colonists to the seashore and into the sea. The alternative was that the colonists of France might be overrun and dispersed with their savage allies by the encroaching English, who were fast becoming Americans and, it may be added, who were immensely helped in the process by the ensuing French and Indian war, which showed them their strength.

The history of the war had been written after a fashion for schoolboys and in a more elaborate way for adults in the larger histories. An exhaustive treatment of the subject, involving researches in the archives of Canada and France and personal inspection of places where events occurred, became the life work of Francis Parkman. For fifty years he labored with the assistance of readers and copyists, visiting the libraries of Europe seven times and accumulating 200 folio volumes of copied documents. The assimilation and condensation of these in his mind took final shape in sentences, paragraphs, chapters and books dictated to amanuenses. It is another instance of the triumph of the intellect over conventional methods of labor with the pen and by the sight of the eyes. Happily this man's fortune permitted him to employ others to do for him what his infirmities did not allow him to undertake.

Doubtless the result was not diminished in quantity or quality. As it stands the work is a monument to industry, perseverance and devotion to an early purpose in the face of hindrances full of annoyance and pain.

In fixing for posterity the fading image and likeness of a passing race of an almost prehistoric barbarism; in depicting the traits of a monarchy which was more absolute here than in its native France, but now is obsolete as the words it left in the wilds of Canada; in portraying the sturdy freedom of the British colonist at a convenient distance from a throne not too paternal, except in the matter of revenue; in the description of a wilderness glory untouched by man; in recounting the deeds of valor, devotion and sacrifice and in painting all the wild pageantry of border warfare, Parkman has made the strife of races for the possession of North America as picturesque as romance without surrendering the truth of history.

Why Man Flight Is So Difficult

By Professor SIMON NEWCOMB, Mathematician and Astronomer

ALTOGETHER, from an ideal viewpoint, the flying machine seems quite within our reach. But before we can reach out and grasp it we must go through a complicated course of calculation based upon the strength and weight of materials, power of engines, heat of combustion and laws of aerial resistance. Until we make this calculation we are like the child to whom the task of putting a ladder up to the moon seemed so simple that he cried to have it done.

BOTH THE LAWS AND THE FACTS GOVERNING THE CASE ARE COMPLETELY WORKED OUT BY EXPERIMENT AND WELL UNDERSTOOD. THE INVENTOR HAS ONLY TO BRING THESE LAWS AND FACTS TO HIS AID TO SAVE HIMSELF A GREAT DEAL OF TIME AND MONEY WHICH MIGHT OTHERWISE BE EXPENDED IN MAKING MACHINES THAT COULD NOT FLY.

Let him put his machine on paper, giving material and dimensions of every part, and then call in the aid of the expert physicist. The latter can determine in advance what lifting power the machine will have. If this prove equal to the weight of the machine plus that of the man who can guide it, the problem is solved. If this power is found to be only a little greater than the weight of the machine, we shall have something that will fly, but will not be of any use.

WHAT CAN WE SAY OF THE ULTIMATE OUTCOME? ON THE AFFIRMATIVE SIDE ONLY THIS: THAT NO ONE HAS YET DEMONSTRATED THE ABSOLUTE IMPOSSIBILITY OF ACCOMPLISHING THE DESIRED FEAT.

What is certain is that no one will ever fly to any great height or to any considerable distance until some metal or alloy is discovered which will combine strength with lightness in a far higher degree than any metal or alloy at present known to us. There are limitations, too, at every turn upon what a machine can do. The speed at which a rotating apparatus of any sort can turn has its limit. The larger its size the fewer turns it can make in a second. Let us consider the central axis as at rest. Then the extreme speed of the outer circumferences, as it turns, can never exceed a few hundred feet a second without the centrifugal force endangering the machine.

Just how many hundred feet will depend upon the skill of the inventor in combining his materials, but if he ever approaches a speed of a thousand feet a second his whirligig, whatever he makes it of, will fly to pieces by its own centrifugal force.

Two Great Painters.

When in Haarlem, Vandyke called upon Frank Hals and, without making himself known, said that he was anxious to have his portrait painted, but, as he was in a great hurry, he could spare but two hours, at the end of which the portrait must be done. Hals went to work and finished it, and Vandyke was much pleased. But portrait painting seemed a very little thing, said Vandyke, and he asked Hals to change places with him. Hals did so, and as Vandyke finished his work Hals hugged him enthusiastically, saying: "You are Vandyke. No one but he can do what you have done." And so the two great masters became acquainted.

Where English Clubs Differ.

A point which strikes American visitors to London about our English clubs is the social aspect of them and the almost complete absence of the business side. At the Manhattan or the Knickerbocker, on the other hand, the business side prevails. The majority of members do not drop in merely to read the papers, hear the latest story and play billiards, as over here. They go in most cases to meet a man about "a deal," to talk over the business of the day and discuss the business of the morrow or to read up the finance of the papers. The result is that when an American becomes a member of an English club he hardly ever uses it because its ways do not appeal to him. He would say that there was nothing going on.—London Tatler.

Cards in the Curriculum.

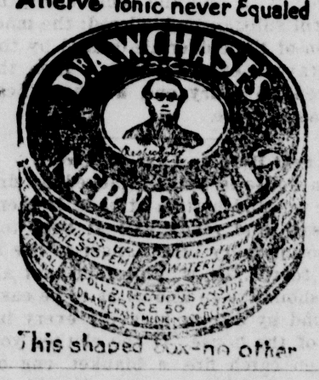

The custom of encouraging our children to perfect themselves in card games is by no means of modern growth. There must have been a substratum of truth in the following jesting paragraph, which is clipped from The Times of Nov. 2, 1797: "At some of our first boarding schools the fair pupils are now taught to play whist and cassino. Amongst their winning ways this may not be the least agreeable to papa and mamma. It is calculated that a clever child, by its cards and its novels, may pay for its own education."—London Chronicle.

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman, writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

HOME STUDY COURSE

EDITED BY E. BENJAMIN ANDREWS LL.D.

The National Period of American Literature

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D.,
Professor of American Literature in Brown University.

VII.—Motley and Parkman.

JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY, like Sparks and Bancroft and Prescott, was a New England boy, born in Dorchester, Mass., in 1814 and graduated from Harvard in 1831. After two years' study in Germany he read law, as several men of letters had before him, while making up his mind with regard to the branch of literature he would choose for a profession. A semibiographical novel entitled "Morton's Hope" did not encourage him or his friends to believe that fiction was his forte. Neither did the later "Merry Mount, a Romance of the Massachusetts Colony," reverse the first judgment, although the descriptive passages gave promise of something better in after years. Between the two stories he had published a fifty page article in The North American Review on Peter the Great, which was prophetic of his true vocation as a writer of history and biography, whereupon his friends, who had withheld their commendation of his romances, urged him to undertake something large in the historical line.

Meantime his choice of a great historical theme had fallen upon the "Rise of the Dutch Republic." It was an inspiring study, from the remote ages when the barbarian tribes inhabiting the low morasses sent the Batavian legion to be the bodyguard of Roman emperors down to the times of Charles Martel and Charlemagne and of the dukes of Burgundy, when the Netherlands became the richest and most populous part of Europe. And afterward, when the daughter of Charles the Bold took the title to the Austrian Maximilian, her husband, and when their grandson resigned it to Philip II. of Spain, in 1555, the same opulence and splendor went with the transmitted inheritance. So also did a growing Protestantism, an element not agreeable to the last inheritor, who straightway undertook to uproot the new reformation doctrines and to restore the Roman Catholic supremacy by the tyranny of Alva, which eventually united the provinces in a republic whose naval power became the foremost in the world, ultimately compelling Spain to acknowledge its independence and laying the foundation of a colonial system which is still a factor in European politics.

What a fabric he wove out of these musty leaves after ten years of delving was seen in 1856, when the three solid octavos of the "Dutch Republic" were issued simultaneously in London and New York. Readers were enthusiastic in their admiration, and great critics sent in their approval. Edward Everett, Irving, Bancroft, Hillard and Sumner joined in the general acclamation. Prescott's testimony was as valuable as it was graceful since the circle of Motley's investigations had cut into his own, as his previously had intersected the field which Irving had pre-empted.

Motley.

No brief extracts from Motley's voluminous writings can give an adequate idea of their fitness to the general subject or their adaptation to particular sections and episodes. Readers who cannot cover the length and breadth of his historical scheme, embracing as it did the "History of the United Netherlands" and the "Life and Death of John of Barneveld," besides the "Dutch Republic," will judge of the entire work by topics which have a romantic interest both in themselves and in the manner of their treatment by the historian. His portraiture of great personages and his description of stirring events are more faithful and vivid than any painting, because they reproduce changing records and continuous action as pictorial art cannot.

It was not permitted this historian to finish the story of the "Eighty Years' Tragedy" by writing the last act in the "Thirty Years' War." In "John of Barneveld" he had set forth what one of his literary predecessors might have called the "flounderings of a double Dutchman in a sea of theological mud" over the "five points of the Armenians and the seven points of the Gomarites"—foreknowledge, free will, election, irresistible grace, and so on. It was interesting to him as an antitype of a similar wrangle in New England over the same points after the pilgrims came out of Holland. But the brave little state itself found a historian worthy of the valiant people who first rescued its territory from the sea and defended it from the invasion of tyrants. Motley himself, ill treated by the diplomacy which he honored in Vienna and London, has met with a recognition higher than a chief magistrate could bestow or take away in his acknowledged position as all in all our greatest historian.

What Motley did for the discoveries and conquests of Spain in the south of America Parkman accomplished for the aggressions of France in the north. His theme was another instance of the felicity of genius shown in the choice of a subject as well as in its treatment. In his case the field was practically unoccupied when he entered it, and he so cultivated it that there was no need of a second hand. All who shall follow him for some time will find little which he did not mark or reject. They will have to content themselves with the superfluities which he cast away and with what was withheld from him.

Parkman followed the example of a majority of the writers in the New England renaissance in being the son of a minister in revolt against ecclesiastical traditions. Of course he would go to Harvard, where the atmosphere was no longer theologically too high and dry. Then, like his immediate predecessors, he had to try his hand at historical fiction in "Vassall Morton" before settling down to history writing. One other experiment he also made in going to live with the Sioux Indians in the Black Hills in order to study the Indian as he is, or rather was, before he donned an old silk hat for the principal part of his costume. In 1846 the genuine Dacotah was wrapped in a blanket, decorated with feathers and paint and armed with arrows and lance. He was like his forefathers, whose alliance with the French was to be a large feature of the struggle which Parkman was going to recount. Then there was the half breed trapper, another element in the story, combining the characteristics of both races. The Frenchman was an easier study from the present life and historical documents. Unfortunately Parkman came out of this instructive but unnatural episode of savage living with eyesight so impaired by glaring sunlight and wigwam smoke that his subsequent researches were to be attended with the same difficulties that beset Prescott. But the same courageous persistence was his, and also the same triumphant achievement.

Parkman.

It began with a series of magazine sketches, which were published in a volume in 1847, entitled "The Oregon Trail—Sketches of Prairie and Rocky Mountain Life," a transcript of the adventure above mentioned and a preliminary study to the series he was about to write, as "The Conspiracy of Pontiac," his next book, was a sequel to that series in describing a sort of final shot from a retreating foe after the battle was over. Then came the real opening of the dramatic story in "The Pioneers of France In the New World," 1865, followed at intervals of two or three years by "The Jesuits In North America In the Seventeenth Century," "La Salle; or The Discovery of the Great West," "The Old Regime In Canada," "Count Frontenac and New France Under Louis XIV," and "Montcalm and Wolfe." Together these books are chapters in the history of the contest between France and England for the possession of this continent, the attempt of the one to surround the other by a line of hostile forces along the great waterway of river and lake from the gulf of St. Lawrence to the gulf of Mexico and to crowd English colonists to the seashore and into the sea. The alternative was that the colonists of France might be overrun and dispersed with their savage allies by the encroaching English, who were fast becoming Americans and, it may be added, who were immensely helped in the process by the ensuing French and Indian war, which showed them their strength.

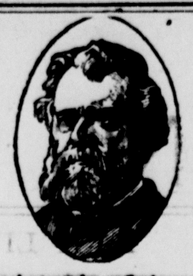

The history of the war had been written after a fashion for schoolboys and in a more elaborate way for adults in the larger histories. An exhaustive treatment of the subject, involving researches in the archives of Canada and France and personal inspection of places where events occurred, became the life work of Francis Parkman. For fifty years he labored with the assistance of readers and copyists, visiting the libraries of Europe seven times and accumulating 200 folio volumes of copied documents. The assimilation and condensation of these in his mind took final shape in sentences, paragraphs, chapters and books dictated to amanuenses. It is another instance of the triumph of the intellect over conventional methods of labor with the pen and by the sight of the eyes. Happily this man's fortune permitted him to employ others to do for him what his infirmities did not allow him to undertake.

Doubtless the result was not diminished in quantity or quality. As it stands the work is a monument to industry, perseverance and devotion to an early purpose in the face of hindrances full of annoyance and pain.

In fixing for posterity the fading image and likeness of a passing race of an almost prehistoric barbarism; in depicting the traits of a monarchy which was more absolute here than in its native France, but now is obsolete as the words it left in the wilds of Canada; in portraying the sturdy freedom of the British colonist at a convenient distance from a throne not too paternal, except in the matter of revenue; in the description of a wilderness glory untouched by man; in recounting the deeds of valor, devotion and sacrifice and in painting all the wild pageantry of border warfare, Parkman has made the strife of races for the possession of North America as picturesque as romance without surrendering the truth of history.

BURIED BY BROWN

ECCENTRICITIES OF NEW YORK'S MOST NOTED SEXTON.

For Many Years He Ministered to the Aristocracy of the City at Grace Church, and His Name Adorns a Tablet on Its Walls.

It used to be said that a stranger who was visiting New York for the first time and asked his hotel clerk for advice as to what he should do on Sunday morning would find his doubts quickly reduced to the alternative, "Go over to Brooklyn and hear Beecher" or "Go to Grace church and see Brown." No prelate of the Episcopal church was so widely known either in or beyond his New York diocese as this valiant guardian of old Grace, whose income, it was estimated, was greater than that of any man in the cloth and whose power in society was even more feared than that of any bishop.

He received his appointment as sexton from the Rev. Dr. Thomas House Taylor, and, while Dr. Taylor has been long forgotten, Sexton Brown is still almost as much remembered in the great city as Jim Fisk, A. T. Stewart or Charles Delmonico.

Brown would cultivate the acquaintance of head waiters and cooks, securing the latest information as to the social plans of their masters and mistresses, and whenever he learned that a party or a ball was under consideration he would offer his services to deliver the invitations or look after the comfort of the guests or superintend their arrival and departure in their carriages. Beginning in this humble way, it was not long before he gained the good will of distinguished patrons.

His authoritative manner, too, was admirable for such occasions. Indeed the host himself could hardly issue a command to his menials with the suavely peremptory emphasis which Brown employed. Such was his deportment and such his trustworthy zeal that it was said that no one in Grace church could be properly feasted or buried or could even say his prayers without the assistance of Brown, and eventually it became something like a dictum in a large portion of society that nobody could be married in New York in truly first class style unless Brown's presence blessed the bridal party.

Nor did any detail that might be wanting for the personal comfort of the congregation escape his vigilant eye. It was a habit of old Peter Stuyvesant, for example, to keep in his pew a thermometer. As soon as he had taken his seat he would consult it. One winter morning when the temperature was extremely low the furnaces of the church got out of order, and Brown's assistants were able to force through them only enough heat to lessen the chill a little. It occurred to Brown that the condition of the atmosphere would not be conducive to either the piety or the comfort of the aged Stuyvesant. When the old gentleman arrived within the porch of the church, he was shivering with the cold, but without attracting his attention Brown, who knew that the first thing he would do would be to step into his pew and examine the thermometer, slipped in ahead, pressed one of his fat fingers to the little glass bulb and chuckled as he saw the mercury ascend to 72. When Stuyvesant reached the pew, he consulted the thermometer as usual, looked around wonderingly, but evidently concluded that the church must be warm enough and that therefore it must be himself who was cold.

Brown's funeral was marked by much of the pomp and circumstance which he himself had so often provided for the rich and the great. The wits said that it was the first in forty years that had been a perfectly correct performance without his individual guidance. He had died in the little town of Brandford one August night in 1880. There he had been in the habit of taking his summer rest. He had been overcome by the heat while attending a wedding at Brandford, and that summer he complained, probably for the first time in his life, of ill health. One of his orders was that his body should be placed in a casket of polished Spanish cedar.

A more ponderous casket had been carried up the aisle of Grace church. It was rich with silver and velvet. It was so heavy—its interior being large enough for two ordinary corpses—that the eight Knights Templars who bore it into the church almost staggered with their burden. Upon it lay their cocked hats with waving ostrich plumes. Within the chancel stood four of the clergy, in the pews were the representatives of some of the proudest families of the city, and a long line of men and women filed into the church showing all the signs of sorrow for an old friend and neighbor.

On the left hand side of Grace church as one turns after entering the porch under the bell tower and near where Brown was wont for more than a generation to take his station every Sunday is a shining brass tablet. It was there placed by members of the congregation in token of him who is described upon it as "The Faithful Sexton" and whom they "gladly recall for his fidelity, his generosity and his stainless integrity." It is next to the bas-relief which commemorates the virtues of the illustrious Cadwallader D. Colden, once mayor of New York—what greater posthumous glory would Brown have craved?—and is not less conspicuous than the old tablet on the opposite side which was erected to the memory of Henry Brevoort, whose family was derived in "unbroken descent from the colonists of New Netherlands."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Wanted— Simpler Living By the Rich

By Professor FELIX ADLER, President of the Ethical Culture Society

WHEN A CERTAIN MULTIMILLIONAIRE DECLARED THAT IT WAS A DISGRACE TO DIE RICH, HE EXPRESSED A SENTIMENT THAT MUST IN TIME OBTAIN. It is interesting to note that in ancient times the æsthetic Hindoo and the æsthetic Christian believed in escaping from any complicity in the wrongs done to the poor by the rich and removed himself entirely from all temptations to enter into the pursuit of wealth. St. Francis tells us that the food that rich men eat is seasoned by the tears of the poor from whom it was wrung; that it is tainted with injustice, wrong and suffering, and that a just man should embrace poverty as his bride.

Our modern attitude seems to have gone so far as to induce people to voluntarily take up their abiding place with the poor, to associate with them and to bear their hardships. The appeal of the tenement settlement is very strong.

There was a time when I thought seriously of going into the tenement district of New York city to live, but when my first child was born I thought it would be monstrous in me to subject it to the degrading influences that abound in a poverty stricken district. THE SOCIAL SETTLEMENT IDEA IS PICTURESQUE, BUT IS HARDLY PRACTICAL.

I SHOULD SAY THAT OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD WEALTH SHOULD BE THE SAME AS IT IS TOWARD FOOD. WE SHOULD CONFORM TO THE LAWS OF SIMPLICITY.

In his last book Booker T. Washington, whom I believe to be, without a single reservation, one of the greatest men our country has produced, tells us that the senseless waste at our sixteen course public dinners always saddens him.

Let us in dispensing wealth act on the same principle as that which governs a sane, well balanced man in taking food—consume just as much as is wholesome and necessary for our needs and avoid luxury of every kind not only because the sight of luxury excites envy, but because it produces such preposterous results.

A wealthy man has his valet, as if he were too feeble to put on his clothes. He cannot be seen opening a door, but must have an obsequious footman to turn the knob.

AFTER AWHILE WE SHALL HAVE STOUT PORTERS TO CARRY THESE RICH PERSONS OUT OF THEIR CARRIAGES INTO THEIR HOUSES.

Luxury is enervating because it creates the false idea that the glory of life consists in having people to do things for you.

HEART STIMULANT.

Cold Applications Superior to Drafts of Alcohol.

There is a deep seated belief amounting almost to a superstition that alcohol is a very important heart stimulant, especially when this organ is weak. Winternitz, the great authority on hydrotherapy in Germany, has often told us of the very great value of cold as a heart stimulant or tonic and that it is far superior to alcohol in this respect. Dr. Kellogg gives the method of application as follows:

"The application consists of a compress applied to the portion of the chest wall over the heart. This comprises the space bounded by the second rib above, the right border of the sternum, a line falling a half inch to the right of the nipple and the sixth rib below. The compress should be large enough to cover this space and to extend at least two inches outside of it. Ordinarily the best effects are produced by employing water at a temperature of about 60 degrees. The compress should be wrung moderately dry and should be very lightly covered. It is desirable that cooling by slow evaporation should be encouraged and be continued for some time."

Dr. Kellogg continues: "In Germany and France it is the custom to administer alcohol to the patient just before putting him in a cold bath. Some practitioners, as Winternitz, administer but a very small amount, a single mouthful of wine, for instance, while others give brandy in considerable quantities. A few American practitioners employ brandy freely with the cold bath. The unwisdom of this practice will be apparent on due consideration of the following facts:

"One purpose in administering the cold bath is to secure a true stimulant or tonic effect by arousing the vital energies through excitation of the nerve centers. Alcohol was once supposed to be capable of effecting this and was used for this purpose in typhoid fever and various other morbid conditions accompanied by depression of the vital forces. At the present time, however, it is well known, and with practical unanimity admitted, that alcohol is neither a tonic nor a stimulant, but a narcotic; that it depresses and does not excite; that it lessens and does not increase the activity of the nerve centers, and that this is true of small as well as large doses, as has been shown by the researches of careful investigators."—Health.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Give the roots of trees a deep and broad bed of soil to start and grow in.

In pruning the grape cut back to the third bud, as it is usually the first entirely perfect bud produced.

When winds prevail from any direction, as they usually do, lean the tree a little in that direction when setting out.

The essentials in making a good garden are rich soil, plenty of manure, good seeds, timely labor and a fair season.

Having the soil in a good tilth and planting in straight rows will save much labor in cultivating in the garden.

One of the best ways of getting rid of moss and lichens adhering to the bark of trees is an application of lime whitewash.

In taking trees from a nursery or forest, preserve all of the roots and fine rootlets possible. Dig out instead of pulling up the tree.

When the fruit or leaves of any plant or tree are eaten by insects of any kind, spraying in good season and sufficiently often is the safest and best remedy.

Gladiolus bulbs should be planted in full sunshine, four or five inches deep and about one foot apart. Good soil, rather sandy, is best, avoiding manure, especially if fresh.

PROLONGED BY YEARS.

Short Lives Lengthened By Removing Cause of Disease.

Many Glowing Tributes Paid to Blood Wine, The Great French Discovery, Which Cures Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, etc.

That "Blood Wine" fully comes up to the expectations of our people is evidenced by the expression of satisfaction from the many who have already given it a test. "If I had to go without some of the necessities of life, I would have 'Blood Wine' in the house," said a certain gentleman living in the northern part of the city. It wards off coughs, colds, indigestion, bowel troubles and a dozen and one other diseases that are apt to attack any one. "A bottle of good medicine always handy is the 'stitch in time' that saves suffering and misery; and this is just the kind of medicine that will do it." To begin away down at the roots of any sickness, what is the first step to be taken? "Purify the blood," is the answer from every physician. Regulate the bowels and purify the blood. Microbes, Bacteria, Bacilli and all kinds of germs float through the system in the blood.

Just stop and reason it out; think of your blood teeming with these myriads of little demons, floating hither and thither like wreckage on a great ocean, to be cast up against the delicate organs of the system where they find lodging places, stay, thrive and breed, perhaps in the lungs, perhaps in the throat, kidneys, heart or tender tissues of the body anywhere. This is the beginning of trouble. Cleanse your blood and you purify the whole system.

With pure blood and a good circulation no one ever contracted consumption or other fatal disease. "Blood Wine" gives new life because it makes new blood. It brings rest and quiet because it soothes the nerves; it creates a good appetite by toning up the digestive organs; it regulates the system by producing healthy, regular operations of the bowels. It kills that tired feeling and makes one feel like running, jumping and exercising; it gives elasticity to the body by acting directly on the muscles and causing them to respond to the mind's dictates. One teaspoonful of "Blood Wine" makes the blood tingle; it is instantaneous in its action and leaves no room for doubt. It contains no wine or opiates.

"Blood Wine" costs fifty cents a bottle but you can sample it at Will Reed and Hodson's drug stores, free of charge. It stands on its own merits; it is the only medicine that has ever been placed on sale with the local dealer authorized to keep a bottle of it always open to be administered to anyone free of cost.

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

If you haven't a regular, healthy movement of the bowels every day, you're ill or will be. Keep your bowels open, and be well. Force, in the shape of violent physic or pill poison, is dangerous. The smoothest, easiest, most perfect way of keeping the bowels clear and clean is to take

BURIED BY BROWN

ECCENTRICITIES OF NEW YORK'S MOST NOTED SEXTON.

For Many Years He Ministered to the Aristocracy of the City at Grace Church, and His Name Adorns a Tablet on Its Walls.

It used to be said that a stranger who was visiting New York for the first time and asked his hotel clerk for advice as to what he should do on Sunday morning would find his doubts quickly reduced to the alternative, "Go over to Brooklyn and hear Beecher" or "Go to Grace church and see Brown." No prelate of the Episcopal church was so widely known either in or beyond his New York diocese as this valiant guardian of old Grace, whose income, it was estimated, was greater than that of any man in the cloth and whose power in society was even more feared than that of any bishop.

He received his appointment as sexton from the Rev. Dr. Thomas House Taylor, and, while Dr. Taylor has been long forgotten, Sexton Brown is still almost as much remembered in the great city as Jim Fisk, A. T. Stewart or Charles Delmonico.

Brown would cultivate the acquaintance of head waiters and cooks, securing the latest information as to the social plans of their masters and mistresses, and whenever he learned that a party or a ball was under consideration he would offer his services to deliver the invitations or look after the comfort of the guests or superintend their arrival and departure in their carriages. Beginning in this humble way, it was not long before he gained the good will of distinguished patrons.

His authoritative manner, too, was admirable for such occasions. Indeed the host himself could hardly issue a command to his menials with the suavely peremptory emphasis which Brown employed. Such was his deportment and such his trustworthy zeal that it was said that no one in Grace church could be properly feasted or buried or could even say his prayers without the assistance of Brown, and eventually it became something like a dictum in a large portion of society that nobody could be married in New York in truly first class style unless Brown's presence blessed the bridal party.

Nor did any detail that might be wanting for the personal comfort of the congregation escape his vigilant eye. It was a habit of old Peter Stuyvesant, for example, to keep in his pew a thermometer. As soon as he had taken his seat he would consult it. One winter morning when the temperature was extremely low the furnaces of the church got out of order, and Brown's assistants were able to force through them only enough heat to lessen the chill a little. It occurred to Brown that the condition of the atmosphere would not be conducive to either the piety or the comfort of the aged Stuyvesant. When the old gentleman arrived within the porch of the church, he was shivering with the cold, but without attracting his attention Brown, who knew that the first thing he would do would be to step into his pew and examine the thermometer, slipped in ahead, pressed one of his fat fingers to the little glass bulb and chuckled as he saw the mercury ascend to 72. When Stuyvesant reached the pew, he consulted the thermometer as usual, looked around wonderingly, but evidently concluded that the church must be warm enough and that therefore it must be himself who was cold.

Brown's funeral was marked by much of the pomp and circumstance which he himself had so often provided for the rich and the great. The wits said that it was the first in forty years that had been a perfectly correct performance without his individual guidance. He had died in the little town of Brandford one August night in 1880. There he had been in the habit of taking his summer rest. He had been overcome by the heat while attending a wedding at Brandford, and that summer he complained, probably for the first time in his life, of ill health. One of his orders was that his body should be placed in a casket of polished Spanish cedar.

A more ponderous casket had been carried up the aisle of Grace church. It was rich with silver and velvet. It was so heavy—its interior being large enough for two ordinary corpses—that the eight Knights Templars who bore it into the church almost staggered with their burden. In pruning the grape cut back to the third bud, as it is usually the first entirely perfect bud produced.

When winds prevail from any direction, as they usually do, lean the tree a little in that direction when setting out.

The essentials in making a good garden are rich soil, plenty of manure, good seeds, timely labor and a fair season.

Having the soil in a good tilth and planting in straight rows will save much labor in cultivating in the garden.

One of the best ways of getting rid of moss and lichens adhering to the bark of trees is an application of lime whitewash.

In taking trees from a nursery or forest, preserve all of the roots and fine rootlets possible. Dig out instead of pulling up the tree.

When the fruit or leaves of any plant or tree are eaten by insects of any kind, spraying in good season and sufficiently often is the safest and best remedy.

Gladiolus bulbs should be planted in full sunshine, four or five inches deep and about one foot apart. Good soil, rather sandy, is best, avoiding manure, especially if fresh.

Good Advice.

The most miserable beings in the world are those suffering from Dispepsia and Liver Complaint. More than seventy-five per cent. of the people in the United States are afflicted with these two diseases and their effects; such as Sour Stomach, Sick Headache, Habitual Costiveness, Palpitation of the Heart, Heartburn, Waterbrash, Gnowing and Burning Pains at the Pit of the Stomach, Yellow Skin, Coated Tongue and Disagreeable Taste in the Mouth, Coming Up of Food After Eating, Low Spirits, etc Go to your druggist and get a bottle of August Flower for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you. Try it at Charles F. Craig's, Foutts building, East Liverpool, Ohio. Get Green's Special Almanac.

PROLONGED BY YEARS.

Short Lives Lengthened By Removing Cause of Disease.

Many Glowing Tributes Paid to Blood Wine, The Great French Discovery, Which Cures Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, etc.

That "Blood Wine" fully comes up to the expectations of our people is evidenced by the expression of satisfaction from the many who have already given it a test. "If I had to go without some of the necessities of life, I would have 'Blood Wine' in the house," said a certain gentleman living in the northern part of the city. It wards off coughs, colds, indigestion, bowel troubles and a dozen and one other diseases that are apt to attack any one. "A bottle of good medicine always handy is the 'stitch in time' that saves suffering and misery; and this is just the kind of medicine that will do it." To begin away down at the roots of any sickness, what is the first step to be taken? "Purify the blood," is the answer from every physician. Regulate the bowels and purify the blood. Microbes, Bacteria, Bacilli and all kinds of germs float through the system in the blood.

Just stop and reason it out; think of your blood teeming with these myriads of little demons, floating hither and thither like wreckage on a great ocean, to be cast up against the delicate organs of the system where they find lodging places, stay, thrive and breed, perhaps in the lungs, perhaps in the throat, kidneys, heart or tender tissues of the body anywhere. This is the beginning of trouble. Cleanse your blood and you purify the whole system.

With pure blood and a good circulation no one ever contracted consumption or other fatal disease. "Blood Wine" gives new life because it makes new blood. It brings rest and quiet because it soothes the nerves; it creates a good appetite by toning up the digestive organs; it regulates the system by producing healthy, regular operations of the bowels. It kills that tired feeling and makes one feel like running, jumping and exercising; it gives elasticity to the body by acting directly on the muscles and causing them to respond to the mind's dictates. One teaspoonful of "Blood Wine" makes the blood tingle; it is instantaneous in its action and leaves no room for doubt. It contains no wine or opiates.

"Blood Wine" costs fifty cents a bottle but you can sample it at Will Reed and Hodson's drug stores, free of charge. It stands on its own merits; it is the only medicine that has ever been placed on sale with the local dealer authorized to keep a bottle of it always open to be administered to anyone free of cost

CALIFORNIA ROSES

NOWHERE ELSE DO THEY REACH SUCH PERFECTION OF BEAUTY.

The Bush of Other Climes Here Becomes a Tree—Thousands of Blossoms on a Single Plant—The Wonderful Climbing Rose.

Wonderful are the rose gardens of southern California. But why particularize gardens when every hedgerow is a mass of bewildering bloom? Their profusion is as the weed by the roadside in less favored climes. Wherever one turns in the flower season he beholds the most gorgeous roses that ever grew. Up the sides of abandoned adobe houses the rose vines clamber, hiding crumbling walls beneath a glorious wealth of color. Beside the lowliest cabin and in neglected barnyards blossom roses that eastern florists have in vain tried to equal.

Literal thickets of La Marque, Rainbow and other choice varieties of roses bloom and fade unheeded by their careless owners. Could they be marketed in eastern cities they would bring wealth. On the roads into Los Angeles and about Pomona there is in the aggregate fully a mile of thick hedges of Marechal Niel, Cherokee and Jacqueminot roses. The air is heavy in the valleys with the rich perfume.

The rapid and wondrous growth of all rose plants is a matter of astonishment to all visitors to southern California. There are hundreds of climbing roses that have grown twenty-five and thirty feet in three years. At the Arlington in Santa Barbara there is a climbing rosebush about twenty years old whose branches cover an area of over 2,000 square feet. Its four main trunks a yard above the roots measure each five inches in diameter.

At Riverside there is a La Marque rosebush fourteen years old that has twisted its huge branches about the trunk of a big pepper tree and followed each limb out to the end, so when it is in bloom the tree looks like a great bouquet with its thousands of blossoms. There are some climbing rosebushes at Pomona that have annually for several years borne from 20,000 to 30,000 blossoms.

In some of the rose gardens—particularly in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys—over 150 separate and distinct varieties of roses are grown. In the Skinner garden in Pomona 178 varieties blossom for a month or two each year, while twenty-two varieties imported from Japan and the Mediterranean are in bloom ten months out of twelve. The wealth of color and the sense of boundless profusion that a visit to southern California rose gardens begets are inexpressible.

When an arbor has been built to support the climbing roses planted by its side, the structure in a year or two is completely covered by a network of branches and blossoms, while long, graceful tendrils droop to the ground. In the season of flowers these rose arbors present a picture of flowering cataracts of brilliant bloom, and the whole air is redolent of sweet odors such as no perfumer has been able to distill.

Along the streets of the older settled towns large branches heavily laden with the most beautiful roses thrust themselves over fences and hedges. On many streets there are rows of pepper trees up whose shaggy bark Cloth of Gold, Beauty of Glazenwood and Devoniensis roses are trained to climb so closely as to conceal the trunk. When in bloom, there can hardly be a more charming sight than a row of these trees enveloped from earth to the topmost branches in mantles of roses of every hue.

There is in Ventura a magnificent specimen of the white La Marque rose. It was planted from a cutting in November, 1876, and has been trained over a large arbor. Its main stem immediately above the ground measures 2 feet 9 inches in circumference. Two branches start from it, and each is 2 feet 1 inch in circumference. It has been cut back and pruned heavily each year, and last year over a wagon load of prunings was taken from it.

Every winter the visitors to southern California are surprised to find that the rose tree, of which they have read so much in Tennyson, is not a fancy of the poet.

Our Varied Seasons.

The longest cold season in the United States is found in the Rocky mountain region, where it exceeds the warm by about ten days. The warm season in Texas and the lower Missouri valley opens about ten days earlier than in the region near the middle Atlantic coast and from twenty to twenty-five days earlier than on the southern coast of California. In the northwest the warm season opens from twenty to twenty-five days earlier than in the lake region and from fifteen to twenty days earlier than in the north Pacific coast region.

Regard For Sacred Trees.

Throughout the length and breadth of India the Ficus religiosa, under which Buddha rested for seven years plunged in divine thought, is dedicated to religious worship and may on no account be felled or destroyed. With more universal but not less sincere reverence do the peasants of Russia prostrate themselves before the trees which they are about to cut and deprecate the vengeance of the deities whose resting places they then proceed to destroy.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Aiding the Heathen.

"Brother Highmore, are you contributing anything for the benefit of the heathen this year?"

"Yes, sir. I am having my washing done at a Chinese laundry."—Chicago Tribune.

CALIFORNIA ROSES

NOWHERE ELSE DO THEY REACH SUCH PERFECTION OF BEAUTY.

The Bush of Other Climes Here Becomes a Tree—Thousands of Blossoms on a Single Plant—The Wonderful Climbing Rose.

Wonderful are the rose gardens of southern California. But why particularize gardens when every hedgerow is a mass of bewildering bloom? Their profusion is as the weed by the roadside in less favored climes. Wherever one turns in the flower season he beholds the most gorgeous roses that ever grew. Up the sides of abandoned adobe houses the rose vines clamber, hiding crumbling walls beneath a glorious wealth of color. Beside the lowliest cabin and in neglected barnyards blossom roses that eastern florists have in vain tried to equal.

Literal thickets of La Marque, Rainbow and other choice varieties of roses bloom and fade unheeded by their careless owners. Could they be marketed in eastern cities they would bring wealth. On the roads into Los Angeles and about Pomona there is in the aggregate fully a mile of thick hedges of Marechal Niel, Cherokee and Jacqueminot roses. The air is heavy in the valleys with the rich perfume.

The rapid and wondrous growth of all rose plants is a matter of astonishment to all visitors to southern California. There are hundreds of climbing roses that have grown twenty-five and thirty feet in three years. At the Arlington in Santa Barbara there is a climbing rosebush about twenty years old whose branches cover an area of over 2,000 square feet. Its four main trunks a yard above the roots measure each five inches in diameter.

At Riverside there is a La Marque rosebush fourteen years old that has twisted its huge branches about the trunk of a big pepper tree and followed each limb out to the end, so when it is in bloom the tree looks like a great bouquet with its thousands of blossoms. There are some climbing rosebushes at Pomona that have annually for several years borne from 20,000 to 30,000 blossoms.

In some of the rose gardens—particularly in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys—over 150 separate and distinct varieties of roses are grown. In the Skinner garden in Pomona 178 varieties blossom for a month or two each year, while twenty-two varieties imported from Japan and the Mediterranean are in bloom ten months out of twelve. The wealth of color and the sense of boundless profusion that a visit to southern California rose gardens begets are inexpressible.

When an arbor has been built to support the climbing roses planted by its side, the structure in a year or two is completely covered by a network of branches and blossoms, while long, graceful tendrils droop to the ground. In the season of flowers these rose arbors present a picture of flowering cataracts of brilliant bloom, and the whole air is redolent of sweet odors such as no perfumer has been able to distill.

Along the streets of the older settled towns large branches heavily laden with the most beautiful roses thrust themselves over fences and hedges. On many streets there are rows of pepper trees up whose shaggy bark Cloth of Gold, Beauty of Glazenwood and Devoniensis roses are trained to climb so closely as to conceal the trunk. When in bloom, there can hardly be a more charming sight than a row of these trees enveloped from earth to the topmost branches in mantles of roses of every hue.

There is in Ventura a magnificent specimen of the white La Marque rose. It was planted from a cutting in November, 1876, and has been trained over a large arbor. Its main stem immediately above the ground measures 2 feet 9 inches in circumference. Two branches start from it, and each is 2 feet 1 inch in circumference. It has been cut back and pruned heavily each year, and last year over a wagon load of prunings was taken from it.

Every winter the visitors to southern California are surprised to find that the rose tree, of which they have read so much in Tennyson, is not a fancy of the poet.

Our Varied Seasons.

The longest cold season in the United States is found in the Rocky mountain region, where it exceeds the warm by about ten days. The warm season in Texas and the lower Missouri valley opens about ten days earlier than in the region near the middle Atlantic coast and from twenty to twenty-five days earlier than on the southern coast of California. In the northwest the warm season opens from twenty to twenty-five days earlier than in the lake region and from fifteen to twenty days earlier than in the north Pacific coast region.

Regard For Sacred Trees.

Throughout the length and breadth of India the Ficus religiosa, under which Buddha rested for seven years plunged in divine thought, is dedicated to religious worship and may on no account be felled or destroyed. With more universal but not less sincere reverence do the peasants of Russia prostrate themselves before the trees which they are about to cut and deprecate the vengeance of the deities whose resting places they then proceed to destroy.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Aiding the Heathen.

"Brother Highmore, are you contributing anything for the benefit of the heathen this year?"

"Yes, sir. I am having my washing done at a Chinese laundry."—Chicago Tribune.

MORE EVIDENCE

It Is Coming In Rapidly in East Liverpool.

Evidence on the following subject will prove of interest to every East Liverpool reader. So many people go through the same experience daily. This public statement should be proof positive to every wavering doubter. Read it carefully:

Mr. George Mount, of 165 Fourth street, teamster and dealer in coal, says: "For three years I had attacks of kidney complaint, some of them laying me up for two or three weeks at a time. The symptoms were pain in the back, particularly severe when stooping or moving around. Physicians called it lumbago and advised by friends to use Doan's Kidney Pills I procured two boxes at the W. & W. pharmacy. They cured me."

Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the U. S.

Remember the name, Doan's, and take no substitute.

A Chicago Teaser.

A Chicago man who lives in Goethe street gets off the car at Schiller street, two blocks away, because no conductor can understand his pronunciation of Goethe. "I had practiced on the pronunciation for a week," he says, "and I had the sound of the 'umlaut' down fine. I sprung it on the conductor the first evening. He looked at me blankly and replied, 'Huh?' I repeated it once or twice, and finally a great light broke over him. 'Oh, yes; you mean Go-the. Why didn't you say so?'

"The next evening the conductor called it Go-eeth. The third time up it was Go-e-the. Then there was a raw Irishman in charge of one of the trains who spoke of it as Go-tay, with the accent on the last syllable. One morning I left an order for my wife at the grocer's. He looked at me in silence for a minute after I had given our address. 'Oh, yes,' he said; 'you mean Gertie street.' The butcher calls it Gaytie, the laundryman pronounces it Gay-tuh, and the man who delivers coal alludes to it as Goth street.

"I have a woman friend who prides herself on her culture who speaks feelingly of Gutter street. But the devoted thoroughfare doesn't really 'get it in the neck' until you hear the janitor talk. He calls it Goitre."

Eating Seals In England.

The water baily of London brought a "quick" seal to court, receiving 26 shillings 8 pence (1530), and in the same year the item "for bringing a cele" 15 shillings occurs. Seals were eaten, though they may have been kept as a curiosity. One was presented to Cromwell, Wolsey's successor in Henry's favor, though it died before he could have derived much pleasure from it. Perhaps he ate it. At Henry VII.'s wedding feast in 1487 one of the dishes was "seyle in fenyn, entirely served richly," and very rich it must have been. In Cromwell's accounts for 1537 William Wodehouse's servant brings a porpoise, and porpoises we know are eaten.—Good Words.

Some people find it easier to pay compliments than bills.

The New Motor Equipment

How It Works

Nat Butler as a Follower of Pace

DURING the last two years inventive genius has directed a great deal of effort to the application of motive power to the bicycle. Results hitherto obtained, while crude and far from satisfactory, have nevertheless served to point out great possibilities for the future of self propelled bicycles.

chine of the kind so constructed as to overcome the leading faults of previously existing models. For many months a prominent American cycle manufacturing company has devoted constant investigation and labor to the end of successfully meeting the popular demand for such a machine and has finally produced a model which appears to meet every indicated requirement and to be practical and perfectly adapted to the use of any bicyclist of ordinary intelligence.

In the course of its development experimental models have been almost entirely rebuilt several times, although since the first motor driven machine was put to a practical test on the road nearly a year ago they have at all times felt that they were in a position to place at the disposal of the public a motor bicycle far superior to others on the market. Using any of these as a standard for comparison, the machine herewith illustrated and described dispenses with much complicated construction, develops far greater power in proportion to weight, secures ease of control and manipulation and does away with all unsightliness and uncleanliness.

The new motor bicycle's lines are harmonious and pleasing, strictly following the lines of the main frame tubes. Systematic and orderly arrangement characterizes the construction throughout. There are no unsightly clusters of bent pipes, levers and wires, no suggestion of overloading or top heaviness. Each part is so placed as to sustain its proper mechanical relation to every other part, while the weight of the whole is so distributed as to contribute advantageously to steadiness of running and ease of steering.

The motive power is derived from a four cycle two and one-quarter horsepower gasoline engine, which, with its special and distinctive features and connections, presents an improvement over many others that have been used for a similar purpose. It operates as follows: From a reservoir containing a supply of gasoline a certain measured charge is drawn aporized, the vapor mixed with air and the mixture admitted to the cylinder, where it is compressed and exploded by an electric spark behind the driven piston and the products of combustion discharged through the exhaust valve. The explosive energy driving the piston downward imparts a rotary movement to the crank, whence the power is transmitted to the rear wheel by a double chain eight to one gearing.

This type of motor is universally recognized as the best ever devised for a wide variety of purposes, and mechanical experts have proved themselves equal to the task of making it completely available for the bicycle.

The majority of the prominent pace followers have already signed for the coming season. The last one to put his name to a contract was Nat Butler of Cambridge, Mass., who will be managed by Dan Burrows, the well known motorist.

Burrows is well equipped, having two tandems and a single pacing machine, each fitted with a five horsepower motor and capable of all the speed necessary for middle distance work. He also has ability as a manager, since he has been in the game for a long time and is thoroughly conversant with the fine points necessary for success.

He is confident that Butler will prove to be a winner, and at the same time he knows that he will not be a top-notcher. The big money will go to Walthour, Elkes, Stinson and Michael, but there will be plenty of other good cash lying around, and he is satisfied that the old handicap rider will get a good slice of it.

GEORGE BOTHNER'S ADVICE

Famous Wrestling Champion Tells Beginners to Work Hard.

George Bothner, the champion lightweight wrestler of America, has had a very successful winter. He has appeared in numerous matches throughout the country and thus far has not been defeated. In fact, Bothner so far outclasses all other lightweights that they are inclined to avoid meeting him, and he has been forced to take on men much heavier than himself.

Bothner instructs at the Knickerbocker Athletic club, New York. He is a gentlemanly young man and is deservedly popular with his pupils. During the summer he directs the wrestling affairs of the Pastime Athletic club of New York.

Probably the hardest matches Bothner has figured in during the last few months have been those in which he met Harvey Parker of Brockton, Mass. Parker is really a middleweight, tipping the beam at 160 pounds, and he is stronger than Bothner, but notwithstanding these advantages the New

GEORGE BOTHNER, LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION.

Englander was unable on several occasions to force the champion's shoulders to the mat. Bothner's wrestling weight is 142 pounds.

Bothner is a marvelously fast man on the defensive. He is more slippery than the slipperiest eel that ever slipped, it being at times almost impossible to follow his movements. He is splendidly developed, his muscles being large and powerful, but not too hard. It is the elasticity of Bothner's muscular tissue that enables him to undergo continued exertion without tiring.

In speaking about the wrestler's art a few days ago Bothner said:

"The man that wants to become a good mat artist must do a great deal of hard work. He must develop every muscle in his body, for he will use them all in competition. The beginner should place himself under the care of some experienced wrestler in order to get the right idea of the requirements of the game and to learn the correct mode of executing holds and breaks. After a few lessons a man will develop very rapidly and especially if he likes the work. There's a great deal in being anxious to succeed."

The American's Conflict Between Business and Love

By HUGUES LE ROUX, French Author and Lecturer

I THINK I have found your greatest social problem. Be careful how you solve it, for in my opinion the future of the republic depends upon it. IT IS THE CONFLICT BETWEEN BUSINESS AND LOVE.

IN THE BEGINNING THE WOMAN HAS BEEN YOUR INCENTIVE FOR WORK; NOW THERE SEEMS TO BE A TENDENCY TO LOVE WORK FOR WORK'S SAKE.

The women are all on one side of the road, the men on the other. They are strangers to each other during twelve of the twenty-four hours. The time may come when they will be strangers through the whole day long. Stop raising this barrier of business between yourselves and your women. When you reach home, weary and sullen, but gold laden, do not believe that by laying this wealth at the feet of the goddess of your household you are giving her that for which she yearns most. GIVE HER LESS GOLD AND MORE OF YOURSELF.

I spoke on this subject before a number of your admirable colleges for women. I asked the young women which they would value most, and, as they are women and human, they all chose dearth of gold and abundance of kind words, personal attention, confidence and love.

How can you fight and hope to win with your women absent from the scene of the conflict? Give them a share in your affairs, in your troubles.

In the Sahara when the men fight the women look on from behind, perchance on camels, helping their husbands with their cries. If in the battle the warrior turns to run, his wife will bar the way, her hands dipped in henna, and if he returns not to the fray she will brand him with her open hand, and his white burnoose with the red imprint upon it will attest his cowardice.

Take my word for it, a woman prefers to be loved. You may deck her with jewels and clothe her in silks, but all this is not food for the heart. Give her your hand and speak gently to her. Do not insult her by thinking that your troubles would only darken her days. There is joy in suffering for others. Do not keep that joy for yourselves alone.

And, then, is this drudgery sincerely for the sake of enthroning your queen? Soon the fever of work sets in, and the original incentive becomes merely an accessory. Business today is already the chief cult with many.

THE WOMEN WHOM YOU ARE DAILY NEGLECTING MORE AND MORE FOR BUSINESS HAVE ALREADY BEGUN TO TURN TO PURSUITS USUALLY CONSIDERED OUT OF THEIR FIELD AS A COMPENSATION FOR THE LOSS OF YOUR COMPANY.

The spectacled young women in your female colleges who devote their time to Euclid, astronomy, physics and chemistry are a reflection of your desertion of them.

A Summer Without Nights.

To the summer visitor in Sweden there is nothing more striking than the almost total absence of night. At Stockholm, the Swedish capital, the sun goes down a few minutes before 10 o'clock and rises again four hours later during a greater part of the month of June. But the four hours the sun lies hidden in the frozen north are not hours of darkness. The refraction of his rays as he passes around the north pole makes midnight as light as a cloudy midday and enables one to read the finest print without artificial light at any time during the "night."

Too Much For the Sheriff.

An Irish widow with a quick wit one day received a call from a sheriff who had a writ to serve on her. According to the story, the widow saved the day by some rapid fire courting which took the sheriff by surprise when he called at her house and began in formal fashion:

"Madam, I have an attachment for you."

"My dear sir," she said, blushing, "your attachment is reciprocated."

"You don't understand me. You must proceed to court," said the sheriff.

"Well, I know 'tis leap year, but I prefer to let you do the courting yourself. Men are much better at that than women."

"Mrs. Phelan, this is no time for fooling. The justice is waiting."

"The justice waiting! Well, then, I suppose I must go, but the thing is so sudden, and besides I'd prefer a priest to do it."

A Useful Woman.

"Blennerhasset," said Mrs. Bliggins as he was about to start down town, "can you let me have a little money to run the house with today?"

"You can have just 50 cents," he growled, flinging the coin at her and slamming the door behind him as he went out.

"By the way, Bliggins," said a friend who dropped into his place of business an hour or two later, "will you go my security on a note for $500?"

"Shortleigh," replied Bliggins, "it is an inflexible rule in my family that I must never do anything of that kind without consulting my wife."—Chicago Tribune.

Fresh Paint Stains.

A fresh paint stain on woolen goods will disappear if rubbed against other woolen goods. For instance, if the stain is on the sleeve of a coat take that garment off and rub the paint against the other sleeve. It will disappear and leave no sign. This is easier than applying turpentine and exactly as efficacious, but it must be done while the paint is still wet.

A Chicago Teaser.

A Chicago man who lives in Goethe street gets off the car at Schiller street, two blocks away, because no conductor can understand his pronunciation of Goethe. "I had practiced on the pronunciation for a week," he says, "and I had the sound of the 'umlaut' down fine. I sprung it on the conductor the first evening. He looked at me blankly and replied, 'Huh?' I repeated it once or twice, and finally a great light broke over him. 'Oh, yes; you mean Go-the. Why didn't you say so?'

"The next evening the conductor called it Go-eeth. The third time up it was Go-e-the. Then there was a raw Irishman in charge of one of the trains who spoke of it as Go-tay, with the accent on the last syllable. One morning I left an order for my wife at the grocer's. He looked at me in silence for a minute after I had given our address. 'Oh, yes,' he said; 'you mean Gertie street.' The butcher calls it Gaytie, the laundryman pronounces it Gay-tuh, and the man who delivers coal alludes to it as Goth street.

"I have a woman friend who prides herself on her culture who speaks feelingly of Gutter street. But the devoted thoroughfare doesn't really 'get it in the neck' until you hear the janitor talk. He calls it Goitre."

Eating Seals In England.

The water baily of London brought a "quick" seal to court, receiving 26 shillings 8 pence (1530), and in the same year the item "for bringing a cele" 15 shillings occurs. Seals were eaten, though they may have been kept as a curiosity. One was presented to Cromwell, Wolsey's successor in Henry's favor, though it died before he could have derived much pleasure from it. Perhaps he ate it. At Henry VII.'s wedding feast in 1487 one of the dishes was "seyle in fenyn, entirely served richly," and very rich it must have been. In Cromwell's accounts for 1537 William Wodehouse's servant brings a porpoise, and porpoises we know are eaten.—Good Words.

"You can have just 50 cents," he growled, flinging the coin at her and slamming the door behind him as he went out.

"By the way, Bliggins," said a friend who dropped into his place of business an hour or two later, "will you go my security on a note for $500?"

"Shortleigh," replied Bliggins, "it is an inflexible rule in my family that I must never do anything of that kind without consulting my wife."—Chicago Tribune.

Fresh Paint Stains.

A fresh paint stain on woolen goods will disappear if rubbed against other woolen goods. For instance, if the stain is on the sleeve of a coat take that garment off and rub the paint against the other sleeve. It will disappear and leave no sign. This is easier than applying turpentine and exactly as efficacious, but it must be done while the paint is still wet.

AMERICAN WOMEN AT THE CORONATION

They Will Shine Conspicuously Both In the Official and Social Functions

WHEN King Edward VII. of England is crowned at Westminster abbey next June, American women will shine conspicuously in the gorgeous pageant. No less than thirteen of Uncle Sam's fair daughters will by right of royal title appear in the kingly train. Eleven of these are peeresses of the realm, and two gain the honor by virtue of being wives of the eldest sons of peers. Three of the ladies will wear the coronet of duchesses, one is a marchioness, four are countesses, and three bear the title of baroness.

Besides these will be the ladies connected with the diplomatic corps and the special embassy which will represent this country at the coronation.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH.

Many more, titled and otherwise, will be prominent figures at the social festivities which will make the coronation season the most brilliant London has ever seen.

America's fair representatives in the ranks of the peeresses are led by Consuelo Vanderbilt, who became the Duchess of Marlborough in 1895. By her stand Consuelo Yznaga of New York, dowager Duchess of Manchester, who was for many years the only American duchess in the peerage, and Helen Zimmerman of Cincinnati, who became the Duchess of Manchester two years ago.

The Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava is the only American wife of a British marquis. She was Miss Florence Davis of New York and went to England in 1893 as the wife of Lord Clandeboye. He only succeeded to the title a few weeks ago on the death of his father, the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava.

Of the four countesses Lady Essex was Adela Grant of New York and was married to George Devereux, the seventh earl, nine years ago. Lady Craven was also a New Yorker, Cornelia Bradley Martin, whose marriage to the Earl of Craven a few years ago in New York was the most brilliant social event of the season. Lady Donoughmore was Miss Elena M. Grace, niece of William R. Grace, formerly mayor of New York. Lady Donoughmore has lived in London twelve years, but it was only a few months ago that she became the bride of the Earl of Donoughmore.

The fourth countess on the list is Lady Strafford. She was Miss Cora

COUNTESS OF ESSEX

Smith, daughter of Judge Smith of New Orleans. She married Samuel J. Colgate, the wealthy soap manufacturer and banker of New York, who left her a widow in 1893 with a fortune estimated to be $10,000,000. In 1898 she became the wife of the Earl of Strafford, who is also wealthy.

Lady Abinger, the first in the list of baronesses, may not take advantage of her right to be present at the gorgeous ceremony, as she may sail soon for South Africa to join her husband, the fourth baron of the name. Lady Curzon of Kedleston, too, who was Mary Victoria Leiter of Chicago, will probably not be present at the coronation, as it is said she hesitates to take the long trip from India, where her husband, Lord Curzon, is now viceroy.

Lady Newborough, who was Grace Carr of Kentucky until two years ago, will, however, represent her American sisters of this rank when the last and most dramatic step is taken in the official acts which make Edward a king.

Lady Deerhurst and the Hon. Mrs. Francis Dudley-Leigh are the two ladies who will be present as wives of the eldest sons of peers. The last named was Miss Helen Forbes Beckwith of New York, who was married twelve years ago to Francis, the eldest son of the second Baron Leigh. Lady Deerhurst's claim is based on the fact that she left Boston in 1888 to become the daughter-in-law of the ninth Earl of Coventry.

This list of thirteen does not, of course, include all the American women who will be present in the abbey. The wives of special envoys and representatives will be admitted, as will also those of embassadors and ministers. In addition to these some Americans will undoubtedly be included in the special invitations which may be expected to come from the king or queen or from certain officials of their court. The lord great chamberlain, for instance, enjoys the privilege of asking sixty guests to his private box, and, theoretically at least, the number who may be bidden by the monarch himself is unlimited.

A mark of special royal favor has been conferred on the Duchess of Marlborough. At the coronation Queen Alexandra will be attended by four fair duchesses, who will be attired in cloth of gold and bedecked in their robes and coronets. Not only must these favored four be duchesses, but they must be among the most beautiful of the duchesses. As filling these requirements the four duchesses selected are those of Montrose, Sutherland, Portland and Marlborough, all numbered among the loveliest women in England.

Among the American women who are members of the British nobility, but who are not included in the official list promulgated by the authorities having the matter in charge, is the dowager Duchess of Marlborough, now Lady William Beresford. She was a daughter of Commodore Price of the United States navy. She forfeited her prerogative as a peeress of the realm by marrying after the death of the eighth Duke of Marlborough the late Lord William Beresford, who in the eyes of the law is a commoner. No English woman of noble birth holds a securer position in London society than Mrs. George Cornwallis West, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill and originally Miss Jennie Jerome of New York. Lady Naylor-Leland, who was Miss Jennie Chamberlain of Cleveland, is also a social favorite. Perhaps none is more popular nor more gladly welcomed in the best English houses than Lady Bache Cunard, who was Miss Maud Burke of San Francisco. Other titled American women are Lady Gray-Egerton, formerly Miss May Cuyler; Lady Frances Margaret Vernon, widow of Baron Vernon, daughter of Mr. Francis C. Lawrence of New York; Louise Melissa, countess of Oxford, daughter of Mr. D. C. Corbin of New York; Mary, viscountess of Falkland, daughter of Mr. Robert Reade.

A great bazaar, which is being organized to take place in London in the first week in July in aid of a hospital for sick children, is to be called the Coronation bazaar, but it will be more fitting to call it the Anglo-American bazaar, since most of the well known American women in London are taking a very active and prominent part in the arrangements.

The Eyes of a Bee.

Every bee has two kinds of eyes—the two large compound ones, looking like hemispheres on either side, and the three simple ones which crown the top of his head. Each compound eye is composed of 3,500 facets—that is to say, an object is reflected 3,500 times on its surface. Every one of these facets is the base of an inverted hexagonal pyramid, whose apex is fitted to the head. Each pyramid may be termed an eye, for each has its own iris and optic nerve.

How these insects manage this marvelous number of eyes is not yet known. They are immovable, but mobility is unnecessary because of the range of vision afforded by the position and the number of facets. They have no lids, but are protected from dust and injury by rows of hairs growing along the lines at the junctions of the facets. The simple eyes are supposed to have been given the bee to enable it to see above its head when intent upon gathering honey from the cups of flowers. Probably this may be one reason, but it is likely there are other uses for them not yet ascertained.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Wearing of Amulets.

Who wore the first amulet it would be impossible to say, but the adoption of a talisman to ward off evil is of very ancient origin.

Phylacteries, the Greek word for amulets, were worn by the Israelites, to which allusion is made in the Scriptures. These phylacteries were narrow strips of parchment on which were written passages from the Old Testament. A strip was placed in a small leather box and bound to the left elbow by a narrow strap. There was a smaller phylactery for the forehead, the box for which was about an inch square.

The word amulet is of Arabic origin and implies a thing suspended. Amulets were of various kinds. The moonstone, found in the desert of Arabia, was worn as a talisman against enchantment by the women, who suspended it around the neck. It was a white, transparent stone, the time for searching for it being midnight.

Various Styles of Hairdressing.

The various styles of hairdressing under Louis XVI. were known as the cascade of St. Cloud, the windmill, the sheep and lambs, the hen and chickens, the dog and hare, the peai of bells, the milkmaid, the bob wig, the bother, the kerchief, the oriental, the Circassian, Minerva's helmet, the crescent, the enigma, the desire to please, the turned up calash, the treasurer of the age, the frivolous bather, the rat, the drunken monkey and the lover's snare, the last named consisting of a mass of curls covered with powder, particles of which, deposited on the coat or shoulders of a gentleman, indicated the previous whereabouts of the lady's head.

A Pleasant Prospect.

A young man named Mooney enlisted in the army. After he had been in India for about five months he received a pathetic letter from his parents which said that if he did not send them some money they would be forced to go to the workhouse.

The young man sat down and answered the letter as follows:

"Dear Father and Mother—Try to keep out of the workhouse for six years and seven months until I come home, and then the three of us will go in together."—London Tit-Bits.

HEAT AND DISEASE.

THE SUN'S RAYS ARE FATAL TO MANY SPECIES OF GERMS.

As a Disinfectant Sunlight Is the Greatest Agent In Nature—Temperatures at Which Disease Germs Are Destroyed.

Sunlight is fatal to some of the lower forms of living things, including certain disease germs which are the cause of some of the most fatal infectious diseases that afflict the human race. In fact, the greatest disinfectant in nature is light, or, to be more exact, the radiations of the sun, including heat rays, light rays and the invisible rays at the violet end of the solar spectrum.

An infectious disease is one which may be contracted by the introduction into the living body of living disease germs, which may be contained in different kinds of infectious material. Thus the disease germ (bacillus) which produces diphtheria is contained in the "exudate" or "false membrane" deposited in the throat or nasal passages of those suffering from this disease, and the material coughed up by a patient with diphtheria is infectious material. In cholera and in typhoid fever the discharges from the bowels contain the germ and are consequently infectious material.

Now, the object of disinfection is to prevent the extension of infectious diseases by destroying the specific infectious agents—germs—which give rise to them; and this is accomplished by the use of disinfectants. Having, as I hope, made this clear.

Any chemical agent which destroys or masks bad odors is commonly spoken of as a disinfectant, and there are a large number of so called "disinfectants" in the market which are simply deodorants and which are entirely untrustworthy for the destruction of infectious material—that is, material containing living disease germs.

These disease germs belong to the class of low vegetable organisms—microscopic plants—known as bacteria, which as a rule thrive better in the darkness than when exposed to daylight, and some of them are quickly destroyed by exposure to direct sunlight. In experiments made by me in 1893 it was demonstrated that the cholera bacillus is infallibly killed by exposure to direct sunlight for an hour or two, and the distinguished German bacteriologist, Dr. Robert Koch, has shown that the bacillus of consumption—tubercle bacillus—is destroyed by similar exposure in a time varying from a few minutes to several hours, depending upon the thickness of the layer of material in which it is imbedded.

As a result of this it is evident that the material coughed up by patients with consumption and containing tubercle bacilli in vast numbers is far less dangerous to the community in regions where the patient can live out of doors and where the sun shines nearly every day in the year.

Some disease germs which are not killed outright by exposure to the sun's rays are greatly restrained in their development. This is true of the bacillus of typhoid fever. Although it has been shown by carefully conducted experiments that certain disease germs are promptly destroyed by the luminous radiations from the sun, and especially by those at the violet end of the solar spectrum, it is also true that the heat rays play an important part in the destruction of harmful bacteria.

This is partly due to the fact that certain disease germs are quickly destroyed by being deprived of all moisture—by desiccation. Thus the germs of cholera and of pneumonia quickly perish when completely dried.

Other germs, however, as those of typhoid fever, of diphtheria and of consumption, may retain their vitality in a dried condition for several months. But the germs of all these diseases are destroyed by a comparatively low temperature. In experiments which I made several years ago I ascertained that the germs of pneumonia and of cholera were killed by exposure for a few minutes to a temperature of 126 degrees F.

A still lower temperature is effective if the time of exposure is prolonged. It is therefore evident that prolonged exposure to the direct rays of the sun would destroy these germs independently of the disinfecting power or germicidal action of the luminous rays or the fatal results of desiccation.

Other disease germs require a higher temperature for their destruction. The typhoid bacillus and the bacillus of diphtheria are killed by exposure to a temperature of 140 degrees F. for ten minutes. In general, it may be stated that this temperature is fatal to all the most important disease germs.

The facts stated furnish a scientific basis for practical disinfection, and it is evident that when sunshine is available no chemical agents are essential for the destruction of disease germs. Any article of food or drink which has been heated for a few minutes to something near the boiling point of water is absolutely safe, so far as any danger from disease germs is concerned, and any article of clothing which has been put through the ordinary operations of the laundry is as safe as if it had been placed for an hour in an expensive steam disinfector or immersed in a strong disinfecting solution.

It will be seen that scientific investigations fully justify the practice of good housewives, who at frequent intervals expose their blankets and articles of woolen clothing, which cannot be placed in boiling water without injury, to a prolonged sun bath, who scald out milk pans and kitchen utensils and place them in the sun to dry and who open up their sleeping apartments for the admission of sunlight and fresh air.—Surgeon General Sternberg in Youth's Companion.

AMATEUR OARSMEN'S BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

Coming Season Being Busily Prepared For—Pennsylvania's Crews. Big Regatta June 21.

Oarsmen are ambitious folk, and they seldom fail to put on their training clothes early in the season. College and club experts and would be experts have for several weeks been busy placing their craft in order, and, taken as a whole, indications are that the coming summer will be exceptionally interesting.

The colleges are watching the operations of their various crews, endeavoring to get a line on their chances for making creditable records. Yale, Harvard, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin, Cornell, etc., are all enthusiastic regarding the outlook, and while it is certain that some of them are to be disappointed a spirit of hopefulness will do much to ward off disaster.

The University of Pennsylvania will not send a crew to Henley this year. Last year's venture so weakened the varsity eight that Penn's showing in the intercollegiate regatta was far from being satisfactory. The Quakers consequently have arrived at a decision not to renew their assault on the international championship for a few years to come, choosing rather to retain their high position on this side of the water.

Coach Ellis Ward is working hard with the Pennsylvania candidates, and from the hundred men that in January reported for duty on the rowing machines six crews have been chosen. Four varsity and two freshman eights now represent the rowing strength of the university.

From this list of men Coach Ward has the difficult task of developing a varsity eight and four and a freshman eight to compete against the strongest college crews of America.

Pennsylvania's record in aquatics during the last four years has been brilliant. Following three American college championship crews, the red and blue invaded foreign waters and by winning three out of four races proved that rowing as taught by Ellis Ward and practiced by the Quaker oarsmen was a big factor in American college rowing.

With the loss of Stroke John Gardiner, Captain Flickwir and Davenport from last year's crew Penn loses the last of the famous 1897 and 1898 crews, which first brought victory to the red and blue. Crowther of the Henley crew is also among the missing, leaving four places to be filled in the varsity eight.

To fill these places, however, there are a number of experienced men from last year's Poughkeepsie varsity and four oared crews and the championship eight.

The members of last year's crew who are trying for the 1902 varsity eight are Captain Ailyn, Zane, Eisenbrey, Will Gardiner and Jackson, substitute on the Henley crew. From the 1901 freshmen eight are Pepper, Cathcart, Shisler, Lea, Cope and Morgan, of the varsity four Shock, Eckfeldt, Henderson and Hildebrand and of the Poughkeepsie varsity Kellar, Sharpe, Gillaspy and Hartung. Besides this list of men who have had experience there is a number of new men who show promise. Among these are Garvin, Brooke, Harris, Whittaker, Williams, Robertson and Van Valkenburg.

The hardest position to fill this year will be that of stroke. So far three men have been tried in this position. Zane has shown up best at No. 8, and many believe that the freshman bow of the Henley crew will be John Gardiner's successor.

The full schedule for Penn's crew is as follows:

April 26.—Varsity and freshmen eights versus Annapolis first and second crews at Annapolis.

May 30.—Junior varsity race between Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia, on the national course.

June 21. — Intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Pennsylvania, Cornell, Columbia, Georgetown, Wisconsin and Syracuse varsity eight and four and freshman eight oared race.

A great bazaar, which is being organized to take place in London in the first week in July in aid of a hospital for sick children, is to be called the Coronation bazaar, but it will be more fitting to call it the Anglo-American bazaar, since most of the well known American women in London are taking a very active and prominent part in the arrangements.

The Eyes of a Bee.

Every bee has two kinds of eyes—the two large compound ones, looking like hemispheres on either side, and the three simple ones which crown the top of his head. Each compound eye is composed of 3,500 facets—that is to say, an object is reflected 3,500 times on its surface. Every one of these facets is the base of an inverted hexagonal pyramid, whose apex is fitted to the head. Each pyramid may be termed an eye, for each has its own iris and optic nerve.

How these insects manage this marvelous number of eyes is not yet known. They are immovable, but mobility is unnecessary because of the range of vision afforded by the position and the number of facets. They have no lids, but are protected from dust and injury by rows of hairs growing along the lines at the junctions of the facets. The simple eyes are supposed to have been given the bee to enable it to see above its head when intent upon gathering honey from the cups of flowers. Probably this may be one reason, but it is likely there are other uses for them not yet ascertained.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Wearing of Amulets.

Who wore the first amulet it would be impossible to say, but the adoption of a talisman to ward off evil is of very ancient origin.

Phylacteries, the Greek word for amulets, were worn by the Israelites, to which allusion is made in the Scriptures. These phylacteries were narrow strips of parchment on which were written passages from the Old Testament. A strip was placed in a small leather box and bound to the left elbow by a narrow strap. There was a smaller phylactery for the forehead, the box for which was about an inch square.

The word amulet is of Arabic origin and implies a thing suspended. Amulets were of various kinds. The moonstone, found in the desert of Arabia, was worn as a talisman against enchantment by the women, who suspended it around the neck. It was a white, transparent stone, the time for searching for it being midnight.

Various Styles of Hairdressing.

The various styles of hairdressing under Louis XVI. were known as the cascade of St. Cloud, the windmill, the sheep and lambs, the hen and chickens, the dog and hare, the peal of bells, the milkmaid, the bob wig, the bother, the kerchief, the oriental, the Circassian, Minerva's helmet, the crescent, the enigma, the desire to please, the turned up calash, the treasurer of the age, the frivolous bather, the rat, the drunken monkey and the lover's snare, the last named consisting of a mass of curls covered with powder, particles of which, deposited on the coat or shoulders of a gentleman, indicated the previous whereabouts of the lady's head.

A Pleasant Prospect.

A young man named Mooney enlisted in the army. After he had been in India for about five months he received a pathetic letter from his parents which said that if he did not send them some money they would be forced to go to the workhouse.

The young man sat down and answered the letter as follows:

"Dear Father and Mother—Try to keep out of the workhouse for six years and seven months until I come home, and then the three of us will go in together."—London Tit-Bits.

HEAT AND DISEASE.

THE SUN'S RAYS ARE FATAL TO MANY SPECIES OF GERMS.

As a Disinfectant Sunlight Is the Greatest Agent In Nature—Temperatures at Which Disease Germs Are Destroyed.

Sunlight is fatal to some of the lower forms of living things, including certain disease germs which are the cause of some of the most fatal infectious diseases that afflict the human race. In fact, the greatest disinfectant in nature is light, or, to be more exact, the radiations of the sun, including heat rays, light rays and the invisible rays at the violet end of the solar spectrum.

An infectious disease is one which may be contracted by the introduction into the living body of living disease germs, which may be contained in different kinds of infectious material. Thus the disease germ (bacillus) which produces diphtheria is contained in the "exudate" or "false membrane" deposited in the throat or nasal passages of those suffering from this disease, and the material coughed up by a patient with diphtheria is infectious material. In cholera and in typhoid fever the discharges from the bowels contain the germ and are consequently infectious material.

Now, the object of disinfection is to prevent the extension of infectious diseases by destroying the specific infectious agents—germs—which give rise to them; and this is accomplished by the use of disinfectants. Having, as I hope, made this clear.

Any chemical agent which destroys or masks bad odors is commonly spoken of as a disinfectant, and there are a large number of so called "disinfectants" in the market which are simply deodorants and which are entirely untrustworthy for the destruction of infectious material—that is, material containing living disease germs.

These disease germs belong to the class of low vegetable organisms—microscopic plants—known as bacteria, which as a rule thrive better in the darkness than when exposed to daylight, and some of them are quickly destroyed by exposure to direct sunlight. In experiments made by me in 1893 it was demonstrated that the cholera bacillus is infallibly killed by exposure to direct sunlight for an hour or two, and the distinguished German bacteriologist, Dr. Robert Koch, has shown that the bacillus of consumption—tubercle bacillus—is destroyed by similar exposure in a time varying from a few minutes to several hours, depending upon the thickness of the layer of material in which it is imbedded.

As a result of this it is evident that the material coughed up by patients with consumption and containing tubercle bacilli in vast numbers is far less dangerous to the community in regions where the patient can live out of doors and where the sun shines nearly every day in the year.

Some disease germs which are not killed outright by exposure to the sun's rays are greatly restrained in their development. This is true of the bacillus of typhoid fever. Although it has been shown by carefully conducted experiments that certain disease germs are promptly destroyed by the luminous radiations from the sun, and especially by those at the violet end of the solar spectrum, it is also true that the heat rays play an important part in the destruction of harmful bacteria.

This is partly due to the fact that certain disease germs are quickly destroyed by being deprived of all moisture—by desiccation. Thus the germs of cholera and of pneumonia quickly perish when completely dried.

Other germs, however, as those of typhoid fever, of diphtheria and of consumption, may retain their vitality in a dried condition for several months. But the germs of all these diseases are destroyed by a comparatively low temperature. In experiments which I made several years ago I ascertained that the germs of pneumonia and of cholera were killed by exposure for a few minutes to a temperature of 126 degrees F.

A still lower temperature is effective if the time of exposure is prolonged. It is therefore evident that prolonged exposure to the direct rays of the sun would destroy these germs independently of the disinfecting power or germicidal action of the luminous rays or the fatal results of desiccation.

Other disease germs require a higher temperature for their destruction. The typhoid bacillus and the bacillus of diphtheria are killed by exposure to a temperature of 140 degrees F. for ten minutes. In general, it may be stated that this temperature is fatal to all the most important disease germs.

The facts stated furnish a scientific basis for practical disinfection, and it is evident that when sunshine is available no chemical agents are essential for the destruction of disease germs. Any article of food or drink which has been heated for a few minutes to something near the boiling point of water is absolutely safe, so far as any danger from disease germs is concerned, and any article of clothing which has been put through the ordinary operations of the laundry is as safe as if it had been placed for an hour in an expensive steam disinfector or immersed in a strong disinfecting solution.

It will be seen that scientific investigations fully justify the practice of good housewives, who at frequent intervals expose their blankets and articles of woolen clothing, which cannot be placed in boiling water without injury, to a prolonged sun bath, who scald out milk pans and kitchen utensils and place them in the sun to dry and who open up their sleeping apartments for the admission of sunlight and fresh air.—Surgeon General Sternberg in Youth's Companion.

AMATEUR OARSMEN'S BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

Coming Season Being Busily Prepared For—Pennsylvania's Crews. Big Regatta June 21.

Oarsmen are ambitious folk, and they seldom fail to put on their training clothes early in the season. College and club experts and would be experts have for several weeks been busy placing their craft in order, and, taken as a whole, indications are that the coming summer will be exceptionally interesting.

The colleges are watching the operations of their various crews, endeavoring to get a line on their chances for making creditable records. Yale, Harvard, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin, Cornell, etc., are all enthusiastic regarding the outlook, and while it is certain that some of them are to be disappointed a spirit of hopefulness will do much to ward off disaster.

The University of Pennsylvania will not send a crew to Henley this year. Last year's venture so weakened the varsity eight that Penn's showing in the intercollegiate regatta was far from being satisfactory. The Quakers consequently have arrived at a decision not to renew their assault on the international championship for a few years to come, choosing rather to retain their high position on this side of the water.

Coach Ellis Ward is working hard with the Pennsylvania candidates, and from the hundred men that in January reported for duty on the rowing machines six crews have been chosen. Four varsity and two freshman eights now represent the rowing strength of the university.

From this list of men Coach Ward has the difficult task of developing a varsity eight and four and a freshman eight to compete against the strongest college crews of America.

Pennsylvania's record in aquatics during the last four years has been brilliant. Following three American college championship crews, the red and blue invaded foreign waters and by winning three out of four races proved that rowing as taught by Ellis Ward and practiced by the Quaker oarsmen was a big factor in American college rowing.

With the loss of Stroke John Gardiner, Captain Flickwir and Davenport from last year's crew Penn loses the last of the famous 1897 and 1898 crews, which first brought victory to the red and blue. Crowther of the Henley crew is also among the missing, leaving four places to be filled in the varsity eight.

To fill these places, however, there are a number of experienced men from last year's Poughkeepsie varsity and four oared crews and the championship eight.

The members of last year's crew who are trying for the 1902 varsity eight are Captain Ailyn, Zane, Eisenbrey, Will Gardiner and Jackson, substitute on the Henley crew. From the 1901 freshmen eight are Pepper, Cathcart, Shisler, Lea, Cope and Morgan, of the varsity four Shock, Eckfeldt, Henderson and Hildebrand and of the Poughkeepsie varsity Kellar, Sharpe, Gillaspy and Hartung. Besides this list of men who have had experience there is a number of new men who show promise. Among these are Garvin, Brooke, Harris, Whittaker, Williams, Robertson and Van Valkenburg.

The hardest position to fill this year will be that of stroke. So far three men have been tried in this position. Zane has shown up best at No. 8, and many believe that the freshman bow of the Henley crew will be John Gardiner's successor.

The full schedule for Penn's crew is as follows:

April 26.—Varsity and freshmen eights versus Annapolis first and second crews at Annapolis.

May 30.—Junior varsity race between Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia, on the national course.

June 21.—Intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Pennsylvania, Cornell, Columbia, Georgetown, Wisconsin and Syracuse varsity eight and four and freshman eight oared race.

CARMACK'S FIRE AT GENERAL FUNSTON.

Tennessee Senator Characterizes Philippine Soldier as a Jayhawker Brigadier.

MISSOURIAN TAKES WHIRL AT SPREAD OF TRUSTS.

Mr. Cochran Says the Combines Contribute to Both Political Parties and Thus Tie Their Hands—His Remedy For Curbing Them.

Washington, April 26.—Two extended speeches occupied the entire attention af the senate yesterday. Mr. McCumber, of North Dakota, discussed his bill to prevent the misbranding and misrepresentation of food products which enter into interstate commerce. Mr. Carmack, of Tennessee, one of the minority members of the Philippine committee, spoke in opposition to the Philippine government bill now pending. He sharply criticised the president, not only for the policy he is pursuing in the Philippines, but for utterances which, the senator declared, tended to fan the flame of insurrection. He also denounced General Funston, whom he characterized as the "jayhawker brigadier from the wind-swept plains—the mightiest Samson that ever wielded the jawbone of an ass as a weapon of war."

The house passed 145 private pension bills, including bills to pension the widow of General William Ludlow at $50 per month and the widow of "Parson" Brownlow, of Tennessee, at $30 per month. The remainder of the day was devoted to general debate on the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. Cochran, of Missouri, made a speech on the universal spread of trusts and combines in this country and the necessity for curbing them. The trusts, he said, contributed to both political parties and tied their hands. He warned the American people that no relief could be hoped for until there was a complete divorcement of legislatures and congress from corporation lobbies and influences. The point had been reached, he said, where the attorney general and even a member of the supreme court had been chosen from the employes of great corporations.

The senate committee on Cuba decided to institute an investigation into the charge that the greater part of the present crop of Cuban sugar is held by the sugar trust of this country.

The following fourth-class Pennsylvania postmasters were appointed: Hetherville, Columbia county, John Bribgenberg; Stockdale, Washington county, William Smith.

The senate yesterday confirmed T. J. Davis as postmaster at Barberton, O.

The bill provides for the sale of the old building at Wheeling, W. Va., on the completion of the new building.

The following appropriations are made on condition that sites are sold to the United States at a nominal cost, as follows: Easton, Pa., $60,000; Oil City, Pa., $60,000; Ironton, O., 140,000.

The following appropriations are made for buildings and sites: Chillicothe, O., $70,000; Zanesville, O., $110,000; Findlay, O., $55,000; Warren, O., $45,000; Allentown, Pa., $100,000; West Chester, Pa., $50,000; McKeesport, Pa., $100,000; Lebanon, Pa., $75,000; Washington, Pa., $60,000; Norristown, Pa., $78,000; New Castle, Pa., $125,000; Huntington, W. Passover Season Secured Release.

What God Hath Joined Together VERSUS What God Hath Put Asunder

By Rev. MINOT J. SAVAGE of New York

I BELIEVE with my whole soul that what God hath joined together man has no right to put asunder. I believe that in the cases where God has joined them together no man can put asunder, no man ever does or ever can or ever will; BUT I HAVE TOO MUCH RESPECT FOR GOD TO FEEL WILLING TO HOLD HIM RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL THE MARRIAGES THAT HAVE TAKEN PLACE SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD. I believe we have a right to turn that saying around.

WHERE GOD HAS PUT PEOPLE ASUNDER NO MAN HAS A RIGHT TO FORCE THEM TO STAY TOGETHER.

If the husband and wife have both ceased to love each other and there are no children, they should be permitted to separate. Suppose there are children; suppose husband and wife have lost their love each for the other. If the children's welfare would be subserved by their maintaining a home, then they are under the highest kind of obligation to maintain that home.

I WOULD MAKE DIVORCE DIFFICULT.

I would compel people to take at least one year in the process of divorce. They should not be able to get through in one month or three months or six, and perhaps by the time a year was ended they might have had time to think it over and reconsider their intention. I would not allow them to remarry the next day or the next week or the next year. I would have it at least two years, and perhaps three.

There is no place in the world where divorces are so easily obtained as in the United States, and there is no place in the world where women stand so high, where women are granted so many liberties and rights, no place where they are so free to seek the highest and best things, where they are surrounded by so much care, such courtesy, such sympathy, such respect.

THE GREAT CAUSE WHY THERE ARE SO MANY MORE DIVORCES IN THIS COUNTRY THAN ANY OTHER IS THAT HERE, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY, WOMEN ARE GRANTED FREEDOM TO THROW OFF A THOUSAND INTOLERABLE BURDENS UNDER WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN BORNE DOWN AND CRUSHED FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD.

I believe that if a careful investigation were made we should find that a large proportion of the divorces granted in this country means kindliness and consideration toward woman, readiness on the part of the manhood of America to deliver her from crushing burdens, set her free, give her an opportunity to retrieve a so far wasted life.

FAVOR THE VOTING MACHINE.

Matters Acted Upon by Railway Employes' Legislative Board.

Reading, Pa., April 26.—The session yesterday of the state legislative board of railway employes, composed of delegates from various railway organizations and allied bodies, was entirely devoted to executive matters.

At yesterday afternoon's session the action of Senator Quay on the Chinese exclusion law was condemned. The voting machine for all elections in this state was favored. The legislative committee was instructed to act in harmony with the State Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers in all matters affecting the working people at the next session of the legislature. A number of candidates for the legislature favorable to workingmen were endorsed, and the course of others at the last session condemned. J. N. Weiler, secretary of the board, of Mauch Chunk, was indorsed for senator.

It was agreed to hold an adjourned meeting in Harrisburg next September.

GEN. SMITH ADMITS CHARGES.

Counsel Acknowledges Client Instructed Waller to Kill and Burn.

Manila, April 26.—The trial by court martial of General Jacob H. Smith, on the charge of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline, began yesterday. General Loyd Wheaton presided. Colonel Charles A. Woodruff, counsel for the defense, said he was willing to admit General Smith gave instructions to Major Waller to kill and burn and make Samar a howling wilderness, that he wanted everybody killed capable of bearing arms, and that he did specify all over 10 years of age, as the Samar boys of that age were equally as dangerous as their elders.

Major Littleton W. T. Waller, marine corps, will be the chief witness for the prosecution.

FAVORS HEARST FOR PRESIDENT

Founder of Justice Party Also Has Kind Words For Roosevelt.

Washington, April 26.—Hon. W. H. Vaughn, founder of the new Justice party which bears his name, said yesterday:

"The party has come to stay. Justice will be our slogan for all men or women, be they white, black, yellow or red. We are not working in the interest of any particular presidential candidate; we are playing no favorites. We shall select as our standard-bearer the man who comes nearest to representing our ideals and the principles enunciated in our platform. Personally, however, I am inclined very much toward William R. Hearst. If the Republicans wish to win votes in the south they cannot do better than to nominate Theodore Roosevelt. He is half southern, and the people like his dauntless courage.

East Indian Idols.

The images of the gods in India are not made by a separate caste, but the carpenters and masons respectively make the large wooden and stone idols set up in the temples, the potters the clay idols consumed in daily worship and the braziers, coppersmiths and goldsmiths the little images in brass, copper, mixed metal and gold and silver that are always kept in private homes. The East Indians regard an alloy of brass with five other metals—gold, silver, iron, tin and lead, making, with the copper and zinc of the brass, a mixture of light metals—as a perfect alloy, and this is highly prized as a material for sacred images.

Palmerston and His Muscles.

Lord Palmerston died at his post two days before he was eighty-one, his faculties undimmed and his physical strength little affected by his advanced age. CARMACK'S FIRE AT GENERAL FUNSTON.

Tennessee Senator Characterizes Philippine Soldier as a Jayhawker Brigadier.

MISSOURIAN TAKES WHIRL AT SPREAD OF TRUSTS.

Mr. Cochran Says the Combines Contribute to Both Political Parties and Thus Tie Their Hands—His Remedy For Curbing Them.

Washington, April 26.—Two extended speeches occupied the entire attention af the senate yesterday. Mr. McCumber, of North Dakota, discussed his bill to prevent the misbranding and misrepresentation of food products which enter into interstate commerce. Mr. Carmack, of Tennessee, one of the minority members of the Philippine committee, spoke in opposition to the Philippine government bill now pending. He sharply criticised the president, not only for the policy he is pursuing in the Philippines, but for utterances which, the senator declared, tended to fan the flame of insurrection. He also denounced General Funston, whom he characterized as the "jayhawker brigadier from the windswept plains—the mightiest Samson that ever wielded the jawbone of an ass as a weapon of war."

The house passed 145 private pension bills, including bills to pension the widow of General William Ludlow at $50 per month and the widow of "Parson" Brownlow, of Tennessee, at $30 per month. The remainder of the day was devoted to general debate on the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. Cochran, of Missouri, made a speech on the universal spread of trusts and combines in this country and the necessity for curbing them. The trusts, he said, contributed to both political parties and tied their hands. He warned the American people that no relief could be hoped for until there was a complete divorcement of legislatures and congress from corporation lobbies and influences. The point had been reached, he said, where the attorney general and even a member of the supreme court had been chosen from the employes of great corporations.

The senate committee on Cuba decided to institute an investigation into the charge that the greater part of the present crop of Cuban sugar is held by the sugar trust of this country.

The following fourth-class Pennsylvania postmasters were appointed: Hetherville, Columbia county, John Bribgenberg; Stockdale, Washington county, William Smith.

The senate yesterday confirmed T. J. Davis as postmaster at Barberton, O.

OMNIBUS PUBLIC BUILDING BILL

Appropriations, Authorizations and Increases Made For Various Places.

Washington, April 26.—Representative Mercer, of Nebraska, will introduce in the house today the omnibus public building bill, and on Monday a special rule will be presented to the house for consideration of the bill on Tuesday.

The bill will carry authorizations for public buildings in every state of the union except Delaware and Idaho, for which states no bills were introduced. The authorizations aggregate $15,800,000. The bill provides for the sale of the old building at Wheeling, W. Va., on the completion of the new building.

In the following cities the limit of cost of the public buildings is increased: Cumberland, Md., $100,000 to $150,000; New York city custom house, $3,000,000 to $4,000,000; Buffalo, N. Y., $2,000,000 to $2,035,000, Jamestown, N. Y., $115,000 to $150,000; Cleveland, O., $2,500,000 to $3,000,000; Sandusky, O., $100,328 to $120,328; additional land, $20,000 Youngstown, O., $75,000 to $89,000; additional land, $14,000; New Brighton, Pa., $75,000 to $85,000; Philadelphia mint, $2,000,000 to $2,025,000.

The following appropriations are made on condition that sites are sold to the United States at a nominal cost, as follows: Easton, Pa., $60,000; Oil City, Pa., $60,000; Ironton, O., 140,000.

The following appropriations are made for buildings and sites: Chillicothe, O., $70,000; Zanesville, O., $110,000, Findlay, O., $55,000; Warren, O., $45,000; Allentown, Pa., $100,000; West Chester, Pa., $50,000; McKeesport, Pa., $100,000; Lebanon, Pa., $75,000; Washington, Pa., $60,000; Norristown, Pa., $78,000; New Castle, Pa., $125,000; Huntington, W. What God Hath Joined Together
VERSUS
What God Hath Put Asunder

By Rev. MINOT J. SAVAGE of New York

I BELIEVE with my whole soul that what God hath joined together man has no right to put asunder. I believe that in the cases where God has joined them together no man can put asunder, no man ever does or ever can or ever will; BUT I HAVE TOO MUCH RESPECT FOR GOD TO FEEL WILLING TO HOLD HIM RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL THE MARRIAGES THAT HAVE TAKEN PLACE SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD. I believe we have a right to turn that saying around.

WHERE GOD HAS PUT PEOPLE ASUNDER NO MAN HAS A RIGHT TO FORCE THEM TO STAY TOGETHER.

If the husband and wife have both ceased to love each other and there are no children, they should be permitted to separate. Suppose there are children; suppose husband and wife have lost their love each for the other. If the children's welfare would be subserved by their maintaining a home, then they are under the highest kind of obligation to maintain that home.

I WOULD MAKE DIVORCE DIFFICULT. I would compel people to take at least one year in the process of divorce. They should not be able to get through in one month or three months or six, and perhaps by the time a year was ended they might have had time to think it over and reconsider their intention. I would not allow them to remarry the next day or the next week or the next year. I would have it at least two years, and perhaps three.

There is no place in the world where divorces are so easily obtained as in the United States, and there is no place in the world where women stand so high, where women are granted so many liberties and rights, no place where they are so free to seek the highest and best things, where they are surrounded by so much care, such courtesy, such sympathy, such respect.

THE GREAT CAUSE WHY THERE ARE SO MANY MORE DIVORCES IN THIS COUNTRY THAN ANY OTHER IS THAT HERE, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY, WOMEN ARE GRANTED FREEDOM TO THROW OFF A THOUSAND INTOLERABLE BURDENS UNDER WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN BORNE DOWN AND CRUSHED FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD.

I believe that if a careful investigation were made we should find that a large proportion of the divorces granted in this country means kindliness and consideration toward woman, readiness on the part of the manhood of America to deliver her from crushing burdens, set her free, give her an opportunity to retrieve a so far wasted life.

FAVOR THE VOTING MACHINE.

Matters Acted Upon by Railway Employes' Legislative Board.

Reading, Pa., April 26.—The session yesterday of the state legislative board of railway employes, composed of delegates from various railway organizations and allied bodies, was entirely devoted to executive matters.

At yesterday afternoon's session the action of Senator Quay on the Chinese exclusion law was condemned. The voting machine for all elections in this state was favored. The legislative committee was instructed to act in harmony with the State Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers in all matters affecting the working people at the next session of the legislature. A number of candidates for the legislature favorable to workingmen were endorsed, and the course of others at the last session condemned. J. N. Weiler, secretary of the board, of Mauch Chunk, was indorsed for senator.

It was agreed to hold an adjourned meeting in Harrisburg next September.

GEN. SMITH ADMITS CHARGES.

Counsel Acknowledges Client Instructed Waller to Kill and Burn.

Manila, April 26.—The trial by court martial of General Jacob H. Smith, on the charge of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline, began yesterday. General Loyd Wheaton presided. Colonel Charles A. Woodruff, counsel for the defense, said he was willing to admit General Smith gave instructions to Major Waller to kill and burn and make Samar a howling wilderness, that he wanted everybody killed capable of bearing arms, and that he did specify all over 10 years of age, as the Samar boys of that age were equally as dangerous as their elders.

Major Littleton W. T. Waller, marine corps, will be the chief witness for the prosecution.

FAVORS HEARST FOR PRESIDENT

Founder of Justice Party Also Has Kind Words For Roosevelt.

Washington, April 26.—Hon. W. H. Vaughn, founder of the new Justice party which bears his name, said yesterday:

"The party has come to stay. Justice will be our slogan for all men or women, be they white, black, yellow or red. We are not working in the interest of any particular presidential candidate; we are playing no favorites. We shall select as our standard-bearer the man who comes nearest to representing our ideals and the principles enunciated in our platform. Personally, however, I am inclined very much toward William R. Hearst. If the Republicans wish to win votes in the south they cannot do better than to nominate Theodore Roosevelt. He is half southern, and the people like his dauntless courage.

East Indian Idols.

The images of the gods in India are not made by a separate caste, but the carpenters and masons respectively make the large wooden and stone idols set up in the temples, the potters the clay idols consumed in daily worship and the braziers, coppersmiths and goldsmiths the little images in brass, copper, mixed metal and gold and silver that are always kept in private homes. The East Indians regard an alloy of brass with five other metals—gold, silver, iron, tin and lead, making, with the copper and zinc of the brass, a mixture of light metals—as a perfect alloy, and this is highly prized as a material for sacred images.

Palmerston and His Muscles.

Lord Palmerston died at his post two days before he was eighty-one, his faculties undimmed and his physical strength little affected by his advanced age. A hidden witness recorded a touching anecdote: A fortnight before his death he saw the old statesman come out of his London house early one morning, look around to assure himself that he was alone, then climb over the area railing around the house and back again to test the strength of his muscles.—Lippincott's Magazine.

A Broken Neck.

"Did you hear about the catastrophe down at the Browns' last night?"

"No. What happened?"

"Why, Mrs. Brown gave the baby a bottle to play with, and while she was in the kitchen it fell out of the cradle and broke its neck."

"What, the baby?"

"No, the bottle."

"A secret society," she replied.

"But what is its object?"

"Oh, just to have secrets from the other girls."—Chicago Post.

BIG COMBINATION IS BEING FORMED

Flint, Spar and Clay Manufacturers Trust Said to Have Been Effected.

TO CONTROL THE MARKET

For Materials Necessary in the Pottery Business—One of the Interested Parties Says It Is Not a Combine, But a New Company.

A mammoth combination of flint and spar and clay manufacturers promoted by William S. Hancock, Barker Gummere, Jr., and Hugh H. Hamill, of Trenton, will hereafter control the market of the country for these materials under the corporation name of Golding & Son's Co.

The Eureka Flint & Spar company will undoubtedly become a part of the big trust. The mines of this company are solely controlled by the John E. Thropp Sons company and are located in Maine, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The new company proposes to absolutely conduct the market for flint, spar and clays, all necessary in the pottery business, and is gradually gobbling up the substantial plants now in operation, according to Trenton advices.

The Golding Sons' company is capitalized at $1,000,000 and is backed largely by capitalists who are said to be directly interested in the Interstate Telephone company and the South Jersey Gas Electric & Traction company, of Trenton.

The deal to take in the Thropps has not yet culminated, though overtures are being made.

Former State Comptroller William S. Hancock, of Trenton, denies the report sof a combination.

INCIDENT CLOSED

Matter of the Junior Mechanics' Treasurer's Alleged Delinquency Settled.

It now transpires that the settlement between the trustees of the Jr. Mechanics and its treasurer was made several days ago. There was no meeting of the trustees on Thursday night. The interview with one of the trustees which was published in last night's issue was misleading.

Officers of the lodge are at a loss to know how the information concerning the transaction reached the public ear, and have been busy for several days trying to locate the leak. They say, however, that a settlement has been effected, and so far as the relations between the organization and its treasurer are concerned, the incident is closed and the affair has been arranged to the entire satisfaction of all concerned.

NO STRIKE ON

A Small Dispute at the Brunt Pottery Over Gilders' Pay.

There is a dispute at the Brunt pottery in the decorating department, and it is announced that a committee representing local No. 19 has been appointed to investigate the matter. The officials of the local claim that the gilders had been receiving nine cents a dozen for tracing, and that the company only wanted to pay eight cents a dozen. Mr. Henderson, of the Brunt company, this morning stated that there was no strike on, and that three girls quit work because the firm refused to pay an increase for certain work, and that no reduction had been made on the part of the firm. All other departments in this shop are at work.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOLS

Their Interests to Be Discussed in Convention on May 5 And 6.

The Columbiana County Sunday School convention will be held in the M. E. church in East Palestine Monday and Tuesday, May 5 and 6. The exercises open at 4:30 p. m. Monday with a conference on township work. In the evening Rev. Mr. Miller, East Palestine, will lead the devotions and Rev. J. W. Gorrell, of East Liverpool, and Rev. H. A. Dowling, assistant secretary of the Ohio Sunday School association, will make addresses.

Rev. R. E. Porter, Columbiana, will conduct the devotions Tuesday morning. An open parliament on "Present Day Problems" will follow. Reports on county departments will be made; normal work by Rev. W. M. Perry, Damascus; home department, by Mrs. H. L. Mitchell, Salem, and primary work, Mrs. Jennie McMillan, Lisbon. Rev. H. A. Dowling will deliver an address and the county officers will report.

Tuesday afternoon program includes addresses by Eli French, Salem; Mrs. E. D. Moore, East Liverpool; Rev. H. A. Dowling, and the question box by Rev. W. F. McCauley, Salem. In the evening there will be praise service, addresses by Rev. W. M. Glasgow, Wellsville, and Rev. H. A. Dowling. A consecration meeting led by Mrs. Dr. Carr, Leetonia, concludes the program.

IMPORTANT MEETING

TO BE HELD BY STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYES.

Many Matters of Interest to Come Up at the Gathering Tonight.

What gives promise of being one of the most important meetings that has been held by division No. 52, Amalgamated Association Street Railway Employes of America in this city, will be held in their new hall in the Larkins & Ferguson building in the East End this evening, and it is also expected that every member of the division will be present. This will be the last regular meeting before the first of the month, the date set at the last meeting for the East Liverpool Street Railway company to sign the new scale which was adopted by the employes.

Within the past few days officials of the division have written National President W. D. Mahon, of Detroit, Mich., advising him of the action of the local division in presenting a new scale to the company, and an invitation was extended to that gentleman to come to this city and attend the meeting to be held this evening. While he has not been heard from it is expected that such arrangements can be made at headquarters as will permit him to come here. If, however, it is found that Mr. Mahon cannot come, it is likely that R. L. Reeves, general secretary of the executive board of the national association, will be at the meeting, although this is one matter that has not been finally decided upon.

So far it is said the members of this division have an inclination to remain by the scale which calls for 22 cents an hour. However, there is a possibility that another conference will be held with the officials of the company and the executive board of the street railway division between now and next Wednesday, when some definite understanding may be reached.

During the past week, it is alleged, that the management of the street railway company has interviewed a number of the older employes of the raod with a view of ascertaining if possible the feeling of the men on the 22 cent proposition.

Although the result of these interviews have not been made public, it is generally understood that the employes are a unit in standing firm for their demands.

UNDER A PEACE BOND

Richard Burrows, Jr., Is Placed, on Complaint of His Father.

Richard Burrows, Jr., after eluding Constable Powell for over a week, walked into Justice McCarron's office this morning and answered to a complaint made by his father, Richard Burrows, Sr. The latter complained that his boy had threatened to maliciously assault him and for that reason he wanted him locked up. The squire released Richard, Jr., on a $300 peace bond.

Sewer Pipe Company Election.

At a meeting in Pittsburg of the Ohio River Sewer Pipe company the following officers were chosen: President, J. C. Bigger; vice president and secretary, Charles M. Stratton; treasurer, Harper Stratton; general manager, W. B. Stratton; superintendents, J. S. Casey and Harper Stratton. The factory of the company is located at Empire, and is being operated very successfully, being independent of the combine.

NEED OF HUSTLE TO GET THROUGH

Legislators Must Work Hard If They Adjourn on May 5.

LONGEST SESSION IN YEARS

Would Be Held Should the Legislature Keep at Work Beyond That Date. Matters of Interest Under Consideration at the Capital.

From a Staff Correspondent.

Columbus, April 26.—Representative Buell, of Columbiana, doubts very much that the legislature will adjourn on May 5, as provided for in the house resolution. The senate and the house are at odds on a number of important propositions, and the former body may take a notion not to concur in the time fixed by the house for final adjournment. The house refused to accept the senate amendments to the Archer game bill and the senate refused to agree to the house amendment to the Patterson redistricting bill, committees from both bodies having conferred on both propositions.

The general appropriation bills will come up for action in the senate next week and just what will be done to them is a matter of conjecture. There is a lurking suspicion that one or two senators, who are ill-humored over the refusal of the house to make laws of their pet measures will attempt to use the pruning knife on a number of appropriations.

If an adjournment is to be taken on the time fixed by the house the legislators will have to crowd more work into the coming week than has been accomplished in any preceding week of the session. The prolongation of the session till May 12 would make the longest held in years.

The house yesterday passed bills making it unlawful for concerns to use the union label on goods unless union labor is employed; to prevent the distribution and delivery of immoral literature; holding free from fraud the purchaser of property from an insolvent, who sells to defraud creditors; making appropriations for normal school departments at Miami and Ohio universities.

Representative Buell has been endeavoring to learn from the Mansfield reformatory whether there was truth in the rumor that Homer Knowles, of Salem, had been paroled, but he has been unable to do so. The published list of paroles granted did not contain Knowles' name, and it has been authoritatively stated at the governor's office that he has not been pardoned. About a year ago the state board of pardons rejected an application for a pardon for Knowles.

Upon recommendation of Senator Connell, John Mundy, of Summitville, has been appointed special agent for teh humane society of Ohio, which has headquarters at Cincinnati.

Miss Mary E. Smith and Miss Noble, of Wellsvlle, were members of the Ohio delegation which left Columbus in a special train Friday for Los Angeles, Cal., to attend the convention of the National Federation of Women's clubs, meeting there May 2 to 9.

A traveling library has been sent from the state library to Paul Kugler, librarian of the guild of the Grace Lutheran church at Columbiana. The library consists of 33 volumes.

Columbiana county was represented at the Royal Arcanum convention in this city this week by Messrs. C. H. Blazier, of East Liverpool, and Joseph Chain, of Salem.

A BOOM AT SALINEVILLE

Work on the New Pottery Attracts Many New Residents to the Town.

Work on the new plant of the Dresden China company at Salineville is progressing rapidly at the present time. The stone and foundation work has nearly been completed and the construction work will begin at once. Many families have arrived in Salineville since the new plant was assured and houses have now become very scarce.

From all appearances the little coal town is on the boom and the indications are that it will become quite an important town in the future.

As Well as the Akron And Chicago Men's Deals Are Still Hanging Fire. President Moreland, of the Union, Talks of the Projected Combine.

President A. M. Moreland and Vice President Frank W. Fowler, of the Union Potteries company, of Pittsburg, accompanied by Thomas Price, of Toronto, general manager of the Chelsea and Union plants, were in this city practically all day yesterday. This was the first visit of President Moreland to this city since January, which was soon after the Union Potteries company secured control of the local plant. Both gentlemen were on a general tour of inspection, and after the inspection of the Union had been completed a visit to the Chelsea at New Cumberland was made.

It was generally thought that the visit of Mr. Moreland to this city was in a measure in connection with the American Potteries company, but this was quite incorrect. There is very little doing now as far as the American Potteries company is concerned, and matters with that end of the business seem just at present very quiet. How long they will remain in such a state is up to eastern parties, who have so far been the prime movers in the advancement of the scheme to formulate a combination.

It has been learned from an authority that is absolutely reliable that so far as the Union Potteries company or Mr. Moreland personally was concerned there was never a time when this propostion was advanced either by the Union company or Mr. Moreland.

The first steps in taking up the cahrter of the old American Potteries company originated in the province of T. W. Tapscott, who is known in this city. So far as John R. Dos Passos was concerned, it is said that he had nothing whatever to do with the deal. When officials of the Union Potteries company were advised of the action of Mr. Tapscott the whole plan was laid bare to Mr. Moreland, and it required about 20 minutes to sign papers, and further than this the officials of the Union Potteries company have had nothing to do with the scheme.

Why the deal had not been closed is more than some of the parties interested in the new move would like to know. It has been said that it was the proposition that all potteries enter the combination free from debt. This was possible with the Union company, of this city, but whether it was the same with the eastern companies cannot be told. In fact, announcement has been made that all the plants should be free from indebtedness when they entered the American Potteries company, and the general impression is that some of the eastern concerns were not in a position where this could be done. There is ample eastern capital waiting to finance the scheme, although to form a combination of the pottery industry will be one of the hardest trials ever undertaken by man. The "trust" in the potteries has been given a black eye, and although this was several years ago, the mark is still visible. This was on account of the first promoters constantly increasing the capital stock, until it was practically nothing but water.

Business with the American Potteries Co. is at a standstill. The proposition of the Chicago gentlemen is also quiet, at least for the present. The idea to form a combination of the Akron potteries has been quiet during the past few days, but the general impression is that a combination of the pottery industry is bound to come sooner or later. The outcome of the present state of affairs will be watched with interest.

"There is only one reason why a combination has not been formed before this," said a prominent manufacturer to a News Review reporter today. "Whenever this subject has been brought up, each manufacturer wants as much for his plant as another. No matter how old his plant may be a like amount to that to be given to a new pottery is expected by the older manufacturer. I am sure this company will never enter a combination on such a basis," said the gentleman, who is connected with one of the newer plants. "There is reason in all thngs, and the most conservative thought is to be given this matter by the manufacturer who thinks his plant is worth as much as another. He may also make the claim that while his pottery is an old one, it is making as much money as the newer ones, and for that he reason he should be treated accordingly."

The Akron Journal in speaking of the proposition of Messrs. Irwin and Trainer, of Chicago, to form a combination, remarks: "The officials of the local companies claim that they have not heard of the deal, but allow that such a thing as a big pottery combination is shortly to become an actuality. The project has been much mooted, but hitherto no proposition acceptable to a majority of the manufacturers has been placed before them."

Official announcement is made that the first ware in the new addition to the Laughlin plant in the East End, will be made early in May. In fact, the company will stretch a point and have the plant started in about two weeks. At the start there will be four jiggers put on and probably five or six pressers. Others would be started, it is said, but there is not a sufficient number of moulds ready to put on a larger force.

A large number of applications have been received by the management of the Laughlin company for positions at its No. 3 plant. Of course more applications have been filed than there are positions, and it is said to be the intention of the management to pick the cream of the applicants. No information can be obtained as to who will become the heads of the several edpartments of the new shop.

Ted Merriman, a warehouseman at the Chetwynd plant, who has been unable to work for several weeks on account of illness, is now suffering with dropsy. It is said that he is very feeble.

A special meeting of the finishers has been called for this evening, and it is expected the scale of the jigger-

FOR COMMANDER

GARFIELD CAMP, S. OF V., NAMES J. J. ROSE.

Local Members Are Entitled to Recognition, and Expect to Land the Prize.

At the last meeting of the local camp Sons of Veterans a movement was started, which, from the enthusiasm manifested by the membership, can but result in the state headquarters of the order being brought to this city in 1903.

The Ohio division has never possessed a camp that has been more faithful, nor one which has given more loyal support to her officers and staff. In all the years of its existence Garfield camp No. 3 has had but one representative in the office of commander of the state organization. F. W. Myers, now of Moundsville, but who retains his membership in the East Liverpool camp, was the first colonel of the division, his election occurring early in the 80's. The camp has been prominently identified with every important move made by the state body, and has been represented at every annual encampment for the past 20 years.

The members now think it is time they should once more have the honor of a position as commander, and the boom will be started at the Lancaster encampment to be held next month. The name of John J. Rose, one of the oldest and most faithful workers in the ranks of No. 3, has been taken up and he will land the office in 1903.

Capt. C. H. A. Palmer of Cleveland, has been slated for the position this year, and while there may be some opposition, it will not be of a formidable character.

A GREAT GROWTH IN PAST TEN YEARS

Census Figures Which Give Ohio First Rank in Pottery Industry.

EAST LIVERPOOL'S TOTAL

Is 49 Per Cent of All the White And Semi-Vitreous Porcelain Produced in the County—Other Clay Industries in Ohio.

A recent election bulletin, from which the News Review published extracts on Thursday, says regarding Ohio manufactures:

There were 248 establishments engaged in the manufacture of pottery, terra cotta, and fire clay products in 1900, with 11,870 wage earners, the products valued at $11,851,225. In 1890 there were 125 establishments, 4,606 wage earners, and products valued at $5,047,501. The increase in the value of products during the decade was $6,803,724, or 134.8 per cent. The pottery products were valued at $6,994,805, and the terra cotta, fire and other clay products at $4,843,615. Ohio rose from second to first rank in this industry from 1890 to 1900. In the latter year the total value of its pottery, terra cotta, and fire clay products constituted 26.8 per cent of the total for the United States. The rank of Ohio in this industry is due very largely to the development of its extensive deposits of suitable clays. The value of special technical training in this line is appreciated, and a department of ceramics was established in the State University at Columbus in 1894.

The manufacture of white ware, the most important of the several branches of the industry, is carried on chiefly in the city of East Liverpool, on the Ohio river, in the eastern part of the state. This city is unique in the United States in its industrial activity is confined almost entirely to the manufacture of pottery. Of the 4,473 wage earners employed in all industries in this city in 1900, 3,908, or 87.4 per cent were employed in the pottery manufacture. The manufacture of yellow ware has been carried on at this point since 1839, but the manufacture of white ware, begun in 1872, has become the more important branch of the industry. In 1900 the white granite and semi-vitreous porcelain manufactured in East Liverpool were valued at $2,808,445, or 49.1 per cent of the total for the United States. The manufacture of white ware does not have the advantages of suitable clays near at hand, the kaolin and other fire clays used for the manufacture of china and porcelain being brought from a considerable distance. The remarkable development of the manufacture in East Liverpool, between 1872 and 1892, was due chiefly to the supply of specially skilled labor which has been attracted to that point from English pottery centers, in order to engage in the manufacture of coarser wares.

Zanesville, Roseville and Akron have always been important centers for the manufacture of yellow and earthen ware, the industry in the early years of the century being carried on chiefly by farmers, who made use of the clays found in abundance on their lands. Products were sent down the Muskingum to markets on the Ohio river, and even to New Orleans. In recent years, however, the farmer potter has been driven from the field by the concentration which has followed the introduction of improved machinery. Art tiling is manufactured extensively at Zanesville, and since 1880 Cincinnati has been an important center for the manufacture of art pottery. Ohio manufactures more than one-third of the sewer pipe made in the United States. There are large factories at or near Akron, and for many miles along the Ohio river. The manufacture was begun in the state in 1848, and considerable quantities of pipe are exported.

Allied to the manufacture of pottery is the manufacture of brick and tile. The products of the year 1900 were valued at $4,629,587. This industry is carried on in Ohio, not chiefly for the supply of the local building needs, as in most other states, but for the general market. Vitrified paving brick is made in large quantities at Zanesville and Canton and sent into many other states. Pressed brick is also an important product in Zanesville. The first pressed brick manufactured west of the Ohio river was made in that city in 1861.

CONTESTED ELECTION

George Figley Alleges That He Was Elected Trustee of Hanover Township.

Lisbon, April 26.—(Special)—An action has been commenced in the circuit court of this county, entitled, "The State of Ohio on the Relation of George Figley vs. Geo. W. Conser." Mr. Figley has obtained leave of the circuit to file his petition. He alleges that at the April election he received 184 votes for township trustee and Conser 180, but that the judges of election refused to count five votes legally cast for him and gave Conser the certificate.

The case will be heard at the November term of the circuit court.

A RIVER OF LAND.

Astonishing Amount of Earth That Flows Down the Mississippi.

"The capacity of the Mississippi for filling up canals and old channels is something awful," says John Swain in Ainslee's. "Government engineers have found that the amount of solid matter annually carried past Vicksburg in suspension is enough to make a block of earth 300 feet high and a mile square. Fifty feet off the top of this is spread around on the valley between here and the sea, and the rest goes out into the gulf of Mexico to build up more continent.

"Think what that means. Instead of a river of water this is a river of land. It would make a solid stream of earth five feet deep and nine feet wide, flowing night and day as fast as a man can walk, four miles an hour, all sliding down off the northern half of the country toward the sea. Year in, year out, that endless line of earth goes on. It would take a force of more than 50,000 men working in eight hour shifts to throw the dirt into the stream, supposing the river bed were rigid and an inexhaustible supply of dirt on the bank. It would make 25,000,000 wagon loads every year.

"But here—what are the use of such figures? Below Vicksburg—and above it, too, to an extent—we have the earth itself to speak for it. Except for the occasional fragments of the line of bluffs along the eastern edge below here which bob up at Fort Adams, at Natchez, at Grand Gulf, at Baton Rouge, at Port Hudson, there is nothing about the level of the high water river except the artificial levees. These are in places miles back, great earthen banks, sometimes thirty feet high or more, sodded and free from trees, which protect the wonderfully fertile region behind them.

"And all this level country which the river overflows and fertilizes is constantly increased by this river of dirt which the Mississippi brings down from the inner region, gathered all the way from the Rockies to the Alleghanies. Sometimes the river starts to eat away this land that it has made. In a single summer, if it will, it eats away half a mile of it out of some bend. It cuts it out sometimes an acre at a bite and takes with it forests, houses, levees and all else.

"The river is not a uniformly moving stream. One side or the middle moves swiftly; the other parts are still or sluggish. Sometimes even these run up stream. The swift part is the channel current and runs in the deepest sections. It makes crossings whenever driven off shore by a promontory. These crossings are dumping places for the surplus earth the river has picked up in the bend it is eating."

Christians and Jews.

When Charles Lamb was berating an enemy, some one said to him, "Why, you don't know him." Lamb replied, "I don't want to know him for fear I should like him."

Christians and Jews make ignorance of each other a claim for judgment and seem to be afraid to become acquainted for fear that they might like each other.—Peters' "The Jew as a Patriot."

Spectacles and Moisture.

Wearers of spectacles are frequently annoyed by the glasses becoming dim from a deposit of moisture upon them. An easy way to prevent this is to wash the glasses every morning with soft potash soap. The glasses should then be polished, but an invisible film will remain which will prevent moisture being deposited on them.

His Scheme.

Filbert—Aren't you afraid to be so knowing about poker when your wife is around?

Kilty—Quite the contrary. It is the man who laughs the loudest over a poker joke who knows the least about the game. My wife knows that, and it is my cue to be the man who does the loud laughter.—Boston Transcript.

EAST END

An Unusually Lively Scene About the Railway Siding in the East End.

A busy time was witnessed in the East End this morning at the south end of Virginia avenue, about the freight yards. All the sidings were filled with cars, and no less than six wagons were backed up to the cars on one side unloading freight. Never before was there so much freight business being done in this part of the city as at present.

The siding along the stock yards of the sewer pipe factory was filled and about six cars of pipe were being loaded today. At the several potteries in this part of the city, numerous cars were waiting to be loaded. The East End is fast becoming a business center.

Advised to Kiss And Make Up.

For some days there has been friction between two families in the Klondike, but now matters are serene. This was not brought about until Justice L. W. Carman had been told the troubles of the interested parties. It seems that the families have been neighbors for some months, and during this time relations were not at all agreeable. After Justice Carman heard the stories of both sides he advised the women to go to their homes, kiss and make up, and it now seems that his advice was heeded.

A special meeting of the board of trustees of the Erie street M. E. church will be held next Tuesday evening.

Miss Tillie Deever, of St. George street, has returned to the East End after spending several days at Negley visiting friends.

A meeting of the directors of the Federal Building & Loan association was held in the office on St. George street last evening.

The first money received for the new parsonage fund of the Erie street M. E. church was a $10 gold piece and was donated by one not a member of the church.

A DOWN EAST RILEY.

In Joe Lincoln Cape Cod Produces a Real Poet.

Cape Cod, that long, lean arm by which the old Bay State tries to fold the whole Atlantic to its breast, has done many things for the general good. It has dragged countless tons of fish from the ocean and each fall has handed us a generous dole of cranberries wherewith to sauce our Thanksgiving turkeys. Now it has given us a poet.

Joe Lincoln is the name by which he is most familiar to the reading public, although the title page of his new book, "Cape Cod Ballads and Other Verse," reveals that his more formal name is Joseph Crosby Lincoln. A genuine product of Cape Cod is Mr. Lincoln. He was born and reared there. His father and grandfather before him were natives of Cape Cod; also they were ship captains, as were many uncles, great-uncles and other relatives. Masters of cod schooners, whalers and East India merchantmen they were, wise in deep sea ways and with never even a rhymester among them. Joe Lincoln is the first of his line to stay ashore, but through much of his more serious poetry there breathes the spirit of the sea.

"Cape Cod Ballads" includes many humorous poems which have become widely familiar through the medium of the exchange editor's shears and the voice of the public reader. Among these are "The Reg'lar Army Man," "When the Minister Comes to Tea," "The Cuckoo Clock," "The Best Spare Room" and "The Village Oracle." Some of the ballads treat of more dignified topics, such as "The Codfisher," "The Song of the Sea" and "The Ballad of the Dream Ship." Among these is "The Life Saver," in which the poet has sung in swinging meter the praises of the surf heroes after this manner:

When the Lord breathes his wrath above
the bosom of the waters,
When the rollers are a-poundin' on the shore,
When the mariner's a-thinkin' of his wife
and sons and daughters
And the little home he'll, maybe, see no
more;
When the bars are white and yeasty and
the shoals are all a-frothin',
When the wild no'theaster's cuttin' like
a knife,
Through the seethin' roar and screech
he's patrollin' on the beach—
The gov'ment's hired man for savin'
life.

In his dialect poems Mr. Lincoln serves up for us such samples of delicious rural humor that he seems to merit the title of "a down east Riley," which has been applied to him. Of course such types as "The Village Oracle," "Aunt Mandy," "Matilda's Beau" and the like may be found in many places outside the sandy boundaries of Cape Cod because they are intensely human. Few small towns are without an "old Daniel Hanks," who is thus portrayed:

Some fellers reckon, more or less,
Before they speak their mind,
And sometimes calkerlate or guess,
But them ain't Daniel's kind.
The Lord knows all things, great or small;
With doubt he's never vexed;
He, in his wisdom, knows it all,
But Dan'l Hanks comes next.

"Cape Cod Ballads" is a handsome volume, being substantially bound, well printed and profusely illustrated with drawings by Kemble. It is the first collection made of Mr. Lincoln's verse and will probably be warmly welcomed

ECHO OF THE CONTEST

For the Speakership at the Opening of Present Legislative Session.

AGAINST BUYING FARMS

Items in Appropriation Bills For the Purchase of Land For State Institutions Opposed by the Democrats. Legislative Review.

Columbus, O., April 26.—[Special.]—That stage of the legislature has been reached which is disagreeable alike to both members and the presiding officers. It is the hurry and rush of the closing days, when bills are passed almost without consideration, and as rapidly as the clerks can read them and call the roll. Night sessions are being sandwiched in when local measures alone are considered and passed oftentimes without even a bare majority of the members present. A question has arisen as to whether bills acted upon in this way, and lacking in reality the necessary votes to pass, are legal, and weather, if their validity were to be questioned, they would stand a test in court. Bu so long as no one objects and the point is not raised the bills go on the statute books and become laws. The custom is not a new one, and has been followed by the legislature since the first session was held in 1802. Indeed, it is the only way in which the business can be transacted and disposed of before adjournment, and with all the haste and push and hurry many will be left unacted upon, and many go away disappointed. Fred Blankner, the veteran sergeant of the house, who has grown gray in the capital building, says that the present general assembly is acting in a decidedly more conservative way than many which he has attended, and is really entitled to credit, instead of censure. In any event, it is working hard and doing the best that lies within it.

THIS MAN IS ABOUT TO BUY A PAPER. CAN YOU FIND THE NEWSBOY?

But even this strenuous effort to get through may not be sufficient to bring adjournment by May 5, according to the resolution already passed in the house. The senate has refused thus far to concur in this, and may insist to postpone the final breaking up until a week later, or the 12th. The finance committee of the senate is disposed to act slowly in the matter of endorsing the appropriation bills, and will request the managers of the different state institutions and departments to personally appear and rehearse their wants. This will cause some delay, and it may be enough to keep the members here until two weeks from next Monday.

Perhaps the youngest member in the legislature is W. E. Guerin of Sandusky, Erie county. Guerin is but little more than a boy in years, but in ability he stands equal to those of twice his age. The chief thing to bring him into attention this session has been his chairmanship of the revision committee. After the speakership fight, in which he vigorously opposed McKinnon, the latter, while wishing to give him some chairmanship, did not feel disposed to put him on one of the more important committees, so he selected the revision. No one had heard of that for 20 years, and it had not held a meeting for a quarter of a century. But Mr. Guerin began looking up the law. He found the committee could be made an important one, and that its real purpose was to revise and pass upon the constitutionality of all bills introduced. So he announced that all measures presented to the house must first go into his hands. The speaker and the members were dumbfounded, so they looked up the law and found Guerin was right. That is how a committee that was supposed to be obsolete has become one of the most important in the legislature.

A decision of the supreme court handed down on Tuesday played sad havoc with the bill passed earlier in the session through the influence of Representative Pollock of Stark, prescribing the duties and creating a state board of examiners for stationery engineers, before which all applicants for work of that character must appear and pass an examination. The court held the bill to be unconstitutional and of no effect. An apprehension was immediately created that the decision would apply with equal force to all boards in the state created under a special act of the legislature. This alarm has, however, been taken away by Attorney General Sheets, who gives the opinion that only the board of stationary engineers is affected. Immediately upon receipt of the news of the action of the supreme court Mr. Pollock secured the aid of a number of prominent constitutional attorneys and drafted a new bill, eliminating those things to which the court had objected. This will be immediately passed, and go into effect May 1, so there will be no real delay in the operation of the board.

There has been no such contest in the legislature during the present session as marked the passage of the first appropriation bill in the house. While the struggle was primarily between the Democrats and the Republicans as to the justice of certain items contained in the measure, it took on the aspect of a personal matter between Speaker McKinnon and Representative Price of Athens before the close, and led to a bitter review of the speakership fight of last year. Price objected to the appropriation of $10,500 for the purchase of a farm owned by former Supreme Court Clerk Josiah Allen, to be used for the benefit of the state hospital at Athens. His opposition was based upon the ground that the farm was one which ought to go to the city, and should not in any event be purchased for the hospital, since that institution now has more land than it can well handle. But the real reason was a personal and political enmity which he bears to Mr. Allen, growing out of continued political contests in Athens county. He insists that both Mr. Allen and Congressman Grosvenor pledged him their support in the speakership fight, and later withdrew and openly worked for the election of Mr. McKinnon. Price remembered this, and openly flaunted it in the face of the speaker. He, moreover, maintained that the purchase of the farm was the fulfillment of a political deal made last winter between Dr. Rorick, superintendent of the hospital, and Mr. Allen, together with Congressman Grosvenor, whereby they supported Rorick for reappointment in return for his promise to push through the legislature the adoption of bills sanctioning the purchase of land which they own. Excitement ran high in the house, but through it all the speaker refused to lose his head, and made no reply except to say: "I thought the speakership matter was settled last winter, Price," to which the latter replied, "Oh, it's nothing against you personally, Mac, but I want to stand between the state and the carrying out of a political deal."

The bill was finally adopted, a portion of it by a majority vote, Democrats refusing to concur with Republicans, and the remainder by the solid vote of the entire house. Price stood steadfastly by his pledge, and voted with the Democrats upon that portion of the bill containing the appropriation for the Athens farm.

The second appropriation bill for the last three quarters of 1903 and the first quarter of 1904 has been submitted to the house by Chairman Crafts of the finance committee. It carries with it a total of $4,916,234, as compared with $4,982,000 in the similar bill introduced two years ago. Included among the appropriations is an item of $17,000 for the purchase of a farm at the Massillon State hospital, and $40,000 for the work of repairing the retaining wall along the canal bank at Cincinnati. It is the purpose of the Democrats to object ti both of these, on the ground that they are unnecessary and create a useless expenditure what warm debate, and it is doubtful if the Democrats will support the measure when it comes up for final passage. The second appropriation bill will be followed by the general deficiency measure, the last of the appropriation bills to be introduced. That will probably go through without an objection.

All the administration tax measures, both those raising money for state purposes and those reducing the state tax levy, have passed either one branch or the other, and a majority of them have passed both. The tax scheme of the governor is, therefore, to all purposes complete. The last of the bills to get through was that by Mr. Cole of Hancock, converting the money raised by the 2½ per cent tax placed upon the gross receipts in Ohio of fire and life insurance companies into the state treasury. This money has heretofore been going into the different city and county treasuries, where the companies did business. It is estimated that from this source alone the state will annually receive about $400,000, of which it has not heretofore had the use.

Painter's canal bill, which was introduced after the defeat of the bill presented by him earlier in the session providing for the abandonment of the canal system in Ohio, is booked for delay until at least the next session. The measure appoints the governor, secretary of state and attorney general a commission authorized to lease the berme banks of any canal in Ohio for railroad purposes for 99 years, and such portions of the towpath as lie along any abandoned portion of the canal for similar purposes. The real object to be attained was to make the canals self-sustaining.

Much anxiety is felt among his colleagues in the legislature over the illness of Senator Harding of Marion, who is confined to his rooms in the Great Southern hotel. A seemingly slight attack of neuralgia has developed into more serious complications, necessitating an operation. It is hoped this will bring relief and the senator be able to resume his duties during the week, although it is doubtful if he can be in his seat again during the session.

General Grant's Namesake.

A number of years ago a son was born to a colored woman in the south, and as he was her first she looked upon him with pride and was much at a loss to find a name for him. Relatives and friends, including her mistress, were appealed to; but, although many names were suggested, all were discarded.

After many days of deliberation she said one morning to her mistress: "Miss Mary, I'ze found a name for my boy. I'm going to name him Delicious."

"Why," said the lady, "where did you get that name?"

"Oh," she cried, "I'm going to call him that 'cause I want to name him for Mr. Grant."

When it was explained to her that the great hero was named Ulysses and not Delicious, she was somewhat disturbed in mind, but Ulysses did not please her, so the boy had to begin life burdened with the name Egbert Eugene.—Detroit Free Press.

Effect of the Sun on Monuments.

The perpendicularity of a monument is visibly affected by the rays of the sun. On every sunny day a tall monument has a regular swing leading away from the sun. This phenomenon is due to the greater expansion of the side on which the rays of the sun fall. A pendulum placed inside, say, Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square, would be found to describe on every clear day an ellipse of nearly half an inch in diameter.—English Mechanic.

As a result of a thorough investigation of the matter, Attorney General Knox has become convinced that there is a practical combination among the great meat-packing firms of the country. Hence he has directed that suit be brought in the United States district court at Chicago, under the provisions of the Sherman anti-trust law. Six great firms practically monopolize the meat trade of the country. President Roosevelt believes in the strongest enforcement of the anti-trust law, and the suit will be pressed with vigor. It will come up in the form of an application for an injunction, as the agreement between the parties is held to be in restraint of interstate commerce. The Sherman law declares every contract or combination in restraint of trade among the states to be illegal; and on conviction each party to the combination may be fined not to exceed $5,000, or be imprisoned not more than one year, or both. Further, any person injured in his business or property by the combination may recover in court three times the damage sustained, and the cost of the suit, including attorneys fees. In the case of the Addyston Pipe company, a number of manufacturers of cast-iron pipe combined in a similar way. The government got after them, and destroyed the combination. Probably the same result will follow in the case of the meat packers.

The orders which many railroad companies are issuing, forbidding employes to drink whether on or off duty, are affording a lesson in practical temperance, being the sort of prohibition which prohibits. In Cheyenne, Wyo., 25 saloons are said to have gone out of business in one month on account of the Union Pacific railroad having forbidden its men to frequent saloons.

Mayor Davidson's orders to the police to enforce the ordinance against the throwing of waste paper or other rubbish in the streets have been needed for a long time and if rigidly enforced will meet with general public approval. East Liverpool needs to be taught a lesson in regard to tidiness.

Columbus is evidently getting weary or indifferent as regards politics. The Republican state convention goes to Cleveland and the Democrats propose meeting somewhere else than at the state capital, simply because nobody there seems to care.

Ohio has produced many wonders, but the latest is a Democrat who refuses an office. The phenomenal gentleman was elected mayor of Uhrichsville and is reported to have left home to escape being inaugurated.

A Michigan man has resigned from office on the ground that he is not competent. Many a man makes the same discovery, and stays until the end of his term.

William J. Bryan at last announces that he willl not be a candidate for the presidency. A simple case of sour grapes; he can't be, with the consent of his party.

From the amount of discussion English papers are giving J. P. Morgan's latest purchases, it looks as if they feared he might try to buy up their island next.

Who says the Indians are not becoming civilized? Two tribes in Nebraska have formed a trust, to raise the price of souvenirs.

The Miles-Alger war on embalmed beef was only a skirmish compared with the conflict people would like to wage now.

Beef trust prices are not worrying the farmer who is fortunate enough to have fat cattle to sell.

The fish are biting and cases of truancy in rural schools are becoming extraordinarily frequent.

HIS WINNING HAND.

How a Consumptive Gentleman Captured a Big Jack Pot.

A couple of young men prominent in several of the best clubs of this city have been quite diligent in consulting the authorities and diagnosticians of poker since last September, when they encountered a new hand. Having suddenly decided to go hunting in the Adirondacks, they went there the last but one of the close season. As the sleepers were all full, they had to spend a night in a coach or stay over in Utica. The New Yorkers saw little choice between a Utica hotel and a Mohawk and Malone coach, so they decided to make the best of the night's ride, seeing they would begin shooting so much the sooner. On the train they found an acquaintance bound for the sanitarium for consumptives at Saranac. He introduced them to a friend, and the four sleepless weary wights began "a little game."

As the party was to break up at Saranac they started what they decided should be the last pot just as the rays of the red sun were breaking through the heavy mists of the lower lake. There were no chips, and the piles of coin and paper assumed quite inviting proportions. That last jack pot was a big one. The game was called just as the train stopped. At the showdown there were three "full houses."

"Well, gentlemen," said the consumptive as he calmly pocketed the money, "I guess it's mine. I have a hectic flush."—New York Times.

THE GREAT POETS.

Do Not Study Them For Knowledge; Read Them For Culture.

Young men and young women actually go to college to take a course in Shakespeare or Chaucer or Dante or the Arthurian legends. The course becomes a mere knowledge course. My own acquaintance with Milton was through an exercise in grammar. We parsed "Paradise Lost." Much of the current college study of Shakespeare is little better than parsing him. The class falls upon the text like hens upon a bone in winter. No meaning of phrase escapes them; every line is literally picked to pieces. But of the poet himself, of that which makes him what he is, how much do they get? Very little, I fear. They have had intellectual exercise and not an emotional experience. They have added to their knowledge, but have not taken a step in culture.

To dig into the roots and origins of the great poets is like digging into the roots of an oak or maple the better to increase your appreciation of the beauty of the tree. There stands the tree in all its summer glory. Will you really know it any better after you have laid bare every root and rootlet? There stand Homer, Dante, Chaucer and Shakespeare. Read them, give yourself to them, and master them if you are man enough.

The poets are not to be analyzed; they are to be enjoyed; they are not to be studied, but to be loved; they are not for knowledge, but for culture—to enhance our appreciation of life and our mastery over its elements. All the mere facts about a poet's work are as chaff as compared with the appreciation of one fine line or fine sentence. Why study a great poet at all after the manner of the dissecting room? Why not rather seek to make the acquaintance of his living soul and to feel its power?—John Burroughs in Century.

WEBSTER AS A DRINKER.

The Great Orator's Deep Potations Before Two Famous Speeches.

Daniel Webster was invited to Richmond in the fifties. He accepted the invitation, came to Richmond and went to the Exchange hotel. He was invited by the state legislature to address them and the people of Richmond, and a committee consisting of James Lyons of Richmond and Robert E. Scott of Fauquier, two of the most eminent lawyers in the state, were sent down to the hotel to escort him to the capitol building. They found Mr. Webster in a state of intoxication in such degree that Mr. Lyons said to Mr. Scott: "This man can't make a speech. You must take his place." Mr. Scott replied, "No man can take the place of Daniel Webster."

After delay, during which Mr. Webster improved a little, he was asked if he would go to the capitol. He replied, "Yes." With great difficulty Messrs Scott and Lyons supported and helped him to the capitol. When they reached the rotunda near the Washington statue, Mr. Lyons said, "Mr. Webster, do you think you can speak?" "If you will give me a drink of brandy, yes."

A messenger was sent to a neighboring hotel and a bottle of brandy brought. Mr. Webster poured out successively two goblets full and drank them off, straightened himself up, shook himself as a lion might have done, walked steadily and directly to the position from which he spoke, on the south porch of the capitol, and in the presence of an audience of 5,000 people, which consisted of the intellectuality and beauty of Richmond, male and female, made his celebrated October speech, one of the greatest even of his life.

Edward Everett related that on the day Webster replied to Hayne of South Carolina he walked with him to the capitol; that he seemed so badly prepared that he doubted him and feared that he was not equal to the occasion; that just before he rose to speak he drank a goblet of brandy and then made his great speech in reply to Hayne, which is an English classic. Such was the effect of the beverage on Webster.—Beverages.

One of Field's Crazy Jokes.

In his biography of Eugene Field Slason Thompson says that shortly after the humorist's arrival in Chicago it occurred to him one bleak day in December that it was time the people knew there was a stranger in town.

So he arrayed himself in a long linen duster, buttoned up from knees to collar, put an old straw hat on his head and, taking a shabby book under one arm and a palf leaf fan in his hand, he marched all the way down Clark street, past the city hall, to the office. Everywhere along the route he was greeted with jeers or pitying words, as his appearance excited the mirth or commiseration of the passersby.

When he reached the entrance to The Daily News office, he was followed by a motley crowd of noisy urchins, whom he dismissed with a grimace and the cabalistic gesture with which Nicholas Kooran perplexed and repulsed Antony van Corlear from the battlement of the fortress on Rensselaerstein. Then, closing the door in their astonished faces, he mounted the two flights of stairs to the editorial rooms, where he recounted, with the glee of the boy he was in such things, the success of his joke.

SO SAYS PROF. L. J. MILLER, CHEMIST.

Prof. L. J. Miller, late Professor of Chemistry and Botany of the High School of Ypsilanti, Mich., writes from 3327 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"As several of my friends have spoken to me of the favorable results obtained through the use of Peruna, especially in cases of catarrh, I examined it most thoroughly to learn its contents.

"I found it composed of extracts of herbs and barks of most valuable medicinal qualities combined with other ingredients, delicately balanced, calculated to tone up the system, restore the functions and procure health.

"I consider Peruna one of the most skillfully and scientifically prepared medicines, which the public can use with safety and success."—PROF. L. J. MILLER.

"Builds up the System."

Hon. Joseph H. Ridgeway, Secretary of the American Anti-Treat Society, writes the following letter from the Grand Central Hotel, St. Paul, Minn.:

"It is with great pleasure that I endorse Peruna as an honest medicine, competent to do all it claims. I have used it several times and know of nothing that cures so completely, and at the same time builds up the system.

Joseph Ridgeway.

"I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactory the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

"Feel Better Than for Five Years."

Mr. James B. Taylor, Roberts, Ind., writes:

"I am at the present time entirely well. I can eat anything I ever could. I took five bottles of Peruna, and feel better now than I have for five years. I have doctored with other doctors off and on for fifteen years, so I can recommend your medicine very highly for stomach troubles. I take great pleasure in thanking you for your free advice and Peruna."—James B. Taylor.

"I Enjoy my Meals as I Used to."

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes:

"I am pleased to say that I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peruna. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Before I would get half through my meal my stomach would fill with gas causing me much distress and unpleasant feelings for an hour or two after each meal. But, thanks to your Peruna, I am now completely cured, and can eat anything I want to without any of the distressing symptoms. I can now enjoy my meals as I used to do, and it is all due to Dr. Hartman and his wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"It has been one year since I was cured, and I am all O. K. yet, so I know I am cured."—J. W. Pritchard.

Dyspepsia is a very common phase of summer catarrh. A remedy that will cure catarrh of one location will cure it anywhere. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. That it is a prompt and permanent cure for catarrh of the stomach the above letters testify.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

COUNTY FAIR PROJECT

Meeting to Be Held Tonight at Fairview to Consider It.

A meeting to which everybody in Hancock is invited is to be held in the town hall in Fairview this evening at 7:30 for the purpose of organizing a company to hold a county fair. Fusion Declared Unfeasible.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 26.—At a meeting of the Third legislative district Democratic committee yesterday afternoon the following were elected delegates to the state convention: Ex-State Chairman John M. Garman, B. W. Davis, Tod Walsh and Isaac Weill. The question of fusion with the independent Republicans on the state ticket was condemned as not being feasible.

She Was Big Enough.

"Run up like a good little girl," said the portrait agent as he came up the steps, "and ask your mamma if she wishes to be enlarged.

"Dacious, no!" lisped Ethel in horror. "Mamma don't want to be any larger. She weighs dree hundred pounds, sir."—Chicago News.

How Oriental People Wash.

"European tourists in the east," said a traveler, "have before now remarked on the various degrees of dirtiness manifested by the oriental races. But their dirtiness is not only to be differentiated in degree, but also in kind. Your only partially civilized man is clean in spots. Civilization might be measured by the size and number of the spots until, in the perfect civilization, I suppose, it will be all clean spot. But different races put the spots in different places; so, observing this, there has grown up a saying among the Europeans in the east that the Chinese wash their clothes, but not themselves; the Japanese wash themselves, but not their clothes, and the Koreans wash neither. Were there nothing else to judge by, it might be a pretty question whether the Chinese or the Japanese are the more civilized."

The Earth to Be Like the Moon.

The water of the earth is all destined to disappear from the surface of the globe by being absorbed by subterranean rocks, with which it will form chemical combinations. The heavenly spheres exhibit sufficiently striking examples of such an evolution. The planet Mars shows what will become of the earth in some thousands of centuries. Its seas are only shallow Mediterraneans of less surface than the continents, and these do not appear to be very high, and in the appearance of the moon, all cracked and dried up, we have a view of the final state of the earth, for the absorption of the water by the solid nucleus will be followed by that of the atmosphere.

Praise of Work Well Done.

Perhaps there is nothing else so productive of cheerful, helpful service as the expression of approval or praise of work well done, and yet there is nothing so grudgingly, so meagerly given by employers. Many of them seem to think that commendation is demoralizing and that the voicing of appreciation will lead to listlessness and the withdrawal of energy and interest. This evinces but a poor knowledge of human nature, which is always hungering for approbation. But how mistaken such views are is shown by the loyal and unstinted service given to those large minded men who treat their employees as members of a family committed to their care.—Success.

Her Consolation.

At a confirmation at Strassburg the bishop asked of a pretty soubrette the usual question of the Heidelberg catechism:

"What is your only consolation in life and death?"

The neophyte blushed and hesitated. The first question was repeated, and then she stammered out:

"The young shoemaker in the next street."—London Tit-Bits.

A Good Hearted Man,

or in other words, men with good sound hearts, are not very numerous. The increasing number of sudden deaths from heart disease daily chronicled by the press, is proof of the alarming prevalence of this dangerous complaint, and as no one can foretell just when a fatal collapse will occur, the danger of neglecting treatment is certainly a very risky matter. If you are short of breath, have pain in left side, smothering spells, palpitation, unable to lie on side, especially the left, you should begin taking

Dr. Miles' Heart Cure.

J. A. Kreamer of Arkansas City, Kans., says: "My heart was so bad it was impossible for me to lie down, and I could neither sleep nor rest. My decline was rapid, and I realized I must get help soon. I was advised to try Dr. Miles' Heart Cure, which I did, and candidly believe it saved my life."

COOKING HINTS.

Don't add lard, molasses or sugar to bread if you wish to keep well and be wholesome.

Potatoes baked thoroughly, but not allowed to turn dark, are the best to be used for creamed potatoes.

If salad dressing curdles when being mixed, add a little cold water, stir quickly, and it will become quite smooth.

If tea be ground like coffee or crushed immediately before boiling water is poured upon it, it will yield nearly double the amount of its exhilarating qualities.

If a sliced onion and carrot are cooked with veal, it will be found that the flavor of the rather tasteless meat is much improved. Veal cutlets rely for their flavor on the tomato sauce that is usually served with them.

A delightful flavor is sometimes given to steak by placing it overnight in a bath of oil and vinegar. In the morning it is wiped before the broiling, but enough of the mixture has been absorbed to give it a decided flavor.

If in making split pea soup a teacupful of whipped cream is put in the tureen just as the soup is poured over, the improvement in flavor of the soup will be noticeable. This puree has sometimes a flat, even watery taste that is not at all agreeable, which the whipped cream entirely removes.

DANCING NOT INHERENTLY EVIL

By Right Rev. GEORGE F. SEYMOUR, S. T. D., LL. D., Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Springfield, Ills

LARGE numbers of excellent, religious people condemn dancing in the severest terms of reprobation and forbid their converts to dance with the same breath with which they forbid them to kill or commit adultery or steal.

THE EFFECT OF SUCH TEACHING IS MOST PERNICIOUS. IT IS IN ITSELF FALSE; IT PRONOUNCES EVIL WHAT GOD HAS NOT CURSED—NAY, WHAT HE HAS RECOGNIZED AS AN OFFERING ACCEPTABLE TO HIMSELF AND WHICH HE HAS EVEN COMMANDED MEN TO MAKE TO HIS GLORY AND PRAISE.

Dancing is the poetry of motion. It is the expression to the eye of what music conveys to the ear. It is oftentimes spontaneous and involuntary. The hand, the head, the body, will without our thought or consent keep time with the tune which floats in upon us from the voice of the sweet singer or the notes of the instrument. TO TEACH, THEREFORE, THAT DANCING IS ITSELF EVIL AND IS TO BE AVOIDED AS SIN IS AS GRAVE AN ERROR AS CAN WELL BE COMMITTED.

It is an impeachment of the truth of God, it is an indictment against the handiwork of our Maker in the highest and best instincts of our nature; it is calculated to bewilder the moral sense, especially of the young, as to good and evil.

DANCING IS NOT INHERENTLY EVIL ANY MORE THAN MONEY IS OR THE DRAMA IS OR MUSIC IS.

It may be and often is abused. There are lascivious dances and there are bad people who dance, and there are occasions when one ought not to dance. So precisely are the lewd songs and improper plays and vile purposes to which money is put, but these are no arguments against the legitimate use of music or the drama or money. One can no more consistently condemn dancing than he can condemn money or music or the drama.

An Unusual Contribution.

A number of years ago Mr. and Mrs. Leland Stanford were traveling through the middle west incognito. They happened to be in Bloomington, Ind., one Sunday and, pursuant to their usual custom, went to church. They attended the Christian church of Bloomington, then largely in the hands of Amzi Atwater. When the plate was passed for the collection, Mrs. Stanford dropped in a ten dollar goldpiece. Mr. Atwater was the deacon in charge of the collection taking. It was noticed that the ushers held a hurried conference with him when the money was taken forward.

At its conclusion Mr. Atwater said: "Ladies and gentlemen, there has evidently been a mistake. Some one has dropped a ten dollar goldpiece into the collection. If he will pass up after the services, we will be glad to allow him to exchange it for the amount he intended to give."

It is, of course, needless to say that Mrs. Stanford did not take advantage of the opportunity.

William Wirt's Reformation.

William Wirt, the great lawyer, attorney general of the United States and prosecutor of Aaron Burr when he was tried for treason, was stupefied and made sensuous by liquor. At times he lost all self control and self respect. On one occasion while drunk he fell in the streets of Richmond. While lying there asleep Miss G., the most beautiful woman in the city, to whom he was betrothed, came along, saw him and placed her handkerchief, on which was her name, over his face. He wakened, saw the name, learned the incident, and it reformed him.—Beverages.

Terrific Western Storms Cause Havoc to Lives and Property—Children Blown For Blocks and Only Slightly Injured.

Joplin, Mo., April 25.—Joplin was visited yesterday by the most destructive storm in its history, during which at least two persons were killed outright, six fatally injured, a score or more seriously hurt and $300,000 worth of property was destroyed.

The Dead.

No Warning From Storm.

The fury of the storm broke loose at 4:35 o'clock yesterday afternoon. There was no premonition of its terrible violence. The wind was a straight gale, but it was of terrible velocity, whipping down scores of houses in the south part of the city and reducing to kindling wood $100,000 worth of the finest mining plants in this district.

The worst havoc in Joplin city was in a territory 10 blocks wide, commencing at the west limits of the city at Seventeenth street and ending at Seventh street on the east. The home of Mrs. Nellie Sullivan was destroyed and the entire family was injured by falling timber. Mrs. Sullivan was badly hurt about the head and face, and her 2-year-old baby was blown 50 yards into a pond and saved from drowning by the heroic efforts of her 7-year-old brother, who had also received injuries from the storm.

Child Blown Three Blocks.

One room of the residence of S. D. Brower, on Ivy street, was blown away and his young son was carried three blocks, receiving only slight injuries.

Three people were killed at Moonshine hill. News of the terrible destruction there did not reach the city until late last night. The hill is now a tangled mass of debris, and not a house is left standing. It is populated mainly by miners who live in little shacks.

Of the little home of Bidwell Hunter not a timber is left standing, and the three inmates of the house are dying, all having had their skulls fractured.

Big Anthracite Deal.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 26.—A big deal in the anthracite coal trade was consummated yesterday. The Algonquin Coal company sold its Pine Ridge and Laurel Run collieries to the Delaware and Hudson company. The two mines have an output of 350,000 tons annually, and employ about 1,000 men.

National League Determined to Follow Up Victory In Lajoie Case.

New York, April 26.—The National league executive committee completed its first regular session at the Fifth Avenue hotel last night. The members declined to make public their plans for conducting the fight against the American league. James A. Hart of Chicago, admitted that the National league would follow up the victory gained in the Pennsylvania supreme court in the Lajoie case.

The umpire question was taken up, and the committee selected Charles B. Powers of Pittsburg, as the fifth on the staff. Mr. Powers is a newspaper man, has successfully managed several minor leagues, and was once a league umpire.

Two Bodies Recovered.

Cairo, Ills., April 26.—Two bodies were taken from the wreck of the steamer City of Pittsburg yesterday. One was that of a white woman, and was so badly burned that positive identification was impossible. It is supposed to be that of Mrs. Clay Breeze, of Uniontown, Ky. Another body recovered was that of a colored man.

OLD TIMES IN TENNESSEE.

When Pelts Were as Plentiful as Pennies In the State.

Probably few people know that the original name of the state of Tennessee was Franklin or that in 1788 the salaries of the officers of this commonwealth were paid in pelts, but the following is a correct copy of the law:

"Be it enacted by the general assembly of the state of Franklin, and it is hereby enacted by authority of the same, that from and after the 1st day of January, 1788, the salaries of this commonwealth be as follows—to wit:

"His excellency the governor, per annum, 100 deerskins.

"His honor the chief justice, 500 deerskins.

"The secretary to his excellency the governor, 500 raccoon skins.

"County clerk, 300 beaver skins.

"Clerk of the house of commons, 200 raccoon skins.

"Justice's fee for serving a warrant, one minkskin."

At that time the state of Franklin extended to the east bank of the Mississippi river, and on the west bank was that great unknown forest region of Louisiana. It was then a "terra incognita," save a few canoe landings and Indian trading posts on the river banks. It was known as the district of Louisiana and in 1805 was made the territory of Louisiana.

The state of Franklin, which became Tennessee in 1796, was almost as little known. The now great city of Memphis was a mere trading post and was not laid out as a village until 1820.

Pelts were as plentiful in those days as pennies and much better distributed for purposes of currency and barter. The pioneers were perhaps as happy and as well contented as is the average citizen now.—Arkansas Gazette.

Anniversary Thoughts.

"Hubby, dear, do you know that we will have been married ten years next Tuesday?"

"Yes; I realize that we are getting along and should begin to economize for the needs of the future."

"It is not the future that I am thinking about, but the present."—New York Journal.

TIMELY DOINGS IN SPORTING CIRCLES.

What Champion Jones Says About Jumpers' Training—Interesting Equine Talk—Nasturtium.

S. S. Jones, the intercollegiate champion, speaks as follows on the art of high jumping:

"Almost any healthy young man can, if he so desires, excel in some branch of athletics. What he wants to do is to find out just what comes the easiest to him. I say this because I know that many men could practice for years and never make a success of high jumping, while they might become champions in some other branches of sport in a very short space of time.

"I began 'gym' work when fifteen years old, and it wasn't long before I discovered that the high jump was my forte. I was perhaps greatly aided by my exceptional height, even at that age. I discovered I had a fairly good spring and in a short time I was clearing the bar at 5 feet 2 inches. It came rather natural to me, and I improved steadily. At seventeen I won the interscolastic championship with a jump of 5 feet 10 inches. That shows how fast I had improved. From that time on I gradually improved my record.

"Under six feet I do not take a very hard spring. Above that height I use all the strength I possess in my jumping leg.

"When jumping about six feet, the landing becomes important. Carelessness in this respect may cause an ankle to be turned or a ligament torn. There is only one way to land, and that is in a crouching position, facing the bar.

"A month or so before the contest I try myself out and do this weekly until the event I am training for comes off. It is very necessary to jump to your limit once in awhile in order to become accustomed to a good height."

W. C. Whitney has been having this year a great deal of what sportsmen are in the habit of terming "hard luck." His stable of thoroughbreds was ravaged by influenza, and many of his prospective stake winners received serious setbacks; then his candidate for the English Derby, Nasturtium, was attacked by pneumonia, and last reports indicate that there is but little chance of his recovering old time strength in time to start in the classic of the British turf.

Mr. Whitney paid $50,000 for Nasturtium, and the expense of sending him abroad cost several thousand more. If the horse is not in form for the race, it will be a great disappointment to Mr. Whitney, but he is a thorough sportsman and in that event will probably try to capture next year's Derby. Nasturtium was sold to Mr. Whitney by A. L. Aste, a New York Italian, who started life as a bootblack and still derives his income from a large number of stands.

Richard Croker's recent purchase of Clommell's two yearling colts for 5,000 guineas again directs the attention of the English turfmen to the American's ambition. Mr. Croker is fortifying his stable constantly and is reported as desirous of purchasing several of Mr. Whitney's cracks.

The Croker horses are entered in the chief classic events of the coronation year. He is buying up thoroughbred yearlings because he is ambitious and hopeful of winning a future Derby. The horses at Wantage are in superb condition. Mr. Croker himself over-

EAST LIVERPOOL LOST THE SECOND

Winter A. C. Easily Defeated the Home Team, Score 11 to 5.

And Maintained Their Lead Until the Finish—The Contest Devoid of Exciting Features—A Number of Clever Plays Made.

The local base ball team played in hard luck yesterday afternoon at West End park, confronted for the second time by the Winter Athletic club, of Pittsburg. At no stage during the game did the locals entertain a hope of victory. They were beaten from the first inning, and at the finish they walked off the field, giving evidence of mortification.

At the beginning of the third inning, when the score stood 2 to 0 in favor of the visitors, East Liverpool made a little spurt by pounding out four hits and scoring as many runs, but they amounted to nothing when the Pittsburgers finished the inning with an addition of four runs to their score. The visitors at this juncture concluded that Diebold would soon be knocked out of the box and to save him the humiliation, Captain Kress let him exchange positions with the right fielder, Jones. It had the desired effect, for in the next three innings neither side scored. The visitors, however, started again in the seventh by scoring a run and following it up with four rune in the eighth.

In the ninth the locals ran their score to five and then quit. The visitors, having 11 runs to their credit, left the park jubilant in victory.

The game was practically featureless, but one play being worthy of praise. That was made in the second inning when Osborne ran nearly to the fence and closed in on Chadwick's high fly.

Pattie Patterson, of Wellsville, did good work in the box for the locals, and also at the bat.

J. Boyle tried in vain to do the grand stand act.

Diebold in the box was rank, but in the field a hard one to beat.

The decisions of Umpire Tyson were conscientiously made and he met the approval of both teams.

Reese, Patterson, Ferguson and Fred Heckathorn carry the batting banners.

CHICAGO CAPITALIST

Investigating the Gas Apparatus Construction Company's Process.

Mr. J. F. Drea, a Chicago iron master and capitalist, was in East Liverpool a few days this week, investigating the Gas Apparatus Construction company's process, in the interests of a Chicago syndicate which is contemplates purchasing the right to use the process in connection with their mills. Mr. Dea, after examining the process and plant, says that it is admirably adapted for use in iron and steel production, particularly on account of it being free of sulphur and other hydrocarbon properties.

He was quite enthusiastic over the process and arranged for a block of stock in the local company for himself and associates.

A LOCAL SYNDICATE

Buys Foreign Gas Rights at a Big Figure.

An unusually large deal was consummated yesterday, when a local syndicate, headed by Robert Burford, president of the Burford Bros. Pottery company, purchased the foreign patent rights in the Judge William Howell Williams process for manufacturing and isolating carbon monoxide gas for commercial purposes.

The consideration is private, but it is known that it runs up into five figures.

This is the process which is being demonstrated by the Gas Apparatus Construction company, in which so many of our local citizens are interested. Mr. Burford feels that he has got a hold on a good thing. Mr. Burford and Mr. Hammerton will go to England in the fall for the purpose of interesting foreign capital.

Age of the Brass Band.

"As antiquities go nowadays," says Harvey Sutherland in Ainslee's, "the brass band is a very ancient institution. That is to say, its inventor died in 1894 at the age of eighty. There were horns before Adolphe Sax, to be sure, but not such horns as we have now, for they could not play every tune in every key. They could not even play a scale in any key. The very first band entirely of brass was organized in 1835, and I doubt if any of the instruments then used could be played upon by modern musicians without special practice. It is only back to 1783 when a full regimental band of the British army consisted of two oboes, two clarinets, two horns and two bassoons. It must have sounded even funnier than Tennyson's famous combination of 'flute, violin and bassoon.'

"How long a way we have come since 1783 may be learned from the ensemble of a first class modern band. The modern band of forty-two pieces has half as many oboes and bassoons as the ancient band of eight pieces, seven times as many clarinets and nine times as many horns, to say nothing of the saxaphones, which are part clarinet and part horn."

Odd Drinking Cups.

When every man got drunk and was proud of it in olden days, much ingenuity was expended in the construction of queer and elaborate drinking vessels, and many such are yet to be found in museums, especially in Germany.

One preserved in a Berlin museum represents Diana mounted on a stag and surrounded by hounds and huntsmen. The cup consists of the hollow body of the silver stag, the head of which is removable. The piece stands fourteen inches high. It was made at Augsburg in 1610. It is also an automobile propelled by clockwork concealed in the base.

Trick cups which drenched the uninitiated were very popular. Another variety contained wine and water in separate compartments. The drinker who did not know how to manage them filled his mouth with water, though the cup was apparently full of wine.

The glass with the fighting hares, in the same museum, belonged to Friedrich Wilhelm I. The hares represent two of his ministers and boon companions.—New York Herald.

Injuries From Carbolic Acid.

Warnings are given in a medical journal against the injury to skin and even bone which may result from the long continued use of weak—say, 3, 2½ or even 2 per cent—carbolized applications, especially upon peripheral portions of the body, such as the fingers. This effect, it is asserted, is due in a small measure to the action of carbolic acid upon the vasomotor system, but in the main to its destructive effect upon the red and white blood corpuscles.

This induces, partly in a mechanical and partly in a chemical way, stasis, first in the capillaries and, if the action of the drug be continued, then in the larger veins and arteries, with the result that the nutrition of the part is interfered with and the removal of the harmful substances hindered; the maceration of the epidermis caused by the acid favors evaporation, that the gangrene is a dry one, a mummification, as it were.

Self Help In Case of Fire.

As a house is never attacked by fire at the top and bottom at once, if there is a safe and ready exit at both top and bottom very little danger to life is to be feared. It is important that all exits should be so known as to be easily found by day or night by every inmate of the house. If the clothes you have on catch fire, a blanket, rug or some such woolen article should be quickly and tightly wrapped around you. Air is thus excluded, and the fire goes out.

A small fire in a room can often be put out in the same way in preference to pouring water on it. In case of fire keep all doors shut as far as possible. If a room is full of smoke, keep low or crawl, because smoke and hot air both rise, leaving the floor comparatively clear.

With a Purpose.

"Wasn't there an ungrammatical sentence in one of your speeches?"

"There was," answered Representative Husker. "I put it there on purpose. You see, we're plain folks up to Punkin Corners, and I don't want my constituents to think I'm getting proud just because I've come to congress."—Washington Star.

"I wonder," observed Mrs. B., who resides next door. "if it's as strong as the passion your daughter's music develops in my husband?"

RETALIATED ON MONEY.

Mississippi Senator Must Answer a Charge of Assault.

Washington, April 26.—Senator Hernando D. Money, of Mississippi, yesterday was placed in custody on information sworn out by Orpha D. Shaner, the street car conductor who ejected the senator from his car Thursday. The information charges the senator with assault.

Senator Money, Conductor Shaner and James E. Hooper, the truck foreman of the fire department who assisted the conductor, were arraigned in police court later and their trial set for next Thursday morning. All the parties were given a preliminary examination before District Attorney Mullowny. A witness named Martin said he heard an exchange of words between Money and Shaner regarding a transfer. The senator refused to pay either transfer or fare. The conductor then took hold of and ejected him. While the conductor was returning to the car, with his back to the senator, the latter approached the former and struck him with a knife. Witness Martin swore to this statement and the information then was made out against the senator. Senator Money said he wanted "the whole thing over with as soon as possible."

CABINET DISCUSSED CANAL.

Terms of Propositions in the Panama and Nicaragua Routes.

Washington, April 26.—The cabinet discused the relative propositions of the Colombian and Nicaragua governments in connection with the proposed canal. Both propositions will be submitted to congress at once.

If the Panama route is chosen Colombia gets $7,000,000. If the choice falls on the Nicaragua route, Nicaragua will receive $6,000,000 and Costa Rica $1,000,000. No provision is made in the Colombian protocol for the payment of annual rent. That matter will be left to future adjustment. The agreements as to the Nicaragua canal, however, specifically state of the rent to be paid—which is $30,000 per annum—Nicaragua will get about $25,000 and Costa Rica $5,000. While this rent is merely nominal, it serves a useful purpose in the estimate of the isthmus republics, namely, to continually assert the nominal sovereignty of Nicaragua and Costa Rica over the territory through which the canal is cut.

PORTO RICO'S TRIBUTE.

Nearly 40,000 Island Subscribers to McKinley Memorial Fund.

Cleveland, O., April 26.—Myron T. Herrick, treasurer of the McKinley National Memorial association, has received a remittance of nearly $1,700 from Governor Hunt, of Porto Rico, who has gathered the contributions of the inhabitants of that newly acquired territory.

Nearly forty thousand inhabitants of the island are contributors. Their offerings were in very small amounts, being limited by Governor Hunt to 10 cents each. It is pointed out that a similar unanimity of sentiment here at home would insure the completion of the fund within a very few months.

No Cars Running In Lima.

Lima, O., April 26.—The street railway company made an ineffectual effort yesterday to run cars and break the strike. Motormen who were persuaded to take out cars were immediately driven off by strikers. W. D. Green, a former conductor, was knocked from his car and kicked and beaten. He swore out warrants for the arrest of several strikers. No cars are running, and there is no likelihood of any starting today.

An Ohio Village Doomed.

Findlay, April 26.—Custar, an oil town of about 500 inhabitants, 20 miles northwest of here, is being licked up by flames. The town has asked for aid from surrounding towns and meager messages state that the entire village is doomed. The origin of the fire cannot be learned, but as the buildings are mostly of pine there is little hope of rescue. At this time all communication is shut off.

He only confers favors generously who appears, when they are once conferred, to remember them no more.—Johnson.

A BOMB READY FOR THEODORE SHAFFER.

Federation Organizer Flynn Seeks to Refute Amalgamated President's Words.

WILL TRY TO SPEAK ON FLOOR OF CONVENTION.

Delegates Lining Up Their Factions For Battle on Monday Over the Committee Reports—Big Rally of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers Today.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 26.—If the opponents of Theodore Shaffer are not balked, a bombshell will be sprung Monday on the floor of the national convention of the Amalgamated association. Yesterday T. H. Flynn, one of the national organizers of the American Federation of Labor, arrived in the city, and stated that the purpose of his visit was to secure a hearing from the convention and refute the assertions President Shaffer has made, both in this convention and before it was assembled, reflecting upon President Samuel Gompers and the attitude of the federation during the steel strike of the summer of 1901.

Interest Centers on Flynn.

Nothing else than Flynn's mission is talked of among the delegates, and they are rapidly dividing into two factions, one desirous of according Flynn a hearing and the other—made up of the more enthusiastic supporters of Shaffer—determined that no outsider shall be accorded a hearing for his admitted purpose of berating the head of the Amalgamated association. Mr. Flynn said in an interview that every assertion reflecting upon Gompers and the federation, published as emanating from Shaffer, was without the shadow of foundation, and this he could readily demonstrate if the convention in a spirit of fairness would accord him the opportunity.

Officers' Policy Approved.

The wage committee practically completed its report yesterday and now all the committees are ready to report to the convention Monday morning. No session was held today on account of the big rally.

The wage committee's report will be submitted Monday. On account of the failure of the committee to get through sooner the delegates have given up all hope of being able to go home Monday night. It now is certain the convention cannot finish until Wednesday. The wage report contains a lengthy argument in favor of the policy followed by the executive officers in signing up before the convention. The minority report is devoted principally to the constitutional argument against the new scales. It is known that the scales themselves are satisfactory to the entire convention. Two days will be required to dispose of the committee reports.

Want Assessments Increased.

Another matter that will require much discussion is the raising of the assessments. The stoutest advocate of increased funds is Walter Larkins, the second district vice president. The plan proposed is to put the assessments on a percentage basis, in accordance with the wages of the members. The present dues are 60 cents a month. The same thing has been tried at several conventions, but always failed. There is more chance of success this year, because the association was handicapped during the last strike by lack of funds, and the delegates realize the necessity of increasing the treasury.

Another city has entered the race for the 1903 convention—Terre Haute, Ind.—but either Columbus or St. Louis will win out. It now looks as though Pittsburg will retain the headquarters, the supporters of Wheeling, Youngstown and Columbus having failed to get together to unite on one when the fight on the floor of the convention is made.

Ticket Speculator Bowled Out.

New York, April 26.—The appellate division of the supreme court decided yesterday that a theater owner might refuse to accept any ticket not sold by himself. The decision was made in a suit brought by W. H. Collister, a ticket speculator, to restrain a theater owner from interfering with the plaintiff's business of selling tickets in front of the theater.

Judge Wm. P. Jenks Dead.

Dubois, Pa., April 26.—Judge William P. Jenks died yesterday at his home in Brookville, aged 80 years. He was a brother of George A. Jenks solicitor general under President Cleveland. Mr. Jenks was formerly president judge of the Jefferson-Clarion district, and had practiced law many years in Western Pennsylvania.

STOCKS SEE-SAWED WITH GRAIN

Large Buying of U. S. Steel—Ten Million Allowance to Underwriters Not Made Clear.

New York, April 26.—There was a persistent tendency Friday among the stocks of grain carrying railroads to move in a see-saw fashion with the price of grain. The heavy liquidation and a heavy break in prices in the early grain market sent prices of the grangers up with a rush, Union Pacific leading with an extreme advance of 2¼. The movement spent its force when it was seen that good buying had developed in the grain market at the decline. The whole market felt the lack of the early aggresive leadership of Union Pacific. There was a late advance in the southern group marked by very large buying of Southern Railway at an extreme advance of 1⅜. Louisville was lifted at the same time 2¾ and Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville rose 3⅛ over Thursday night after erratic fluctuations.

There was large buying of the United States Steel stocks during the morning by brokers usually employed by the syndicate. This buying seemed to be in connection with the issues of the bond circular. The stocks reacted and became dull with the rest of the market. The circular disclosed that $35,000,000 of the proceeds of the bond issue is designed to capitalize expenditures already made for improvements and for properties purchased. The executive committee also estimates that the expenditures of about $25,000,000 for proposed improvements will add from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000 to the yearly profits. The $50,000,000 proceeds of the sales of bonds for cash are thus accounted for. The provision for the $10,000,000 allowed the underwriting syndicate and its managers, J. P. Morgan & Co., at the rate of 4 per cent of the $250,000,000 bond issue, is not made clear.

There was a great variety of movements among the specialties. Amalgamated Copper advanced on the conjecture that the consolidation of the Heinze interests was preliminary to their absorption. The stock lost its gain. Sugar was weak on the proposed investigation of the company's Cuban holdings by a senate committee.

The preliminary figures of the week's cash movement indicate receipts on balance from the interior by banks of upwards of $2,000,000, to which is to be added the gain of $937,000 on sub-treasury operations. It is expected also that the early liquidation in the stock market may have contracted bank loans, although speculative borrowing has been renewed and large syndicate transactions may have been in progress.

The activity of the stock market diverted interest from the bond market, but prices there were firmly held. Total sales, par value, $5,305,000. United States bonds were all unchanged on the last call.

EFFECT OF ERRATIC WEATHER.

Season's Vagaries Reflected During Week In Stocks and Grain.

New York, April 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade today will say in part:

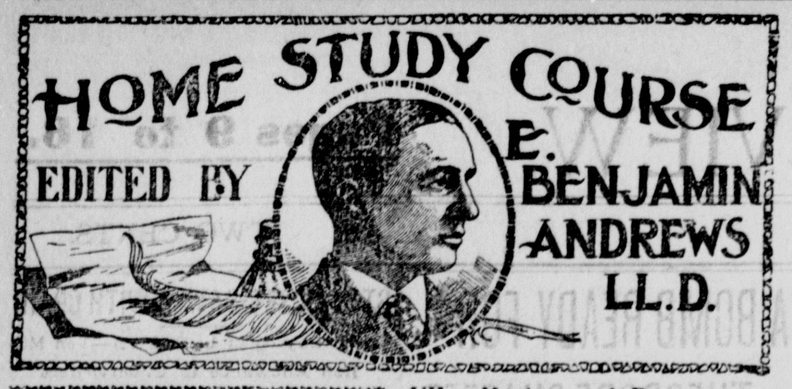

Versatile weather has produced erratic fluctuations in prices and affected business very differently, according to locality. The extremes were blizzards and oppressive heat, with every intermediate variety. As the future prosperity of the railways is more or less dependent upon the crops, the vagaries of the weather were quickly reflected in the markets for securities, as well as in option sales of grain and cotton. Retail distribution of merchandise has maintained a good average, losses at some points being offset by gains elsewhere. Manufacturing plants are well employed, except where wage disputes interrupt. Coffee and silver touched low record prices, but the average of commodities advanced. Transporting interests maintain their wonderful record, railway earnings thus far reported for April exceeding last year's by 5.2 per cent and those of 1900 by 15.3 per cent.

Most large consumers of pig iron have provided for their needs well up to the end of the year, and consequently there is little change to report in the situation except as to small orders that appear from time to time.

Quotations received by cable indicate that pressure in the United States has produced a decided advance abroad, and imports, after paying duty and freight, are extremely expensive. Movement of partly manufactured and finished steel products continue on a large scale. A severe setback in London tin speculation caused a decline here, but other minor metals are without special feature. Increased output and quicker deliveries of coke facilitate work at iron furnaces and reduce the price, while the lower list for anthracite coal has stimulated orders. Lumber and building materials are having the usual spring activity.

Failures for the week numbered 212 in the United States, against 215 last year, and 18 in Canada, against 26 a year ago.

Conscience in some people is that which tells them when their neighbors are doing wrong.

The National Period of American Literature

BY LORENZO SEARS, LIT. D.,
Professor of American Literature in Brown University.

VII.—Motley and Parkman.

JOHN LOTHROP MOTLEY, like Sparks and Bancroft and Prescott, was a New England boy, born in Dorchester, Mass., in 1814 and graduated from Harvard in 1831. After two years' study in Germany he read law, as several men of letters had before him, while making up his mind with regard to the branch of literature he would choose for a profession. A semibiographical novel entitled "Morton's Hope" did not encourage him or his friends to believe that fiction was his forte. Neither did the later "Merry Mount, a Romance of the Massachusetts Colony," reverse the first judgment, although the descriptive passages gave promise of something better in after years. Between the two stories he had published a fifty page article in The North American Review on Peter the Great, which was prophetic of his true vocation as a writer of history and biography, whereupon his friends, who had withheld their commendation of his romances, urged him to undertake something large in the historical line.

Meantime his choice of a great historical theme had fallen upon the "Rise of the Dutch Republic." It was an inspiring study, from the remote ages when the barbarian tribes inhabiting the low morasses sent the Batavian legion to be the bodyguard of Roman emperors down to the times of Charles Martel and Charlemagne and of the dukes of Burgundy, when the Netherlands became the richest and most populous part of Europe. And afterward, when the daughter of Charles the Bold took the title to the Austrian Maximilian, her husband, and when their grandson resigned it to Philip II. of Spain, in 1555, the same opulence and splendor went with the transmitted inheritance. So also did a growing Protestantism, an element not agreeable to the last inheritor, who straightway undertook to uproot the new reformation doctrines and to restore the Roman Catholic supremacy by the tyranny of Alva, which eventually united the provinces in a republic whose naval power became the foremost in the world, ultimately compelling Spain to acknowledge its independence and laying the foundation of a colonial system which is still a factor in European politics.

What a fabric he wove out of these musty leaves after ten years of delving was seen in 1856, when the three solid octavos of the "Dutch Republic" were issued simultaneously in London and New York. Readers were enthusiastic in their admiration, and great critics sent in their approval. Edward Everett, Irving, Bancroft, Hillard and Sumner joined in the general acclamation. Prescott's testimony was as valuable as it was graceful since the circle of Motley's investigations had cut into his own, as his previously had intersected the field which Irving had pre-empted.

Motley.

No brief extracts from Motley's voluminous writings can give an adequate idea of their fitness to the general subject or their adaptation to particular sections and episodes. Readers who cannot cover the length and breadth of his historical scheme, embracing as it did the "History of the United Netherlands" and the "Life and Death of John of Barneveld," besides the "Dutch Republic," will judge of the entire work by topics which have a romantic interest both in themselves and in the manner of their treatment by the historian. His portraiture of great personages and his description of stirring events are more faithful and vivid than any painting, because they reproduce changing records and continuous action as pictorial art cannot.

It was not permitted this historian to finish the story of the "Eighty Years' Tragedy" by writing the last act in the "Thirty Years' War." In "John of Barneveld" he had set forth what one of his literary predecessors might have called the "flounderings of a double Dutchman in a sea of theological mud" over the "five points of the Armenians and the seven points of the Gomarites"—foreknowledge, free will, election, irresistible grace, and so on. It was interesting to him as an antitype of a similar wrangle in New England over the same points after the pilgrims came out of Holland. But the brave little state itself found a historian worthy of the valiant people who first rescued its territory from the sea and defended it from the invasion of tyrants. Motley himself, ill treated by the diplomacy which he honored in Vienna and London, has met with a recognition higher than a chief magistrate could bestow or take away in his acknowledged position as all in all our greatest historian.

What Motley did for the discoveries and conquests of Spain in the south of America Parkman accomplished for the aggressions of France in the north. His theme was another instance of the felicity of genius shown in the choice of a subject as well as in its treatment. In his case the field was practically unoccupied when he entered it, and he so cultivated it that there was no need of a second hand. All who shall follow him for some time will find little which he did not mark or reject. They will have to content themselves with the superfluities which he cast away and with what was withheld from him.

Parkman followed the example of a majority of the writers in the New England renaissance in being the son of a minister in revolt against ecclesiastical traditions. Of course he would go to Harvard, where the atmosphere was no longer theologically too high and dry. Then, like his immediate predecessors, he had to try his hand at historical fiction in "Vassall Morton" before settling down to history writing. One other experiment he also made in going to live with the Sioux Indians in the Black Hills in order to study the Indian as he is, or rather was, before he donned an old silk hat for the principal part of his costume. In 1846 the genuine Dacotah was wrapped in a blanket, decorated with feathers and paint and armed with arrows and lance. He was like his forefathers, whose alliance with the French was to be a large feature of the struggle which Parkman was going to recount. Then there was the half breed trapper, another element in the story, combining the characteristics of both races. The Frenchman was an easier study from the present life and historical documents. Unfortunately Parkman came out of this instructive but unnatural episode of savage living with eyesight so impaired by glaring sunlight and wigwam smoke that his subsequent researches were to be attended with the same difficulties that beset Prescott. But the same courageous persistence was his, and also the same triumphant achievement.

Parkman.

It began with a series of magazine sketches, which were published in a volume in 1847, entitled "The Oregon Trail—Sketches of Prairie and Rocky Mountain Life," a transcript of the adventure above mentioned and a preliminary study to the series he was about to write, as "The Conspiracy of Pontiac," his next book, was a sequel to that series in describing a sort of final shot from a retreating foe after the battle was over. Then came the real opening of the dramatic story in "The Pioneers of France In the New World," 1865, followed at intervals of two or three years by "The Jesuits In North America In the Seventeenth Century," "La Salle; or The Discovery of the Great West," "The Old Regime In Canada," "Count Frontenac and New France Under Louis XIV." and "Montcalm and Wolfe." Together these books are chapters in the history of the contest between France and England for the possession of this continent, the attempt of the one to surround the other by a line of hostile forces along the great waterway of river and lake from the gulf of St. Lawrence to the gulf of Mexico and to crowd English colonists to the seashore and into the sea. The alternative was that the colonists of France might be overrun and dispersed with their savage allies by the encroaching English, who were fast becoming Americans and, it may be added, who were immensely helped in the process by the ensuing French and Indian war, which showed them their strength.

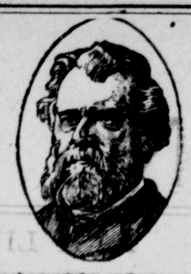

The history of the war had been written after a fashion for schoolboys and in a more elaborate way for adults in the larger histories. An exhaustive treatment of the subject, involving researches in the archives of Canada and France and personal inspection of places where events occurred, became the life work of Francis Parkman. For fifty years he labored with the assistance of readers and copyists, visiting the libraries of Europe seven times and accumulating 200 folio volumes of copied documents. The assimilation and condensation of these in his mind took final shape in sentences, paragraphs, chapters and books dictated to amanuenses. It is another instance of the triumph of the intellect over conventional methods of labor with the pen and by the sight of the eyes. Happily this man's fortune permitted him to employ others to do for him what his infirmities did not allow him to undertake.

Doubtless the result was not diminished in quantity or quality. As it stands the work is a monument to industry, perseverance and devotion to an early purpose in the face of hindrances full of annoyance and pain.

In fixing for posterity the fading image and likeness of a passing race of an almost prehistoric barbarism; in depicting the traits of a monarchy which was more absolute here than in its native France, but now is obsolete as the words it left in the wilds of Canada; in portraying the sturdy freedom of the British colonist at a convenient distance from a throne not too paternal, except in the matter of revenue; in the description of a wilderness glory untouched by man; in recounting the deeds of valor, devotion and sacrifice and in painting all the wild pageantry of border warfare, Parkman has made the strife of races for the possession of North America as picturesque as romance without surrendering the truth of history.

Why Man Flight Is So Difficult

By Professor SIMON NEWCOMB, Mathematician and Astronomer

ALTOGETHER, from an ideal viewpoint, the flying machine seems quite within our reach. But before we can reach out and grasp it we must go through a complicated course of calculation based upon the strength and weight of materials, power of engines, heat of combustion and laws of aerial resistance. Until we make this calculation we are like the child to whom the task of putting a ladder up to the moon seemed so simple that he cried to have it done.

BOTH THE LAWS AND THE FACTS GOVERNING THE CASE ARE COMPLETELY WORKED OUT BY EXPERIMENT AND WELL UNDERSTOOD. THE INVENTOR HAS ONLY TO BRING THESE LAWS AND FACTS TO HIS AID TO SAVE HIMSELF A GREAT DEAL OF TIME AND MONEY WHICH MIGHT OTHERWISE BE EXPENDED IN MAKING MACHINES THAT COULD NOT FLY.

Let him put his machine on paper, giving material and dimensions of every part, and then call in the aid of the expert physicist. The latter can determine in advance what lifting power the machine will have. If this prove equal to the weight of the machine plus that of the man who can guide it, the problem is solved. If this power is found to be only a little greater than the weight of the machine, we shall have something that will fly, but will not be of any use.

WHAT CAN WE SAY OF THE ULTIMATE OUTCOME? ON THE AFFIRMATIVE SIDE ONLY THIS: THAT NO ONE HAS YET DEMONSTRATED THE ABSOLUTE IMPOSSIBILITY OF ACCOMPLISHING THE DESIRED FEAT.

What is certain is that no one will ever fly to any great height or to any considerable distance until some metal or alloy is discovered which will combine strength with lightness in a far higher degree than any metal or alloy at present known to us. There are limitations, too, at every turn upon what a machine can do. The speed at which a rotating apparatus of any sort can turn has its limit. The larger its size the fewer turns it can make in a second. Let us consider the central axis as at rest. Then the extreme speed of the outer circumferences, as it turns, can never exceed a few hundred feet a second without the centrifugal force endangering the machine.

Just how many hundred feet will depend upon the skill of the inventor in combining his materials, but if he ever approaches a speed of a thousand feet a second his whirligig, whatever he makes it of, will fly to pieces by its own centrifugal force.

Two Great Painters.

When in Haarlem, Vandyke called upon Frank Hals and, without making himself known, said that he was anxious to have his portrait painted, but, as he was in a great hurry, he could spare but two hours, at the end of which the portrait must be done. Hals went to work and finished it, and Vandyke was much pleased. But portrait painting seemed a very little thing, said Vandyke, and he asked Hals to change places with him. Hals did so, and as Vandyke finished his work Hals hugged him enthusiastically, saying: "You are Vandyke. No one but he can do what you have done." And so the two great masters became acquainted.

Where English Clubs Differ.

A point which strikes American visitors to London about our English clubs is the social aspect of them and the almost complete absence of the business side. At the Manhattan or the Knickerbocker, on the other hand, the business side prevails. The majority of members do not drop in merely to read the papers, hear the latest story and play billiards, as over here. They go in most cases to meet a man about "a deal," to talk over the business of the day and discuss the business of the morrow or to read up the finance of the papers. The result is that when an American becomes a member of an English club he hardly ever uses it because its ways do not appeal to him. He would say that there was nothing going on.—London Tatler.

Cards in the Curriculum.

The custom of encouraging our children to perfect themselves in card games is by no means of modern growth. There must have been a substratum of truth in the following jesting paragraph, which is clipped from The Times of Nov. 2, 1797: "At some of our first boarding schools the fair pupils are now taught to play whist and cassino. Amongst their winning ways this may not be the least agreeable to papa and mamma. It is calculated that a clever child, by its cards and its novels, may pay for its own education."—London Chronicle.

FROM SOUTH AFRICA

New Way of Using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Mr. Arthur Chapman, writing from Durban, Natal, South Africa, says: "As a proof that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a cure suitable for old and young, I pen you the following: A neighbor of mine had a child just over two months old. It had a very bad cough and the parents did not know what to give it. I suggested that if they would get a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and put some upon the dummy teat the baby was sucking it would no doubt cure the child. This they did and brought about a quick relief and cured the baby." This remedy is for sale by Alvin H. Bulger.

BURIED BY BROWN

ECCENTRICITIES OF NEW YORK'S MOST NOTED SEXTON.

For Many Years He Ministered to the Aristocracy of the City at Grace Church, and His Name Adorns a Tablet on Its Walls.

It used to be said that a stranger who was visiting New York for the first time and asked his hotel clerk for advice as to what he should do on Sunday morning would find his doubts quickly reduced to the alternative, "Go over to Brooklyn and hear Beecher" or "Go to Grace church and see Brown." No prelate of the Episcopal church was so widely known either in or beyond his New York diocese as this valiant guardian of old Grace, whose income, it was estimated, was greater than that of any man in the cloth and whose power in society was even more feared than that of any bishop.

He received his appointment as sexton from the Rev. Dr. Thomas House Taylor, and, while Dr. Taylor has been long forgotten, Sexton Brown is still almost as much remembered in the great city as Jim Fisk, A. T. Stewart or Charles Delmonico.

Brown would cultivate the acquaintance of head waiters and cooks, securing the latest information as to the social plans of their masters and mistresses, and whenever he learned that a party or a ball was under consideration he would offer his services to deliver the invitations or look after the comfort of the guests or superintend their arrival and departure in their carriages. Beginning in this humble way, it was not long before he gained the good will of distinguished patrons.

His authoritative manner, too, was admirable for such occasions. Indeed the host himself could hardly issue a command to his menials with the suavely peremptory emphasis which Brown employed. Such was his deportment and such his trustworthy zeal that it was said that no one in Grace church could be properly feasted or buried or could even say his prayers without the assistance of Brown, and eventually it became something like a dictum in a large portion of society that nobody could be married in New York in truly first class style unless Brown's presence blessed the bridal party.

Nor did any detail that might be wanting for the personal comfort of the congregation escape his vigilant eye. It was a habit of old Peter Stuyvesant, for example, to keep in his pew a thermometer. As soon as he had taken his seat he would consult it. One winter morning when the temperature was extremely low the furnaces of the church got out of order, and Brown's assistants were able to force through them only enough heat to lessen the chill a little. It occurred to Brown that the condition of the atmosphere would not be conducive to either the piety or the comfort of the aged Stuyvesant. When the old gentleman arrived within the porch of the church, he was shivering with the cold, but without attracting his attention Brown, who knew that the first thing he would do would be to step into his pew and examine the thermometer, slipped in ahead, pressed one of his fat fingers to the little glass bulb and chuckled as he saw the mercury ascend to 72. When Stuyvesant reached the pew, he consulted the thermometer as usual, looked around wonderingly, but evidently concluded that the church must be warm enough and that therefore it must be himself who was cold.

Brown's funeral was marked by much of the pomp and circumstance which he himself had so often provided for the rich and the great. The wits said that it was the first in forty years that had been a perfectly correct performance without his individual guidance. He had died in the little town of Brandford one August night in 1880. There he had been in the habit of taking his summer rest. He had been overcome by the heat while attending a wedding at Brandford, and that summer he complained, probably for the first time in his life, of ill health. One of his orders was that his body should be placed in a casket of polished Spanish cedar.

A more ponderous casket had been carried up the aisle of Grace church. It was rich with silver and velvet. It was so heavy—its interior being large enough for two ordinary corpses—that the eight Knights Templars who bore it into the church almost staggered with their burden. Upon it lay their cocked hats with waving ostrich plumes. Within the chancel stood four of the clergy, in the pews were the representatives of some of the proudest families of the city, and a long line of men and women filed into the church showing all the signs of sorrow for an old friend and neighbor.

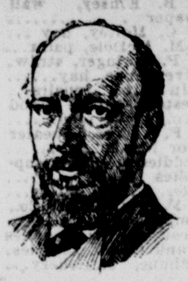

On the left hand side of Grace church as one turns after entering the porch under the bell tower and near where Brown was wont for more than a generation to take his station every Sunday is a shining brass tablet. It was there placed by members of the congregation in token of him who is described upon it as "The Faithful Sexton" and whom they "gladly recall for his fidelity, his generosity and his stainless integrity." It is next to the bas-relief which commemorates the virtues of the illustrious Cadwallader D. Colden, once mayor of New York—what greater posthumous glory would Brown have craved?—and is not less conspicuous than the old tablet on the opposite side which was erected to the memory of Henry Brevoort, whose family was derived in "unbroken descent from the colonists of New Netherlands."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Wanted— Simpler Living By the Rich

WHEN A CERTAIN MULTIMILLIONAIRE DECLARED THAT IT WAS A DISGRACE TO DIE RICH, HE EXPRESSED A SENTIMENT THAT MUST IN TIME OBTAIN. It is interesting to note that in ancient times the æsthetic Hindoo and the æsthetic Christian believed in escaping from any complicity in the wrongs done to the poor by the rich and removed himself entirely from all temptations to enter into the pursuit of wealth. St. Francis tells us that the food that rich men eat is seasoned by the tears of the poor from whom it was wrung; that it is tainted with injustice, wrong and suffering, and that a just man should embrace poverty as his bride.

Our modern attitude seems to have gone so far as to induce people to voluntarily take up their abiding place with the poor, to associate with them and to bear their hardships. The appeal of the tenement settlement is very strong.

There was a time when I thought seriously of going into the tenement district of New York city to live, but when my first child was born I thought it would be monstrous in me to subject it to the degrading influences that abound in a poverty stricken district. THE SOCIAL SETTLEMENT IDEA IS PICTURESQUE, BUT IS HARDLY PRACTICAL.

I SHOULD SAY THAT OUR ATTITUDE TOWARD WEALTH SHOULD BE THE SAME AS IT IS TOWARD FOOD. WE SHOULD CONFORM TO THE LAWS OF SIMPLICITY.

In his last book Booker T. Washington, whom I believe to be, without a single reservation, one of the greatest men our country has produced, tells us that the senseless waste at our sixteen course public dinners always saddens him.

Let us in dispensing wealth act on the same principle as that which governs a sane, well balanced man in taking food—consume just as much as is wholesome and necessary for our needs and avoid luxury of every kind not only because the sight of luxury excites envy, but because it produces such preposterous results.

A wealthy man has his valet, as if he were too feeble to put on his clothes. He cannot be seen opening a door, but must have an obsequious footman to turn the knob.

AFTER AWHILE WE SHALL HAVE STOUT PORTERS TO CARRY THESE RICH PERSONS OUT OF THEIR CARRIAGES INTO THEIR HOUSES.

Luxury is enervating because it creates the false idea that the glory of life consists in having people to do things for you.

To the Point.

An incident which occurred Admiral Dewey was commanding the Asiatic squadron and one which illustrates his independence is one known as "the coal incident."

It seems that his squadron was in need of coal, but instead of writing to the chief of the bureau of equipment at the navy department he purchased a large amount of coal without consulting the department.

The following is the correspondence between the admiral and Captain Bradford, the chief of the bureau of equipment, and is self explanatory:

Navy Department, Washington.
To Dewey, Manila:
Why did you buy so much coal?
BRADFORD.
Flagship Olympia, Manila.
To Bradford, Chief Bureau Equipment, Washington:
To burn.

The Wrong of Intolerance.

The intolerant state of mind is injurious both to the state and to the individual. It goes with conceit and deadly pride. The strange thing is that men are apt to plume themselves upon their intolerance. It is evident that a man's conduct and a nation's conduct should be the result of thought and judgment, but intolerance stops thought and destroys judgment.—Century.

The most flagrant bit of diplomatic jobbery in the history of the United States was perpetrated by that Virginia scapegrace, John Randolph of Roanoke. Randolph was appointed minister to Russia in 1830. He sailed for his post in June of that year, but remained there only ten days, and then departed suddenly for England, where he raised high jinks for nearly a year, after which, returning home in October, 1831, he drew $21,407 from the treasury, with which he paid off some of his old private debts.—New York Press.

HEART STIMULANT.

Cold Applications Superior to Drafts of Alcohol.

There is a deep seated belief amounting almost to a superstition that alcohol is a very important heart stimulant, especially when this organ is weak. Winternitz, the great authority on hydrotherapy in Germany, has often told us of the very great value of cold as a heart stimulant or tonic and that it is far superior to alcohol in this respect. Dr. Kellogg gives the method of application as follows:

"The application consists of a compress applied to the portion of the chest wall over the heart. This comprises the space bounded by the second rib above, the right border of the sternum, a line falling a half inch to the right of the nipple and the sixth rib below. The compress should be large enough to cover this space and to extend at least two inches outside of it. Ordinarily the best effects are produced by employing water at a temperature of about 60 degrees. The compress should be wrung moderately dry and should be very lightly covered. It is desirable that cooling by slow evaporation should be encouraged and be continued for some time."

Dr. Kellogg continues: "In Germany and France it is the custom to administer alcohol to the patient just before putting him in a cold bath. Some practitioners, as Winternitz, administer but a very small amount, a single mouthful of wine, for instance, while others give brandy in considerable quantities. A few American practitioners employ brandy freely with the cold bath. The unwisdom of this practice will be apparent on due consideration of the following facts:

"One purpose in administering the cold bath is to secure a true stimulant or tonic effect by arousing the vital energies through excitation of the nerve centers. Alcohol was once supposed to be capable of effecting this and was used for this purpose in typhoid fever and various other morbid conditions accompanied by depression of the vital forces. At the present time, however, it is well known, and with practical unanimity admitted, that alcohol is neither a tonic nor a stimulant, but a narcotic; that it depresses and does not excite; that it lessens and does not increase the activity of the nerve centers, and that this is true of small as well as large doses, as has been shown by the researches of careful investigators."—Health.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Give the roots of trees a deep and broad bed of soil to start and grow in.

In pruning the grape cut back to the third bud, as it is usually the first entirely perfect bud produced.

When winds prevail from any direction, as they usually do, lean the tree a little in that direction when setting out.

The essentials in making a good garden are rich soil, plenty of manure, good seeds, timely labor and a fair season.

Having the soil in a good tilth and planting in straight rows will save much labor in cultivating in the garden.

One of the best ways of getting rid of moss and lichens adhering to the bark of trees is an application of lime whitewash.

In taking trees from a nursery or forest, preserve all of the roots and fine rootlets possible. Dig out instead of pulling up the tree.

When the fruit or leaves of any plant or tree are eaten by insects of any kind, spraying in good season and sufficiently often is the safest and best remedy.

Gladiolus bulbs should be planted in full sunshine, four or five inches deep and about one foot apart. Good soil, rather sandy, is best, avoiding manure, especially if fresh.

PROLONGED BY YEARS.

Short Lives Lengthened By Removing Cause of Disease.

Many Glowing Tributes Paid to Blood Wine, The Great French Discovery, Which Cures Colds, Consumption, Catarrh, Rheumatism, Kidney Disease, etc.

That "Blood Wine" fully comes up to the expectations of our people is evidenced by the expression of satisfaction from the many who have already given it a test. "If I had to go without some of the necessities of life, I would have 'Blood Wine' in the house," said a certain gentleman living in the northern part of the city. It wards off coughs, colds, indigestion, bowel troubles and a dozen and one other diseases that are apt to attack any one. "A bottle of good medicine always handy is the 'stitch in time' that saves suffering and misery; and this is just the kind of medicine that will do it." To begin away down at the roots of any sickness, what is the first step to be taken? "Purify the blood," is the answer from every physician. Regulate the bowels and purify the blood. Microbes, Bacteria, Bacilli and all kinds of germs float through the system in the blood.

Just stop and reason it out; think of your blood teeming with these myriads of little demons, floating hither and thither like wreckage on a great ocean, to be cast up against the delicate organs of the system where they find lodging places, stay, thrive and breed, perhaps in the lungs, perhaps in the throat, kidneys, heart or tender tissues of the body anywhere. This is the beginning of trouble. Cleanse your blood and you purify the whole system.

With pure blood and a good circulation no one ever contracted consumption or other fatal disease. "Blood Wine" gives new life because it makes new blood. It brings rest and quiet because it soothes the nerves; it creates a good appetite by toning up the digestive organs; it regulates the system by producing healthy, regular operations of the bowels. It kills that tired feeling and makes one feel like running, jumping and exercising; it gives elasticity to the body by acting directly on the muscles and causing them to respond to the mind's dictates. One teaspoonful of "Blood Wine" makes the blood tingle; it is instantaneous in its action and leaves no room for doubt. It contains no wine or opiates.

"Blood Wine" costs fifty cents a bottle but you can sample it at Will Reed and Hodson's drug stores, free of charge. It stands on its own merits; it is the only medicine that has ever been placed on sale with the local dealer authorized to keep a bottle of it always open to be administered to anyone free of cost.

BEST FOR THE BOWELS

If you haven't a regular, healthy movement of the bowels every day, you're ill or will be. Keep your bowels open, and be well. Force, in the shape of violent physic or pill poison, is dangerous. The smoothest, easiest, most perfect way of keeping the bowels clear and clean is to take

CALIFORNIA ROSES

NOWHERE ELSE DO THEY REACH SUCH PERFECTION OF BEAUTY.

The Bush of Other Climes Here Becomes a Tree—Thousands of Blossoms on a Single Plant—The Wonderful Climbing Rose.

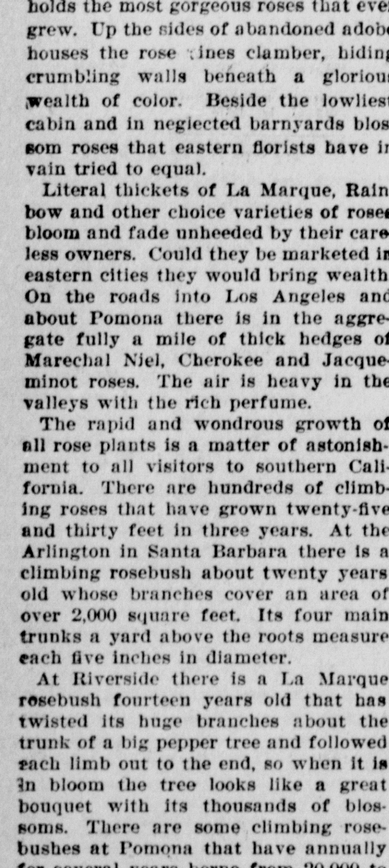

Wonderful are the rose gardens of southern California. But why particularize gardens when every hedgerow is a mass of bewildering bloom? Their profusion is as the weed by the roadside in less favored climes. Wherever one turns in the flower season he beholds the most gorgeous roses that ever grew. Up the sides of abandoned adobe houses the rose vines clamber, hiding crumbling walls beneath a glorious wealth of color. Beside the lowliest cabin and in neglected barnyards blossom roses that eastern florists have in vain tried to equal.

Literal thickets of La Marque, Rainbow and other choice varieties of roses bloom and fade unheeded by their careless owners. Could they be marketed in eastern cities they would bring wealth. On the roads into Los Angeles and about Pomona there is in the aggregate fully a mile of thick hedges of Marechal Niel, Cherokee and Jacqueminot roses. The air is heavy in the valleys with the rich perfume.

The rapid and wondrous growth of all rose plants is a matter of astonishment to all visitors to southern California. There are hundreds of climbing roses that have grown twenty-five and thirty feet in three years. At the Arlington in Santa Barbara there is a climbing rosebush about twenty years old whose branches cover an area of over 2,000 square feet. Its four main trunks a yard above the roots measure each five inches in diameter.

At Riverside there is a La Marque rosebush fourteen years old that has twisted its huge branches about the trunk of a big pepper tree and followed each limb out to the end, so when it is in bloom the tree looks like a great bouquet with its thousands of blossoms. There are some climbing rosebushes at Pomona that have annually for several years borne from 20,000 to 30,000 blossoms.

In some of the rose gardens—particularly in the San Gabriel and Pomona valleys—over 150 separate and distinct varieties of roses are grown. In the Skinner garden in Pomona 178 varieties blossom for a month or two each year, while twenty-two varieties imported from Japan and the Mediterranean are in bloom ten months out of twelve. The wealth of color and the sense of boundless profusion that a visit to southern California rose gardens begets are inexpressible.

When an arbor has been built to support the climbing roses planted by its side, the structure in a year or two is completely covered by a network of branches and blossoms, while long, graceful tendrils droop to the ground. In the season of flowers these rose arbors present a picture of flowering cataracts of brilliant bloom, and the whole air is redolent of sweet odors such as no perfumer has been able to distill.

Along the streets of the older settled towns large branches heavily laden with the most beautiful roses thrust themselves over fences and hedges. On many streets there are rows of pepper trees up whose shaggy bark Cloth of Gold, Beauty of Glazenwood and Devoniensis roses are trained to climb so closely as to conceal the trunk. When in bloom, there can hardly be a more charming sight than a row of these trees enveloped from earth to the topmost branches in mantles of roses of every hue.

There is in Ventura a magnificent specimen of the white La Marque rose. It was planted from a cutting in November, 1876, and has been trained over a large arbor. Its main stem immediately above the ground measures 2 feet 9 inches in circumference. Two branches start from it, and each is 2 feet 1 inch in circumference. It has been cut back and pruned heavily each year, and last year over a wagon load of prunings was taken from it.

Every winter the visitors to southern California are surprised to find that the rose tree, of which they have read so much in Tennyson, is not a fancy of the poet.

Our Varied Seasons.

The longest cold season in the United States is found in the Rocky mountain region, where it exceeds the warm by about ten days. The warm season in Texas and the lower Missouri valley opens about ten days earlier than in the region near the middle Atlantic coast and from twenty to twenty-five days earlier than on the southern coast of California. In the northwest the warm season opens from twenty to twenty-five days earlier than in the lake region and from fifteen to twenty days earlier than in the north Pacific coast region.

Regard For Sacred Trees.

Throughout the length and breadth of India the Ficus religiosa, under which Buddha rested for seven years plunged in divine thought, is dedicated to religious worship and may on no account be felled or destroyed. With more universal but not less sincere reverence do the peasants of Russia prostrate themselves before the trees which they are about to cut and deprecate the vengeance of the deities whose resting places they then proceed to destroy.—Gentleman's Magazine.

Aiding the Heathen.

"Brother Highmore, are you contributing anything for the benefit of the heathen this year?"

"Yes, sir. I am having my washing done at a Chinese laundry."—Chicago Tribune.

MORE EVIDENCE

It Is Coming in Rapidly in East Liverpool.

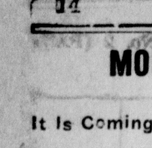

Evidence on the following subject will prove of interest to every East Liverpool reader. So many people go through the same experience daily. This public statement should be proof positive to every wavering doubter. Read it carefully:

Mr. George Mount, of 165 Fourth street, teamster and dealer in coal, says: "For three years I had attacks of kidney complaint, some of them laying me up for two or three weeks at a time. The symptoms were pain in the back, particularly severe when stooping or moving around. Physicians called it lumbago and advised by friends to use Doan's Kidney Pills I procured two boxes at the W. & W. pharmacy. They cured me."

A Chicago Teaser.

A Chicago man who lives in Goethe street gets off the car at Schiller street, two blocks away, because no conductor can understand his pronunciation of Goethe. "I had practiced on the pronunciation for a week," he says, "and I had the sound of the 'umlaut' down fine. I sprung it on the conductor the first evening. He looked at me blankly and replied, 'Huh?' I repeated it once or twice, and finally a great light broke over him. 'Oh, yes; you mean Go-the. Why didn't you say so?'

"The next evening the conductor called it Go-eeth. The third time up it was Go-e-the. Then there was a raw Irishman in charge of one of the trains who spoke of it as Go-tay, with the accent on the last syllable. One morning I left an order for my wife at the grocer's. He looked at me in silence for a minute after I had given our address. 'Oh, yes,' he said; 'you mean Gertie street.' The butcher calls it Gaytie, the laundryman pronounces it Gay-tuh, and the man who delivers coal alludes to it as Goth street.

"I have a woman friend who prides herself on her culture who speaks feelingly of Gutter street. But the devoted thoroughfare doesn't really 'get it in the neck' until you hear the janitor talk. He calls it Goitre."

Eating Seals In England.

The water baily of London brought a "quick" seal to court, receiving 26 shillings 8 pence (1530), and in the same year the item "for bringing a cele" 15 shillings occurs. Seals were eaten, though they may have been kept as a curiosity. One was presented to Cromwell, Wolsey's successor in Henry's favor, though it died before he could have derived much pleasure from it. Perhaps he ate it. At Henry VII.'s wedding feast in 1487 one of the dishes was "seyle in fenyn, entirely served richly," and very rich it must have been. In Cromwell's accounts for 1537 William Wodehouse's servant brings a porpoise, and porpoises we know are eaten.—Good Words.

IN THE CYCLING WORLD

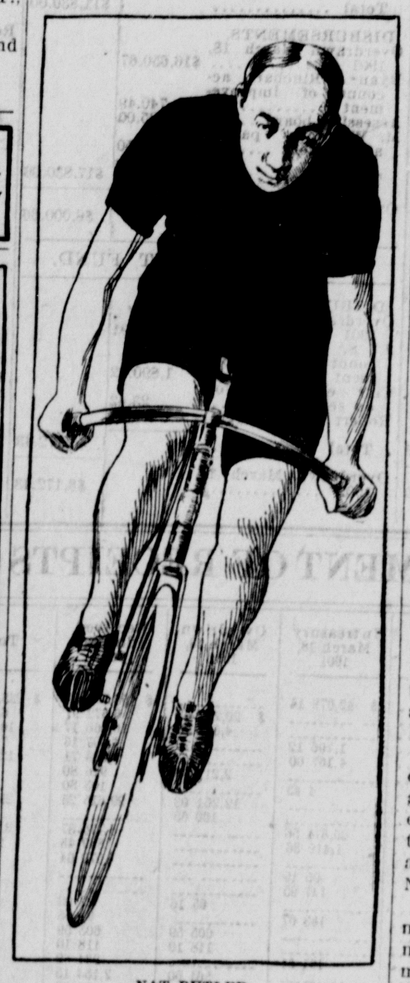

The New Motor Equipment

How It Works

Nat Butler as a Follower of Pace

DURING the last two years inventive genius has directed a great deal of effort to the application of motive power to the bicycle. Results hitherto obtained, while crude and far from satisfactory, have nevertheless served to point out great possibilities for the future of self propelled bicycles.

Instant popularity and success have been widely predicted for the first machine of the kind so constructed as to overcome the leading faults of previously existing models. For many months a prominent American cycle manufacturing company has devoted constant investigation and labor to the end of successfully meeting the popular demand for such a machine and has finally produced a model which appears to meet every indicated requirement and to be practical and perfectly adapted to the use of any bicyclist of ordinary intelligence.

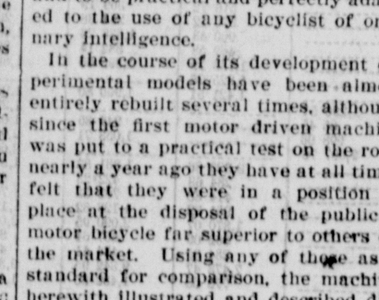

NAT BUTLER.

In the course of its development experimental models have been almost entirely rebuilt several times, although since the first motor driven machine was put to a practical test on the road nearly a year ago they have at all times felt that they were in a position to place at the disposal of the public a motor bicycle far superior to others on the market. Using any of those as a standard for comparison, the machine herewith illustrated and described dispenses with much complicated construction, develops far greater power in proportion to weight, secures ease of control and manipulation and does away with all unsightliness and uncleanliness.

The new motor bicycle's lines are harmonious and pleasing, strictly following the lines of the main frame tubes. Systematic and orderly arrangement characterizes the construction throughout. There are no unsightly clusters of bent pipes, levers and wires, no suggestion of overloading or top heaviness. Each part is so placed as to sustain its proper mechanical relation to every other part, while the weight of the whole is so distributed as to contribute advantageously to steadiness of running and ease of steering.

The motive power is derived from a four cycle two and one-quarter horsepower gasoline engine, which, with its special and distinctive features and connections, presents an improvement over many others that have been used for a similar purpose. It operates as follows: From a reservoir containing a supply of gasoline a certain measured charge is drawn aporized, the vapor mixed with air and the mixture admitted to the cylinder, where it is compressed and exploded by an electric spark behind the driven piston and the products of combustion discharged through the exhaust valve. The explosive energy driving the piston downward imparts a rotary movement to the crank, whence the power is transmitted to the rear wheel by a double chain eight to one gearing.

THE NEW MOTOR MACHINE.

This type of motor is universally recognized as the best ever devised for a wide variety of purposes, and mechanical experts have proved themselves equal to the task of making it completely available for the bicycle.

The majority of the prominent pace followers have already signed for the coming season. The last one to put his name to a contract was Nat Butler of Cambridge, Mass., who will be managed by Dan Burrows, the well known motorist.

Burrows is well equipped, having two tandems and a single pacing machine, each fitted with a five horsepower motor and capable of all the speed necessary for middle distance work. He also has ability as a manager, since he has been in the game for a long time and is thoroughly conversant with the fine points necessary for success.

He is confident that Butler will prove to be a winner, and at the same time he knows that he will not be a top-notcher. The big money will go to Walthour, Elkes, Stinson and Michael, but there will be plenty of other good cash lying around, and he is satisfied that the old handicap rider will get a good slice of it.

GEORGE BOTHNER'S ADVICE

Famous Wrestling Champion Tells Beginners to Work Hard.

George Bothner, the champion lightweight wrestler of America, has had a very successful winter. He has appeared in numerous matches throughout the country and thus far has not been defeated. In fact, Bothner so far outclasses all other lightweights that they are inclined to avoid meeting him, and he has been forced to take on men much heavier than himself.

Bothner instructs at the Knickerbocker Athletic club, New York. He is a gentlemanly young man and is deservedly popular with his pupils. During the summer he directs the wrestling affairs of the Pastime Athletic club of New York.

Probably the hardest matches Bothner has figured in during the last few months have been those in which he met Harvey Parker of Brockton, Mass. Parker is really a middleweight, tipping the beam at 160 pounds, and he is stronger than Bothner, but notwithstanding these advantages the New Englander was unable on several occasions to force the champion's shoulders to the mat. Bothner's wrestling weight is 142 pounds.

GEORGE BOTHNER, LIGHTWEIGHT CHAMPION.

Bothner is a marvelously fast man on the defensive. He is more slippery than the slipperiest eel that ever slipped, it being at times almost impossible to follow his movements. He is splendidly developed, his muscles being large and powerful, but not too hard. It is the elasticity of Bothner's muscular tissue that enables him to undergo continued exertion without tiring.

In speaking about the wrestler's art a few days ago Bothner said:

"The man that wants to become a good mat artist must do a great deal of hard work. He must develop every muscle in his body, for he will use them all in competition. The beginner should place himself under the care of some experienced wrestler in order to get the right idea of the requirements of the game and to learn the correct mode of executing holds and breaks. After a few lessons a man will develop very rapidly and especially if he likes the work. There's a great deal in being anxious to succeed."

The American's Conflict Between Business and Love

By HUGUES LE ROUX, French Author and Lecturer

I THINK I have found your greatest social problem. Be careful how you solve it, for in my opinion the future of the republic depends upon it. IT IS THE CONFLICT BETWEEN BUSINESS AND LOVE.

IN THE BEGINNING THE WOMAN HAS BEEN YOUR INCENTIVE FOR WORK; NOW THERE SEEMS TO BE A TENDENCY TO LOVE WORK FOR WORK'S SAKE.

The women are all on one side of the road, the men on the other. They are strangers to each other during twelve of the twenty-four hours. The time may come when they will be strangers through the whole day long. Stop raising this barrier of business between yourselves and your women. When you reach home, weary and sullen, but gold laden, do not believe that by laying this wealth at the feet of the goddess of your household you are giving her that for which she yearns most. GIVE HER LESS GOLD AND MORE OF YOURSELF.

I spoke on this subject before a number of your admirable colleges for women. I asked the young women which they would value most, and, as they are women and human, they all chose dearth of gold and abundance of kind words, personal attention, confidence and love.

How can you fight and hope to win with your women absent from the scene of the conflict? Give them a share in your affairs, in your troubles.

In the Sahara when the men fight the women look on from behind, perchance on camels, helping their husbands with their cries. If in the battle the warrior turns to run, his wife will bar the way, her hands dipped in henna, and if he returns not to the fray she will brand him with her open hand, and his white burnoose with the red imprint upon it will attest his cowardice.

Take my word for it, a woman prefers to be loved. You may deck her with jewels and clothe her in silks, but all this is not food for the heart. Give her your hand and speak gently to her. Do not insult her by thinking that your troubles would only darken her days. There is joy in suffering for others. Do not keep that joy for yourselves alone.

And, then, is this drudgery sincerely for the sake of enthroning your queen? Soon the fever of work sets in, and the original incentive becomes merely an accessory. Business today is already the chief cult with many.

THE WOMEN WHOM YOU ARE DAILY NEGLECTING MORE AND MORE FOR BUSINESS HAVE ALREADY BEGUN TO TURN TO PURSUITS USUALLY CONSIDERED OUT OF THEIR FIELD AS A COMPENSATION FOR THE LOSS OF YOUR COMPANY.

The spectacled young women in your female colleges who devote their time to Euclid, astronomy, physics and chemistry are a reflection of your desertion of them.

A Summer Without Nights.

To the summer visitor in Sweden there is nothing more striking than the almost total absence of night. At Stockholm, the Swedish capital, the sun goes down a few minutes before 10 o'clock and rises again four hours later during a greater part of the month of June. But the four hours the sun lies hidden in the frozen north are not hours of darkness. The refraction of his rays as he passes around the north pole makes midnight as light as a cloudy midday and enables one to read the finest print without artificial light at any time during the "night."

Very Legal.

"We claim that my client did not run away with the horse, as alleged. The horse was ahead of him all the time, and he simply followed the horse.

The Prosecuting Attorney—It amounts to the same thing. He was the accessory after the fact. He is old enough to know better than to follow a bad example.—Boston Transcript.

Travelers to California

Naturally desire to see the grandest and most impressive scenery en route. This you will do by selecting the Denver & Rio Grande and Rio Grande Western, "The Scenic Line of the World," and "The Great Salt Lake Route," in one or both directions, as this line has two separate routes across the Rocky mountains between Denver and Ogden. Tickets reading via this route are available either via its main line through the Royal George, Leadville, over Tennessee Pass, through the Canon of the Grand river and Glenwood Springs, or via the line over Marshall Pass and through the Black Canon of the Gunnison, thus enabling the traveler to use one of the above routes going and the other returning. Three splendidly equipped fast trains are operated to and from the Pacific coast, which carry through standard sleepers daily between Chicago, St. Louis, Denver and San Francisco. Dining cars (service a la carte) on all through trains. If you contemplate such a trip, let us send you beautifully illustrated pamphlets, free. S. K. Hooper, G. P. & T. A., Denver, Col. 7-tf-3-tf

Too Much For the Sheriff.

An Irish widow with a quick wit one day received a call from a sheriff who had a writ to serve on her. According to the story, the widow saved the day by some rapid fire courting which took the sheriff by surprise when he called at her house and began in formal fashion:

"Madam, I have an attachment for you."

"My dear sir," she said, blushing, "your attachment is reciprocated."

"You don't understand me. You must proceed to court," said the sheriff.

"Well, I know 'tis leap year, but I prefer to let you do the courting yourself. Men are much better at that than women."

"Mrs. Phelan, this is no time for fooling. The justice is waiting."

"The justice waiting! Well, then, I suppose I must go, but the thing is so sudden, and besides I'd prefer a priest to do it."

A Useful Woman.

"Blennerhasset," said Mrs. Bliggins as he was about to start down town, "can you let me have a little money to run the house with today?"

"You can have just 50 cents," he growled, flinging the coin at her and slamming the door behind him as he went out.

"By the way, Bliggins," said a friend who dropped into his place of business an hour or two later, "will you go my security on a note for $500?"

"Shortleigh," replied Bliggins, "it is an inflexible rule in my family that I must never do anything of that kind without consulting my wife."—Chicago Tribune.

Fresh Paint Stains.

A fresh paint stain on woolen goods will disappear if rubbed against other woolen goods. For instance, if the stain is on the sleeve of a coat take that garment off and rub the paint against the other sleeve. It will disappear and leave no sign. This is easier than applying turpentine and exactly as efficacious, but it must be done while the paint is still wet.

AMERICAN WOMEN AT THE CORONATION

They Will Shine Conspicuously Both In the Official and Social Functions

WHEN King Edward VII. of England is crowned at Westminster abbey next June, American women will shine conspicuously in the gorgeous pageant. No less than thirteen of Uncle Sam's fair daughters will by right of royal title appear in the kingly train. Eleven of these are peeresses of the realm, and two gain the honor by virtue of being wives of the eldest sons of peers. Three of the ladies will wear the coronet of duchesses, one is a marchioness, four are countesses, and three bear the title of baroness.

Besides these will be the ladies connected with the diplomatic corps and the special embassy which will represent this country at the coronation

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH.

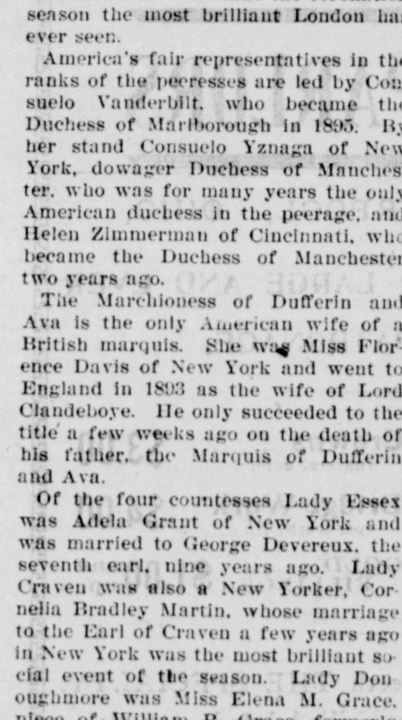

Many more, titled and otherwise, will be prominent figures at the social festivities which will make the coronation season the most brilliant London has ever seen.

America's fair representatives in the ranks of the peeresses are led by Consuelo Vanderbilt, who became the Duchess of Marlborough in 1895. By her stand Consuelo Yznaga of New York, dowager Duchess of Manchester, who was for many years the only American duchess in the peerage, and Helen Zimmerman of Cincinnati, who became the Duchess of Manchester two years ago.

The Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava is the only American wife of a British marquis. She was Miss Florence Davis of New York and went to England in 1893 as the wife of Lord Clandeboye. He only succeeded to the title a few weeks ago on the death of his father, the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava.

Of the four countesses Lady Essex was Adela Grant of New York and was married to George Devereux, the seventh earl, nine years ago. Lady Craven was also a New Yorker, Cornelia Bradley Martin, whose marriage to the Earl of Craven a few years ago in New York was the most brilliant social event of the season. Lady Donoughmore was Miss Elena M. Grace, niece of William R. Grace, formerly mayor of New York. Lady Donoughmore has lived in London twelve years, but it was only a few months ago that she became the bride of the Earl of Donoughmore.

The fourth countess on the list is Lady Strafford. She was Miss Cora

COUNTESS OF ESSEX

Smith, daughter of Judge Smith of New Orleans. She married Samuel J. Colgate, the wealthy soap manufacturer and banker of New York, who left her a widow in 1893 with a fortune estimated to be $10,000,000. In 1898 she became the wife of the Earl of Strafford, who is also wealthy.

Lady Abinger, the first in the list of baronesses, may not take advantage of her right to be present at the gorgeous ceremony, as she may sail soon for South Africa to join her husband, the fourth baron of the name. Lady Curzon of Kedleston, too, who was Mary Victoria Leiter of Chicago, will probably not be present at the coronation, as it is said she hesitates to take the long trip from India, where her husband, Lord Curzon, is now viceroy.

Lady Newborough, who was Grace Carr of Kentucky until two years ago, will, however, represent her American sisters of this rank when the last and most dramatic step is taken in the official acts which make Edward a king.

Lady Deerhurst and the Hon. Mrs. Francis Dudley-Leigh are the two ladies who will be present as wives of the eldest sons of peers. The last named was Miss Helen Forbes Beckwith of New York, who was married twelve years ago to Francis, the eldest son of the second Baron Leigh. Lady Deerhurst's claim is based on the fact that she left Boston in 1888 to become the daughter-in-law of the ninth Earl of Coventry.

This list of thirteen does not, of course, include all the American women who will be present in the abbey. The wives of special envoys and representatives will be admitted, as will also those of embassadors and ministers. In addition to these some Americans will undoubtedly be included in the special invitations which may be expected to come from the king or queen or from certain officials of their court. The lord great chamberlain, for instance, enjoys the privilege of asking sixty guests to his private box, and, theoretically at least, the number who may be bidden by the monarch himself is unlimited.

A mark of special royal favor has been conferred on the Duchess of Marlborough. At the coronation Queen Alexandra will be attended by four fair duchesses, who will be attired in cloth of gold and bedecked in their robes and coronets. Not only must these favored four be duchesses, but they must be among the most beautiful of the duchesses. As filling these requirements the four duchesses selected are those of Montrose, Sutherland, Portland and Marlborough, all numbered among the loveliest women in England.

Among the American women who are members of the British nobility, but who are not included in the official list promulgated by the authorities having the matter in charge, is the dowager Duchess of Marlborough, now Lady William Beresford. She was a daughter of Commodore Price of the United States navy. She forfeited her prerogative as a peeress of the realm by marrying after the death of the eighth Duke of Marlborough the late Lord William Beresford, who in the eyes of the law is a commoner. No English woman of noble birth holds a securer position in London society than Mrs. George Cornwallis West, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill and originally Miss Jennie Jerome of New York. Lady Naylor-Leland, who was Miss Jennie Chamberlain of Cleveland, is also a social favorite. Perhaps none is more popular nor more gladly welcomed in the best English houses than Lady Bache Cunard, who was Miss Maud Burke of San Francisco. Other titled American women are Lady Gray-Egerton, formerly Miss May Cuyler; Lady Frances Margaret Vernon, widow of Baron Vernon, daughter of Mr. Francis C. Lawrence of New York; Louise Melissa, countess of Oxford, daughter of Mr. D. C. Corbin of New York; Mary, viscountess of Falkland, daughter of Mr. Robert Reade.

A great bazaar, which is being organized to take place in London in the first week in July in aid of a hospital for sick children, is to be called the Coronation bazaar, but it will be more fitting to call it the Anglo-American bazaar, since most of the well known American women in London are taking a very active and prominent part in the arrangements.

The Eyes of a Bee.

Every bee has two kinds of eyes—the two large compound ones, looking like hemispheres on either side, and the three simple ones which crown the top of his head. Each compound eye is composed of 3,500 facets—that is to say, an object is reflected 3,500 times on its surface. Every one of these facets is the base of an inverted hexagonal pyramid, whose apex is fitted to the head. Each pyramid may be termed an eye, for each has its own iris and optic nerve.

How these insects manage this marvelous number of eyes is not yet known. They are immovable, but mobility is unnecessary because of the range of vision afforded by the position and the number of facets. They have no lids, but are protected from dust and injury by rows of hairs growing along the lines at the junctions of the facets. The simple eyes are supposed to have been given the bee to enable it to see above its head when intent upon gathering honey from the cups of flowers. Probably this may be one reason, but it is likely there are other uses for them not yet ascertained.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Wearing of Amulets.

Who wore the first amulet it would be impossible to say, but the adoption of a talisman to ward off evil is of very ancient origin.

Phylacteries, the Greek word for amulets, were worn by the Israelites, to which allusion is made in the Scriptures. These phylacteries were narrow strips of parchment on which were written passages from the Old Testament. A strip was placed in a small leather box and bound to the left elbow by a narrow strap. There was a smaller phylactery for the forehead, the box for which was about an inch square.

The word amulet is of Arabic origin and implies a thing suspended. Amulets were of various kinds. The moonstone, found in the desert of Arabia, was worn as a talisman against enchantment by the women, who suspended it around the neck. It was a white, transparent stone, the time for searching for it being midnight.

Various Styles of Hairdressing.

The various styles of hairdressing under Louis XVI. were known as the cascade of St. Cloud, the windmill, the sheep and lambs, the hen and chickens, the dog and hare, the peal of bells, the milkmaid, the bob wig, the bother, the kerchief, the oriental, the Circassian, Minerva's helmet, the crescent, the enigma, the desire to please, the turned up calash, the treasurer of the age, the frivolous bather, the rat, the drunken monkey and the lover's snare, the last named consisting of a mass of curls covered with powder, particles of which, deposited on the coat or shoulders of a gentleman, indicated the previous whereabouts of the lady's head.

A Pleasant Prospect.

A young man named Mooney enlisted in the army. After he had been in India for about five months he received a pathetic letter from his parents which said that if he did not send them some money they would be forced to go to the workhouse.

The young man sat down and answered the letter as follows:

"Dear Father and Mother—Try to keep out of the workhouse for six years and seven months until I come home, and then the three of us will go in together."—London Tit-Bits.

HEAT AND DISEASE.

THE SUN'S RAYS ARE FATAL TO MANY SPECIES OF GERMS.

As a Disinfectant Sunlight Is the Greatest Agent In Nature—Temperatures at Which Disease Germs Are Destroyed.

Sunlight is fatal to some of the lower forms of living things, including certain disease germs which are the cause of some of the most fatal infectious diseases that afflict the human race. In fact, the greatest disinfectant in nature is light, or, to be more exact, the radiations of the sun, including heat rays, light rays and the invisible rays at the violet end of the solar spectrum.

An infectious disease is one which may be contracted by the introduction into the living body of living disease germs, which may be contained in different kinds of infectious material. Thus the disease germ (bacillus) which produces diphtheria is contained in the "exudate" or "false membrane" deposited in the throat or nasal passages of those suffering from this disease, and the material coughed up by a patient with diphtheria is infectious material. In cholera and in typhoid fever the discharges from the bowels contain the germ and are consequently infectious material.

Now, the object of disinfection is to prevent the extension of infectious diseases by destroying the specific infectious agents—germs—which give rise to them; and this is accomplished by the use of disinfectants. Having, as I hope, made this clear.

Any chemical agent which destroys or masks bad odors is commonly spoken of as a disinfectant, and there are a large number of so called "disinfectants" in the market which are simply deodorants and which are entirely untrustworthy for the destruction of infectious material—that is, material containing living disease germs.

These disease germs belong to the class of low vegetable organisms—microscopic plants—known as bacteria, which as a rule thrive better in the darkness than when exposed to daylight, and some of them are quickly destroyed by exposure to direct sunlight. In experiments made by me in 1893 it was demonstrated that the cholera bacillus is infallibly killed by exposure to direct sunlight for an hour or two, and the distinguished German bacteriologist, Dr. Robert Koch, has shown that the bacillus of consumption—tubercle bacillus—is destroyed by similar exposure in a time varying from a few minutes to several hours, depending upon the thickness of the layer of material in which it is imbedded.

As a result of this it is evident that the material coughed up by patients with consumption and containing tubercle bacilli in vast numbers is far less dangerous to the community in regions where the patient can live out of doors and where the sun shines nearly every day in the year.

Some disease germs which are not killed outright by exposure to the sun's rays are greatly restrained in their development. This is true of the bacillus of typhoid fever. Although it has been shown by carefully conducted experiments that certain disease germs are promptly destroyed by the luminous radiations from the sun, and especially by those at the violet end of the solar spectrum, it is also true that the heat rays play an important part in the destruction of harmful bacteria.

This is partly due to the fact that certain disease germs are quickly destroyed by being deprived of all moisture—by desiccation. Thus the germs of cholera and of pneumonia quickly perish when completely dried.

Other germs, however, as those of typhoid fever, of diphtheria and of consumption, may retain their vitality in a dried condition for several months. But the germs of all these diseases are destroyed by a comparatively low temperature. In experiments which I made several years ago I ascertained that the germs of pneumonia and of cholera were killed by exposure for a few minutes to a temperature of 126 degrees F.

A still lower temperature is effective if the time of exposure is prolonged. It is therefore evident that prolonged exposure to the direct rays of the sun would destroy these germs independently of the disinfecting power or germicidal action of the luminous rays or the fatal results of desiccation.

Other disease germs require a higher temperature for their destruction. The typhoid bacillus and the bacillus of diphtheria are killed by exposure to a temperature of 140 degrees F. for ten minutes. In general, it may be stated that this temperature is fatal to all the most important disease germs.

The facts stated furnish a scientific basis for practical disinfection, and it is evident that when sunshine is available no chemical agents are essential for the destruction of disease germs. Any article of food or drink which has been heated for a few minutes to something near the boiling point of water is absolutely safe, so far as any danger from disease germs is concerned, and any article of clothing which has been put through the ordinary operations of the laundry is as safe as if it had been placed for an hour in an expensive steam disinfector or immersed in a strong disinfecting solution.

It will be seen that scientific investigations fully justify the practice of good housewives, who at frequent intervals expose their blankets and articles of woolen clothing, which cannot be placed in boiling water without injury, to a prolonged sun bath, who scald out milk pans and kitchen utensils and place them in the sun to dry and who open up their sleeping apartments for the admission of sunlight and fresh air.—Surgeon General Sternberg in Youth's Companion.

AMATEUR OARSMEN'S BRIGHT PROSPECTS.

Coming Season Being Busily Prepared For—Pennsylvania's Crews, Big Regatta June 21.

Oarsmen are ambitions folk, and they seldom fail to put on their training clothes early in the season. College and club experts and would be experts have for several weeks been busy placing their craft in order, and, taken as a whole, indications are that the coming summer will be exceptionally interesting.

The colleges are watching the operations of their various crews, endeavoring to get a line on their chances for making creditable records. Yale, Harvard, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin, Cornell, etc., are all enthusiastic regarding the outlook, and while it is certain that some of them are to be disappointed a spirit of hopefulness will do much to ward off disaster.

The University of Pennsylvania will not send a crew to Henley this year. Last year's venture so weakened the varsity eight that Penn's showing in the intercollegiate regatta was far from being satisfactory. The Quakers consequently have arrived at a decision not to renew their assault on the international championship for a few years to come, choosing rather to retain their high position on this side of the water.

Coach Ellis Ward is working hard with the Pennsylvania candidates, and from the hundred men that in January reported for duty on the rowing machines six crews have been chosen. Four varsity and two freshman eights now represent the rowing strength of the university.

From this list of men Coach Ward has the difficult task of developing a varsity eight and four and a freshman eight to compete against the strongest college crews of America.

Pennsylvania's record in aquatics during the last four years has been brilliant. Following three American college championship crews, the red and blue invaded foreign waters and by winning three out of four races proved that rowing as taught by Ellis Ward and practiced by the Quaker oarsmen was a big factor in American college rowing.

With the loss of Stroke John Gardiner, Captain Flickwir and Davenport from last year's crew Penn loses the last of the famous 1897 and 1898 crews, which first brought victory to the red and blue. Crowther of the Henley crew is also among the missing, leaving four places to be filled in the varsity eight.

To fill these places, however, there are a number of experienced men from last year's Poughkeepsie varsity and four oared crews and the champion ship eight.

The members of last year's crew who are trying for the 1902 varsity eight are Captain Ailyn, Zane, Eisenbrey, Will Gardiner and Jackson, substitute on the Henley crew. From the 1901 freshmen eight are Pepper, Cathcart, Shisler, Lea, Cope and Morgan, of the varsity four Shock, Eckfeldt, Henderson and Hildebrand and of the Poughkeepsie varsity Kellar, Sharpe, Gillaspy and Hartung. Besides this list of men who have had experience there is a number of new men who show promise. Among these are Garvin, Brooke, Harris, Whittaker, Williams, Robertson and Van Valkenburg.

The hardest position to fill this year will be that of stroke. So far three men have been tried in this position. Zane has shown up best at No. 8, and many believe that the freshman bow of the Henley crew will be John Gardiner's successor.

The full schedule for Penn's crew is as follows:

April 26.—Varsity and freshmen eights versus Annapolis first and second crews at Annapolis.

May 30.—Junior varsity race between Pennsylvania, Cornell and Columbia, on the national course.

June 21.—Intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Pennsylvania, Cornell, Columbia, Georgetown, Wisconsin and Syracuse varsity eight and four and freshman eight oared race.

CARMACK'S FIRE AT GENERAL FUNSTON.

MISSOURIAN TAKES WHIRL AT SPREAD OF TRUSTS.

Mr. Cochran Says the Combines Contribute to Both Political Parties and Thus Tie Their Hands—His Remedy For Curbing Them.

Washington, April 26.—Two extended speeches occupied the entire attention af the senate yesterday. Mr. McCumber, of North Dakota, discussed his bill to prevent the misbranding and misrepresentation of food products which enter into interstate commerce. Mr. Carmack, of Tennessee, one of the minority members of the Philippine committee, spoke in opposition to the Philippine government bill now pending. He sharply criticised the president, not only for the policy he is pursuing in the Philippines, but for utterances which, the senator declared, tended to fan the flame of insurrection. He also denounced General Funston, whom he characterized as the "jayhawker brigadier from the wind-swept plains—the mightiest Samson that ever wielded the jawbone of an ass as a weapon of war."

The house passed 145 private pension bills, including bills to pension the widow of General William Ludlow at $50 per month and the widow of "Parson" Brownlow, of Tennessee, at $30 per month. The remainder of the day was devoted to general debate on the agricultural appropriation bill.

Mr. Cochran, of Missouri, made a speech on the universal spread of trusts and combines in this country and the necessity for curbing them. The trusts, he said, contributed to both political parties and tied their hands. He warned the American people that no relief could be hoped for until there was a complete divorcement of legislatures and congress from corporation lobbies and influences. The point had been reached, he said, where the attorney general and even a member of the supreme court had been chosen from the employes of great corporations.

The senate committee on Cuba decided to institute an investigation into the charge that the greater part of the present crop of Cuban sugar is held by the sugar trust of this country.

The following fourth-class Pennsylvania postmasters were appointed: Hetherville, Columbia county, John Bribgenberg; Stockdale, Washington county, William Smith.

The senate yesterday confirmed T. J. Davis as postmaster at Barberton, O.

Passover Season Secured Release.

What God Hath Joined Together VERSUS What God Hath Put Asunder

By Rev. MINOT J. SAVAGE of New York

I BELIEVE with my whole soul that what God hath joined together man has no right to put asunder. I believe that in the cases where God has joined them together no man can put asunder, no man ever does or ever can or ever will; BUT I HAVE TOO MUCH RESPECT FOR GOD TO FEEL WILLING TO HOLD HIM RESPONSIBLE FOR ALL THE MARRIAGES THAT HAVE TAKEN PLACE SINCE THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD. I believe we have a right to turn that saying around.

WHERE GOD HAS PUT PEOPLE ASUNDER NO MAN HAS A RIGHT TO FORCE THEM TO STAY TOGETHER.

If the husband and wife have both ceased to love each other and there are no children, they should be permitted to separate. Suppose there are children; suppose husband and wife have lost their love each for the other. If the children's welfare would be subserved by their maintaining a home, then they are under the highest kind of obligation to maintain that home.

I WOULD MAKE DIVORCE DIFFICULT. I would compel people to take at least one year in the process of divorce. They should not be able to get through in one month or three months or six, and perhaps by the time a year was ended they might have had time to think it over and reconsider their intention. I would not allow them to remarry the next day or the next week or the next year. I would have it at least two years, and perhaps three.

There is no place in the world where divorces are so easily obtained as in the United States, and there is no place in the world where women stand so high, where women are granted so many liberties and rights, no place where they are so free to seek the highest and best things, where they are surrounded by so much care, such courtesy, such sympathy, such respect.

THE GREAT CAUSE WHY THERE ARE SO MANY MORE DIVORCES IN THIS COUNTRY THAN ANY OTHER IS THAT HERE, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN HISTORY, WOMEN ARE GRANTED FREEDOM TO THROW OFF A THOUSAND INTOLERABLE BURDENS UNDER WHICH THEY HAVE BEEN BORNE DOWN AND CRUSHED FROM THE BEGINNING OF THE WORLD.

I believe that if a careful investigation were made we should find that a large proportion of the divorces granted in this country means kindliness and consideration toward woman, readiness on the part of the manhood of America to deliver her from crushing burdens, set her free, give her an opportunity to retrieve a so far wasted life.

FAVOR THE VOTING MACHINE.

Matters Acted Upon by Railway Employes' Legislative Board.

Reading, Pa., April 26.—The session yesterday of the state legislative board of railway employes, composed of delegates from various railway organizations and allied bodies, was entirely devoted to executive matters.

At yesterday afternoon's session the action of Senator Quay on the Chinese exclusion law was condemned. The voting machine for all elections in this state was favored. The legislative committee was instructed to act in harmony with the State Federation of Labor and the United Mine Workers in all matters affecting the working people at the next session of the legislature. A number of candidates for the legislature favorable to workingmen were endorsed, and the course of others at the last session condemned. J. N. Weiler, secretary of the board, of Mauch Chunk, was indorsed for senator.

It was agreed to hold an adjourned meeting in Harrisburg next September.

GEN. SMITH ADMITS CHARGES.

Counsel Acknowledges Client Instructed Waller to Kill and Burn.

Manila, April 26.—The trial by court martial of General Jacob H. Smith, on the charge of conduct prejudicial to good order and discipline, began yesterday. General Loyd Wheaton presided. Colonel Charles A. Woodruff, counsel for the defense, said he was willing to admit General Smith gave instructions to Major Waller to kill and burn and make Samar a howling wilderness, that he wanted everybody killed capable of bearing arms, and that he did specify all over 10 years of age, as the Samar boys of that age were equally as dangerous as their elders.

Major Littleton W. T. Waller, marine corps, will be the chief witness for the prosecution.

FAVORS HEARST FOR PRESIDENT

Founder of Justice Party Also Has Kind Words For Roosevelt.

Washington, April 26.—Hon. W. H. Vaughn, founder of the new Justice party which bears his name, said yesterday:

"The party has come to stay. Justice will be our slogan for all men or women, be they white, black, yellow or red. We are not working in the interest of any particular presidential candidate; we are playing no favorites. We shall select as our standard-bearer the man who comes nearest to representing our ideals and the principles enunciated in our platform. Personally, however, I am inclined very much toward William R. Hearst. If the Republicans wish to win votes in the south they cannot do better than to nominate Theodore Roosevelt. He is half southern, and the people like his dauntless courage.

East Indian Idols.

The images of the gods in India are not made by a separate caste, but the carpenters and masons respectively make the large wooden and stone idols set up in the temples, the potters the clay idols consumed in daily worship and the braziers, coppersmiths and goldsmiths the little images in brass, copper, mixed metal and gold and silver that are always kept in private homes. The East Indians regard an alloy of brass with five other metals—gold, silver, iron, tin and lead, making, with the copper and zinc of the brass, a mixture of light metals—as a perfect alloy, and this is highly prized as a material for sacred images.

Palmerston and His Muscles.

Lord Palmerston died at his post two days before he was eighty-one, his faculties undimmed and his physical strength little affected by his advanced age.
